EDITED BY MARVIN MEYER

WITH CONTRIBUTIONS BY
Wolf-Peter Funk, Karen L. King, Jean-Pierre Mahé, Marvin Meyer, Elaine H. Pagels, Birger A. Pearson, Paul-Hubert Poirier, Michel Roberge, James M. Robinson, Madeleine Scopello, Einar Thomassen, and John D. Turner

BASED ON THE WORK OF
the Berliner Arbeitskreis für koptisch-gnostische Schriften, the Bibliothèque copte de Nag Hammadi, Université Laval, and the Coptic Gnostic Library Project, Institute for Antiquity and Christianity, Claremont Graduate University

ADVISORY BOARD
Wolf-Peter Funk
Paul-Hubert Poirier
James M. Robinson

THE NAG HAMMADI SCRIPTURES

THE INTERNATIONAL EDITION

HarperOne
A Division of HarperCollinsPublishers
To

HANS-MARTIN SCHENKE
1929–2002

Esteemed colleague, dear friend,

Coptologist extraordinaire
Standard sigla are used in the present volume, though we have tried to keep sigla to a minimum for the sake of ease of reading. Within the English translations, the following signs are employed:

[ ] Square brackets indicate a textual lacuna that has been restored. When the restoration entails only “a,” “an,” “the,” or “and,” such a minor restoration is usually not placed within square brackets. Ordinarily words are placed either entirely inside or outside square brackets. Exceptions to this policy are made in more fragmentary texts, in which portions of words may be placed inside square brackets.

< > Angle brackets indicate an emendation of a scribal omission or error.

{} Braces indicate superfluous letters that presumably were added by a scribe. Some such instances are indicated in the translation. Instances of ditography (the inadvertent copying of a passage twice) are usually indicated in a note.

Ellipsis dots indicate unrestored lacunae—portions of Coptic (or Greek) text missing in the manuscripts that cannot be restored with confidence. Three dots indicate a lacuna of a Coptic line or less, that is, a short break in the flow of thought in the text. Six dots indicate a lacuna of more than a single Coptic line, that is, a major break in the flow of thought in the text. Ordinarily the extent of the longer lacuna is indicated in a note accompanying the translation. Occasionally the number of dots within a proper name indicates the number of letters missing in the name.

Within the translations, Coptic manuscript page numbers are provided for the sake of reference. In the case of the Gospel of Thomas, traditional sayings numbers are given, along with numbers for subdivisions of sayings. 26 In the case of the Sentences of Sextus, the system of numeration follows the standard edition of this tractate, which was composed in Greek and is known in Latin, Syriac, Armenian, and Georgian versions. 27 As in Nag Hammadi Deutsch, here also only Coptic page numbers are given, and not line numbers from the manuscripts. The Nag Hammadi Scriptures is not presented as an edition of Coptic manuscripts but a publication of texts in English translation, and for this reason the continuation of the use of references based upon line numbers in Coptic manuscripts seems inappropriate. Thus, in the notes to the translations, the cross-references to texts in the Nag Hammadi library, the Berlin Gnostic Codex, and Codex Tchacos are given with the titles of the texts and Coptic page numbers (or the other systems of numeration); when a particular text is preserved in more than one copy (as is the case, e.g., with the Secret Book of John), the codex number is also provided. Within the introductions to the tractates, however, the textual references include, in addition to the Coptic page numbers, the manuscript line numbers as well, in case readers wish to refer directly to the Coptic manuscripts and the location of Coptic lines in the manuscripts.

Accompanying the translations in the present volume are several aids to interpretation. In addition to the volume introduction, each text is prefaced with its own introduction, which includes bibliographical suggestions for further reading and study. In the translations there are subheadings that are not in the texts themselves but have been provided by the translators as a way of indicating sections of the texts. The subheadings include references to Coptic page and line numbers in order to allow for another way of moving from the English translations to the Coptic manuscripts. Notes explain difficult passages and refer to parallel passages. In some cases, as with the Platonizing Sethian texts, the notes are somewhat more substantial, to help in the understanding of texts that may benefit from a fuller presentation. An epilogue, “Schools of Thought in the Nag Hammadi Scriptures,” discusses Thomas Christianity, the Sethian and Valentinian schools of Gnostic thought, and Hermetic religion within the context of the questions surrounding the term “Gnostic,” and a table of tractates provides an overview of the contents of the Nag Hammadi library, the Berlin Gnostic Codex, and Codex Tchacos. A bibliography and an index of proper names conclude the volume.

In The Nag Hammadi Scriptures we present a series of English translations prepared and introduced by scholars with different backgrounds and different points of view. Although we have attempted to achieve a degree of stylistic uniformity throughout the volume, some variety inevitably remains, and several voices can be detected in the introductions and translations. We consider such variety to be appropriate in a collection of texts as diverse as the Nag Hammadi library, the Berlin Gnostic Codex, and Codex Tchacos. It is our hope that in reading and studying this diverse collection of religious tractates, readers may join us in a process of seeking and finding, and that for those who explore these texts, in all their diversity, new light may be shed on the world of antiquity—and modernity. As one text in the Nag Hammadi collection, the Gospel of Thomas, puts it, “Know what is in front of your face, and what is hidden from you will be disclosed to you. For there is nothing hidden that will not be revealed.”

26. The tradition of dividing the Gospel of Thomas into 114 sayings is flawed, but it has become a nearly universal convention. The use of numbers for subdivisions of the sayings reflects an increasingly common means of reference.

27. See Henry Chadwick, The Sentences of Sextus. the whole place... the enemies. He baptized himself, and the... He became divine, and flew [up], and they did not grasp him... the [enemies]... since it was not possible [for them to] bring him down again.

If any... grasp him [in] ignorance, attending to those who teach in the corners with clever props and artful tricks, they will not be able.......

Marsanes

Introduced and Translated by John D. Turner

Marsanes is a fourth-century Coptic translation of an originally Greek revelation discourse produced in the late third or early fourth century. Based on the labors of the original editor, Birger A. Pearson, it is generally accepted that Codex X contained only one treatise, Marsanes. It is badly damaged, and only a few blocks of continuous text survive on pages 1–10, whose numeration is certain, and on pages 13–22, 25–46, 55–58, and 61–68, with uncertain numeration; the other pages are either lost or survive in small fragments. Even the title
"[M]arsanes" hardly survives. The text is written in what was formerly called Subachmimic (presently named L6) Coptic as a somewhat unclear translation of an original Greek treatise, whose traces remain in many Greek words and in the discourse on the phonetic properties of the Greek alphabet in the long section occu-

Marsanes is a first-person revelation dialogue written to establish the authority of its putative author and central character, the prophet-mystic Marsanes—who seems to be of Syrian origin—as the inspired leader and teacher of a small group of relatively well indoctrinated Sethian Gnostics. In his account of a group of Sethian-like sectarians he calls the “Archontics,” Epiphanius mentions among their honored prophets “a certain Martiades and Marsianos, who had been snatched up into the heavens and had come down after three days” (Panarion 40.7.6), and chapter 7 of the untitled text of the Bruce Codex tells us that “the powers of all the great aeons worshiped the power which is in Marsanes” Birger Pearson therefore concludes that “Marsanes” and “Marsianos” are almost certainly one and the same figure.

In addition to the figure of Marsanes, there are other interlocutors, mostly of a divine sort, such as Gamaliel in 64.19; an otherwise unidentified revealer, “the blessed Authority,” in 20.16; and even the Aeon of Barbelo itself in 10.12–29.
There is also the putative audience of the treatise, referred to at various points in

162. Lit., “carved things.” 163. One whole folio is missing from the end of the codex. The tractate ended either on p. 75 or on p. 76.
Marsanes’ discourse by both the singular and plural second-person form of address, which presuppose a small community of Marsanes’ disciples who have already received basic teaching about the structure and deployment of the transcendent realm typical of Sethian treatises like the Three Stoles of Seth, Zostrianos, and Allogenés the Stranger as well as basic teaching concerning the powers and configurations of the zodiacal signs. This suggests a Sethian community that thrives on speculations about theurgic ritual, popular astrology and arithmology, the properties of language and the nature of relationships of the soul, and the nature and origin of the intelligible and sensible worlds.

Probably the latest of the four Platonizing Sethian treatises (along with Zostrianos, the Three Stoles of Seth, and Allogenés the Stranger), Marsanes effected a rapprochement of traditions at home in Gnostic Sethianism with contemporary Greek grammatical theory and Middle Platonist/Neoplatonist metaphysics and epistemology as a means of expounding the true nature of the Sethian divine and cosmic hierarchy and assuring its recipients of their ultimate salvation. The author composed this treatise on the basis of both personal experience and mythologema drawn from the theogonical, metaphysical, and ritual doctrine most evident in two Sethian treatises that in all probability were already at hand—Zostrianos and Allogenés—summarizing this in such a way as to claim that he or she has experienced the full measure and truth of this doctrine, and on this basis to advance beyond those treatises by propounding doctrine on subjects not treated in them. The initial enumeration of thirteen seals or levels of being extending from the earthly to the highest divine realms are given merely for the benefit of an audience already schooled in it; they are roughly the same as those mentioned in Zostrianos (and to a lesser extent in Allogenés). The highest of these levels are the object of a visionary ascent that the main speaker, presumably Marsanes, has just undergone (5,17–26). The following chart gives a visual impression of the relationships among these levels of reality and their inhabitants:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Seal</th>
<th>The First (corporeal; the physical, material realm)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Seal 2</td>
<td>The Second (corporeal; the sublunar realm)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seal 3</td>
<td>The Third (noncorporeal but sensible; the planetary spheres?)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

All scholars who have had occasion to comment on Marsanes in relation to other Sethian literature have called attention to its unique postulation of a new supreme principle, the Unknown Silent One, which transcends the Invisible Spirit, who is otherwise the supreme principle of all the other Sethian treatises. This modification of Sethian theology is parallel to a similar phenomenon that occurs in Iamblichus (cf. Damascius On First Principles 1.21.11–14: 25.21–22) and his disciple Theodore of Asine (Proclus Commentary on Plato’s Timaeus 2.274.10–20), who placed an ineffable One absolutely unrelated to anything else at the summit of all reality—including Plotinus’s supreme One, which was at least “present to” subsequent reality. Of course, at least in the case of Marsanes and Theodore, this supreme One nevertheless has some relation to its inferiors, since for Theodore, the “second One” was the aspiration (“breathing”), self-contact, and intelligibility of the first One, and for Marsanes, the Invisible Spirit (which “has no breath,” 15.1–4: 15.29–16.2) seems to share both the silence and the activity of the Unknown Silent One. On these grounds as well as the presence of the prophet’s name in the Bruce Codex, one might date Marsanes to the late third or early fourth century, contemporary with Iamblichus and Theodore.

In the course of his visionary ascent, it seems that Marsanes, like Zostrianos, had posed various questions concerning the nature of the beings to which he contemplatively assimilates himself, such as Barbelo (4.24–10.29, especially 10.7–12), the Triple-Powered One (14.15–16.2), probably the Invisible Spirit, and the supreme Silent One (16.3–16). As in the Three Stoles of Seth, the community’s experience replicates that of the visionary (8.2–4): “Those that are within me were completed together with all the rest.” As in Allogenés the Stranger, true insight is achieved in a cognitively vacant knowledge (8.16–25): “I would contemplate a power that I hold in honor. When the third power (the Barbelo Aeon) of the Triple-Powered One contemplated him, it said to me, ‘Be silent, lest you should know and flee and come before me. But know that this One was [silent], and concentrate on understanding.’”

Even though Marsanes considers ultimate enlightenment to result from a visionary ascent to the highest realm, in 3.25–4.2 and 5.17–6.16 it mentions a saving descent of Autogenes through the instrumentality of Sophia into the lower world. Although this descent seems unrelated to the triple descents of Barbelo or other Sethian treatises, it seems to function here as a prototypical anticipation of Marsanes’ own function as a salvific prophet who ascends to the transcendent realm and descends to reveal what he has experienced there.

Marsanes contains traces of the Sethian baptismal rite. The terms “seal” (sphragis, 2.12–13: 34.28: 66.4; sphragizein, 66.3), “washing” (55.20), and “cleanse” (66.1) may suggest a connection between baptism and visionary ascent.
similar to that found in Zostrianos. Pages 64–66 seem to narrate Marsanes’s vision of certain angels, which include the traditional Sethian “minister” or “receiver” Camaliel, who is over the spirit(s), just as he captures baptismal participants into heaven in Three Forms of First Thought (48.26–30) and Melchizedek (5.17–20), he “takes” Marsanes to see an ever-flowing fountain of “living” water, a “cleansing,” and an adornment with a “celestial” seal.

Only the first twenty of Marsanes’s sixty-eight extant pages delve into the transcendental metaphysics and epistemology expounded in Zostrianos and Allogenes the Stranger and presupposed in the Three Steles of Seth; the remainder seems the most part dedicated to astral phenomena (the zodiac, stars, planets, and their powers), the configurations of the soul, the nomenclature for the gods and angels, and the judgment of souls. There are references to the use of waxen images and emerald stones (36.1–6) and extensive discussion of the theory of the letters of the Greek alphabet and their combinations (pp. 25–33), based on the speculative theories in the manuals on phonetics and grammar found in Dionysius Thrax and his commentators, as well as of arithmology (pp. 33–34), which seem to illustrate the construction of the cosmic soul and the incorporation of souls into human bodies in the psychogonia of Plato’s Timaeus 35a–44d.

Among the Sethian treatises, discussion of the cosmic soul occurs elsewhere only in Zostrianos (31.2–11). The ability to classify the various configurations or states of the soul—both cosmic and individual, both disembodied and embodied—is related to the need for careful observation of the planets, stars, and zodiacal signs, characterized by qualities similar to those (shapes) of the soul and of the letters of the alphabet, and so on. The letters of the Greek alphabet symbolize not only the “configurations” of the soul, but also the celestial, angelic powers and the elementary constituents of the sensible world. Vowels and consonants are evaluated in terms of their stability (and thus superiority) both independently and in various combinations (prefixied and suffixed). In particular, the relations between the five spherical configurations of the soul and certain combinations of the seven vowels and the emphasis on similarity and difference suggest that these speculations are somehow based on the psychogony in Plato’s Timaeus (35a–36d).

This theurgical material, which is reminiscent of the second-century teachings of Marcus the Magician (Irenaeus Against Heresies 1.21) and more distantly of Iamblichus’s disciple Theodore of Asine in the early fourth century, focuses on the nature of the soul, both individual and cosmic, the nature of the astral powers that affect the soul, and the means by which the Sethian adept might manipulate these powers to his or her advantage by utilizing the appropriate nomenclature for these realities. Although previous treatises like the Three Steles of Seth, Zostrianos, and Allogenes the Stranger had concentrated on theology or the metaphysics of the highest principles and intelligible realities and the means of knowing these, Marsanes—even though it offers its own equally abstruse metaphysics—now offers a Sethian Gnostic physics and psychology based on astrology, theurgical technique, and a theory of language. In this sense, Marsanes offers a specific—therapeutic—theory of natural language according to which the linguistic articulation of human thinking and contemplation facilitates or en-

BIBLIOGRAPHY
Marsanes

Exordium: The Steadfastness and Confidence of the Recipients of the Revelation (1,1–2,11)

...[material]... and a [power]. They found him with a pure heart without their being afflicted by evils. Those who have received you will be given a choice reward for their endurance, and [they will] endure the evils.

[But] let none of us be distressed and think [in] his heart that the supreme Father [is aloof], for he looks upon the All and takes care of them all. And [he has shown them his command] since it is [they] who speak ...[2]

Marsanes’ Vision of the Nature, Structure, and Deployment of the All (2,12–18,14)

...[the things I said] at first.

The Thirteen Seals (2,12–4,24)

Word of Confirmation (2,12–16)

But as for the thirteenth seal, I have confirmed it together with the limit of knowledge and the certainty of rest.

Seals 1–3: The Worldly Corporeal and Material Levels (2,16–26)

The first [and the] second and the [third] are for the worldly and the material realms. I have informed you about these, that you should [guard] your bodies. And a perceptible [power] will [conceal] those who will be at rest, and they will be kept [from the] passions and division of the union.

2. First nine lines missing. 3. Probably the supreme deity, the Father. 4. Last line missing. 5. First ten lines missing. 6. Gnosis, here and below. 7. Or “foundation.” Coptic tareb. 8. These perceptible powers would probably be the “glories” (described in Zostrianos 46–47), spiritual powers that manifest themselves in the sensible world. In Allogenes the Stranger 45 and 50, Youel identifies the power granted to Allogenes as Mind. 9. Either the incarnational union of body and soul or the sexual union of male and female.

Seals 4–5: The Incorporeal Sojourn and Repentance (2,26–3,14)

The fourth [and the] fifth above it [are the ones] you have come to know as divine. The fourth, concerns what [3] exists above[11] the [corporeal type] and nature that [is divided in] three. You [were informed] about [these and the] three-dimensional realm by these [two].[12] You [were told that it] is incorporeal ...and after ...within ...every ...) and the things within them.

Seal 5: Repentance (3,14–18)

The [fifth concerns the] repentance of those within [it] and those who sojourn in that place.[13]

Seal 6: The Self-Generated Ones (3,18–25)

The sixth concerns the self-generated ones, the incorporeal being that exists individually, together with those who abide in the truth of the All [with] understanding and stability.

Seal 7: Autogenes, the Self-Generated One (3,25–4,2)

The [seventh] concerns the self-generated power, the third [perfect Mind, the second one] who extended to [4] the [fourth] for salvation [through] Sophia.[17]

Seal 8: Protophanes, the First-Appearing One (4,2–7)

Seal 9: Kalyptos, the Hidden One (4,7–10)

The ninth [concerns the name of the power [that] appeared [in the beginning].[19]

Seal 10: The Aeon of Barbelo (4,10–12)

The tenth [concerns Barbelo, the] virgin [who is male] — that is, the Aeon.

10. In Zostrianos, the fourth and fifth “seals” would be Sojourn and Repentance, temporary locations for disincarnate souls awaiting either reincarnation or final enlightenment. 11. Or “according to.” 12. These two are probably the fourth (Sojourn) and the fifth (Repentance) “seals.” 13. Probably the fourth “seal,” Sojourn. 14. Such individually existing incorporeal beings are the “perfect individuals,” probably located in the Self-Generated Aeons. According to Zostrianos 29, these souls alone have “self-generated power and eternal life.” 15. The Self-Generated One (Autogenes) would be the “second Mind” after and immediately below the “first Mind,” Protophanes, and is also the second one (after the Barbelo Aeon) to extend itself downward in order to save souls in the lower world of the first three “seals.” In Neoplatonic thought, the Self-Generated One would play the role of Plato’s demiurge. For Neoplatonists, the transcendent deities do not themselves descend into the lower world, so the Self-Generated One here acts through the instrumentality of Sophia, the divine wisdom located at the lower boundary of the divine world. 16. The fourth seal,” the Sojourn. 17. Wisdom. 18. “That which appeared in the beginning” translates Greek protophanes, Protophanes or “First-Appearing One,” a divine, masculine intellect containing distinct intelligences and souls unified with their objects of contemplation. 19. This level corresponds to the Kalyptos (“Hidden One”) Aeon of Zostrianos and Allogenes, the highest realm within the Barbelo Aeon, and contains the universal ideas or paradigms of Platonic metaphysics. 20. The Barbelo Aeon as the universal intellect comprises the highest realm of pure, determinate being.
Seals 11–12: The Triple-Powered One and the Invisible Spirit (4.13–19)

[The eleventh] and [the twelfth] speak of the Invisible One who possesses three powers21 and the insubstantial Spirit22 who belongs to the first Ungenerated One.23

Seal 13: The Unknown Silent One (4.19–24)

The thirteenth speaks concerning [the Unknown] Silent One, even the foundation of the indistinguishable One.24

Marsanes’ Insight into the Nature of Incorporeal and Corporeal Reality (4.25–6.1)

For it is I who have [contemplated] which truly exists. [Whether] individually or [as a whole], by discrimination [I knew] that they [pre]exist [in the] entire place25 that is [g] eternal; namely: all those that have come into existence whether with or without substance; those who are ungenerated; and the divine aeons together with the angels and the souls without guile, and the soul-garments, the images of the simple ones;26 And [afterward they] were mixed with [those27 that were distinct from] them. But [even the] entire perceptible substance still resembles the [substance that is intelligible] and insubstantial. [I have known] the entire corruption [of the former] as well as the immortality of the latter.28

I have discriminated and have attained the boundary between the partial, sense-perceptible world and the entire realm of the incorporeal essence. And the intelligible world knew by discrimination that in every respect the sense-perceptible world is [worthy of being preserved entire,30 [for] I have not ceased speaking [of] Autogenes, [lest anyone be] ignorant [6] in turn of the entire place.31

The Saving Descent of Autogenes, the Self-Generated One (6.2–16)

He22 descended; again he descended from the Unbegotten One who is insubstantial, who is the Spirit. The one who exists before them all33 extends [to the] divine self-generated ones. The one who is [substantial] examines [the All]34 and is [the All and] resembles [the All]. And from [the single one] they are divided, [so that] I experienced many things, it being clear that he saved a multitude.

Marsanes Inquires About the Aeonic Realm of the Triple-Powered One (6.17–29)

But beyond all of these, I am seeking the kingdom of the Triple-Powered One, which has no beginning. Whence did he appear and act to fill the entire place35 with his power? In what way did the ungenerated ones come into existence without being generated? What are the differences among the [aeons] And how many ungenerated ones [are there]? In what respect [do they differ] from each other?36 [7]

The Triple-Powered One Actualizes the Silence of the Unknown Silent One (7.1–29)

When? I had inquired about these things, I perceived that he acted from silence. He exists prior to those that truly exist, that belong to the realm of Being. He is a preexistent otherness belonging to the one that actualizes the Silent One. And the silence of [the one who follows] him acts. For [so long as] the latter [acts], the former [acts also]. The silence that belongs to the Unbegotten One [is from] the beginning he is in [substantial]. But the activity of that one is the Triple-Powered One. The Unbegotten One38 is prior to the Aeon, since he is in [substantial].

32. The subject ("he, "the one, "the one who is substantial") throughout this paragraph is probably the Self-Generated One. 33. "Them all" probably refers to those "below" the realms of the Barbelo Aeon. 34. The Barbelo Aeon, 35. The aeonic realm. 36. Cf. such questions with those of Zostrianos (e.g., 2–3: 7–8). 37. The probable antecedents of the pronominal subjects and objects of this complex passage may be as follows: "When I had inquired about these things, I perceived that the Triple-Powered One acted from silence. He exists prior to those that truly exist, that belong to the realm of Being. The Triple-Powered One is a preexistent otherness belonging to the Invisible Spirit that actualizes the Silent One. And the silence of the Triple-Powered One who follows the Invisible Spirit acts. For [so long as] the Invisible Spirit [acts], the Triple-Powered One [acts also]. The silence that belongs to the Unbegotten Invisible Spirit is among [the aeons, and from] the beginning he is in [substantial]. But the activity of the Invisible Spirit is prior to the Aeon of Barbelo, since he is in [substantial]. Now as for the summit of the Silent One’s silence it is possible <for> the Invisible Spirit, the summit of the Triple-Powered One’s activity, to behold it. And the Unknown Silent One who exists, who is silent, who is beyond [insubstantiality], manifested [the Triple-Powered, final] perfect one." 38. Possibly “the Unbegotten One” is an apposite attribute of the Triple-Powered One rather than an epithet for the Invisible Spirit, in Zostrianos and sometimes in Allegories, the two are sometimes indistinguishable.
Now as for the summit of the Silent One’s silence: it is possible <for> the summit of the ‘Triple-Powered One’s activity <to> behold it. And the One who exists, who is silent, [who is] beyond [insubstantiality], manifested [the Triple-Powered, first] perfect One.

The Self-Manifestation of the Triple-Powered One (7,29–8,18)

[When he appeared] [8] to the powers, they rejoiced. Those that are within me were completed together with all the rest. And one by one they all blessed the Triple-Powered One, who is the First-Perfect One, [blessing] him in purity, [every]where praising the Lord [who exists] before the All, [who is the] Triple-Powered One. [It did not happen that] their laudations [were audible], but [it was my part] to keep on inquiring] how they had become silent. I would contemplate a power that I hold in honor.

The Barbelo Aeon Reveals Itself as the Triple-Powered One’s Third Power (8,18–29)

When the third power42 of the Triple-Powered One contemplated him, it said to me,44 “Be silent, lest you should know and flee and come before me. But know that this One was [silent], and concentrate on understanding. For [the power still] keeps [guiding] me into [the Aeon that] is Barbelo, the male [virgin].” [9]

Marsanes Explains the Barbelo Aeon’s Deployment from the Invisible Spirit (9,1–21)

For this reason the virgin became male,45 because she had separated from the male.46 The knowledge stood outside of him, as if belonging to him. And she who exists <is>47 she who sought. She is situated just as the Triple-Powered One is situated. She withdrew from [these] two [powers],48 since she exists [outside of] the great one,49 [seeing what is] above [her, the perfect one50] who is silent, [who has] this [commandment] to be silent. His knowledge and his existence and his activity51 are those things that the power52 of the Triple-Powered One expressed:

The Barbelo Aeon Describes the Praise of the Triple-Powered One (9,21–29)

“We all have withdrawn to ourselves. We have [become] silent, and when we [too] came to know [that he is] the Triple-Powered One, [we bowed down; we glorified and] blessed him. [He conferred] upon us [a great revelation].”

[Again]53 the Invisible [Spirit] [10] hastened to his place. The entire place54 was revealed, the entire place unfolded <until> he reached the upper region. Again55 he went forth and caused the entire place to be illuminated, and the entire place was illuminated.

Marsanes Receives the Power of the Barbelo Aeon (9,29–10,12)

And [I] was given the third part of [the spirit] of the power56 of the Triple-Powered One! Blessed is [the Aeon]!57 It58 said:

Through Marsanes the Barbelo Aeon Urges the Ascent toward the Invisible Spirit (10,12–14,15)

“O [inhabitants of these] places!59 It is necessary [for you to contemplate] those that are higher than these60 and tell them to the powers. For you will become [better] than the elect [in the last] times. Upward mounts the Invisible Spirit! And you [yourselves], ascend [upward] with him, since you have the great

40. Or perhaps "the exalted energy of the Silent One can be beheld by the exalted energy of the Triple-Powered One" (so Wolf-Peter Funk).
41. Cf. the mutilated text of the Bruce Codex 7: "The powers of all the great aeons worshiped the power which is in Marsanes. They said, 'Who is this who has seen these things in his very presence, that on his account he (Monogenes) appeared in this way?' Nicotheos also spoke of him (Monogenes) and saw that he is that One. He said, 'The Father who surpasses every perfect being, and has revealed the invisible perfect Trinity Power.' Each of the perfect men saw him and spoke of him, giving him glory, each according to his own manner." See also chap. 8. "And the triple-powered one came down to the places of the Antegenos. And they saw the grace of the aeons of the light which was granted to them. They rejoiced because he who exists came forth among them." 41. Funk takes 8,33–48 as the beginning of the following section: "But 1 (Marsanes) continued to inquire] how they (the silent ones) had become silent. I was in the process of contemplating a power that I held in honor: the third power of the 'Triple-Powered.' When  contemplated it, it said to me. . . . Here the first-person pronoun is taken as referring to the Barbelo Aeon. 42. The third power of the Triple-Powered One would be the Barbelo Aeon. 43. Probably the Triple-Powered One as the entire ensemble of his three powers. 44. Marsanes. 45. The Aeon of Barbelo emanates from the apparently masculine Invisible Spirit as an indeterminate and therefore feminine power (Greek dunamis), which finally becomes instantiated as a determinate (and therefore masculine) divine intellect (Greek nous), the masculine Aeon of Barbelo. 46. The Invisible Spirit.

47. The manuscript reads de, "but," for probable pe. Funk translates: "But the existing one, the one who sought, possesses also the 'Triple-Powered,' with the implication that Barbelo is also triple-powered. 48. The first two powers of the Triple-Powered One, perhaps existence and activity. 49. The Invisible Spirit. 50. The Triple-Powered One. 51. Probably the "existence" (hupostasia), the "activity" (energeia), and the "knowledge" (gnosis) as the Triple-Powered One's three powers are the equivalent of the "Existence," "Vitality," and "Mental Self-Knowledge" triad in Zostrianos, Allogenes, and the Three Stichoi of Seth. 52. Barbelo. 53. Although palm here might have the connotative sense of "on the other hand" rather than repetition, it is more likely a mistranslation of palin-dromein, "run back again"—i.e., "the Invisible Spirit returned to his place." 54. The aecicm realm. 55. Perhaps merely "the Invisible Spirit returned to his place." 56. Knowledge, Marsanes' name for the third power of the Triple-Powered One, probably identical with the Barbelo Aeon. 57. The Aeon of Barbelo, whose "blessedness," as in Zostrianos and Allogenes, is equivalent to "self-knowledge," which is the third of the Triple-Powered One's powers that Marsanes has also received. 58. The Barbelo Aeon, now speaking to the lower realm through Marsanes. 59. "These places" would be the physical, sensible world. Funk supposes the test to have omitted Barbelo's direct address: "O <Marsanes, tarry not among> those who inhabit these places." 60. "These" would be the contents of the Barbelo Aeon.
[radiant] crown. But on that day you will see [as you hasten to] ascend above [with him]. And [even] the sense-perceptible [things that are] visible to you . . . and they . . . . . 13. . . . 62 the intellection. He exists eternally without substance in the One Who Is, who is silent, the One who is from the beginning, who is with(out) substance . . . part of . . . indivisible. . . . consider a . . . [ninth] . . . for [14] . . . 64

Marsanes’ Ascent to the Triple-Powered One (14,15–16,3)

I [was dwelling] among the aeons that were generated. As I was permitted, I came to be among those that were un[begotten]. But I was dwelling in the [great] Aeon, although I [was separate from it]. And I [saw the] three powers of [the] Triple-Powered One. The [first] power . . . and . . . 15 the Silent One and the Triple-Powered One, [and the] One that does not have breath.68

We took our stand . . . we [contemplated] . . . 69 we entered . . . breath . . . [the Spirit that] does not have breath, [and he] exists in [unknowability].

Marsanes Sees the Supreme Deity (16,3–18,14)

And [through him] I saw the great [unknowable power] . . . the one without limit . . . and [I saw the one who exists] alone . . . 17 active? And why is there no knowledge [among the] ignorant? And . . . he runs the risk . . . that he become . . . 74 and . . . on account of . . . in . . . those that are dis[similar].

But it is necessary that [that everyone who] is without image [be like] those of the [single] one [that] exists before [them all]. The thought that pre[exists] . . . the

61. For the crown, see Three Stoles of Seth 100; Holy Book of the Great Invisible Spirit 41; and the figure of the glorious Esebehch, child and crown of the Triple-Male Child/Thrice-Great Christ’s glory (IV, 59, 17, 49–50: 57–54: 55–60: 61–62), Zosimus 56–58; and frequently in the uninitiated text of the Bruce Codex. 62. Pp. 11–12 are missing; top fourteen lines missing from p. 15. 63. L. et al., at the third of the Triple-Powered One’s powers, the Invisible Spirit prefiguratively exists also in the Unknown Silent One, which may coincide with its first power. 64. The last three lines of p. 15 and the first fourteen lines of p. 14 are missing. 65. The Aeon of Barbelo. 66. Restoring Copetic khef, “first” power, the Unknown Silent One, or possibly Isme, “third” power, the Barbelo Aeon. 67. Last three lines missing. 68. The Invisible Spirit. Concerning the breathlessness, see also Marsanes 15–16 of the Invisible Spirit subject to the Unknown Silent One, Proclus (Commentary on the Timaeus 277a, 18–25) claims that Theodore of Aine (early fourth century) posited two highest ones, a first One, who—like Marsanes’ Unknown Silent One—is ineffable and uncoordinated with anything below it, and a second, intelligible (nothion) One (Greek hēn), who is the aspired breath of the inappraisable ineffability of the first One and defines an intelligible triad represented by the Greek word hēn, probably conceived as a primal monad, dyad, and triad, consisting of its “elements” or letters: (1) an unpronounceable aspiration (h) represented in characters by a dimensionless point (in later Greek writing, a rough breathing mark); (2) a pronounceable vowel (ε), whose one-dimensional outer arc symbolizes its own reversion upon itself (cf. Plato Parmenides 146e–149d); and (3) a final consonant (ν) symbolizing its intelligibility (nothion) by means of the intersecting lines of the N that define a two-dimensional tradi c surface. 69. Lines 6–12 missing. 70. Restoring “breath” (pneuma) or perhaps “intelligible” (pneumatikos). Lines 15–18 are missing. 71. Probably the Invisible Spirit. 72. Probably the supreme Unknown Silent One. Lines 6–11 missing. 73. Lines 15–20 missing. 74. Lines 13–14 missing. 75. Four lines missing.

67. This suggests that Marsanes’ vision culminated on his sixty-third year (nine times seven), the most critical climacteric stage (klimakterē) in a man’s life, here experienced as a single eternal day; see Augustine Bœche de Loë, L’Astrologie grecque, 526–31, esp. 531, n. 2. Ages forty-nine through eighty-nine (of which 40% were divisible by nine (symbolizing the soul) and 7 or even 7 (symbolizing the body) were considered either most vulnerable or most auspicious. Lines 3–10 are uninterpretable and 11–12 are missing. 78. Pearson restores “Father”, also possible are “Spirit” or “Aeon” (Punk). 79. On p. 18, lines 25–26 are uninterpretable; 27–29 are missing. On p. 19, the first two lines are missing. 80. Marsanes 19, 14–18 might be restored: “It is necessary that a deity [transfer them] from [those who observe the things that act in them] into [actuality].” 81. Greek hypostasis, in the sense of actual “status” or “reality.”

The Need to Know the Nomenclature of the Cosmic Powers and of the Soul (18,14–20,16)

And [again after] many [years, as for me], when I saw the [Father, 78 I came to] know him, and . . . many . . . partial . . . forever . . . the material ones . . . worldly . . . above . . . in addition [19] . . . 79 a deity . . . from . . . the things that . . . them into . . . 80 Name [them according] to their nomenclature, [and let no] one [think that you are] inferior to [their knowledge] and their [reality]. 81 And [in addition, so that] [20] . . . 82 hidden . . . the third [power].

The Blessed Authority’s Instructions on Preparing the Soul (20,16–29?)

And the blessed Authority said [to me], “Among these [may] she who [does not have it receive no glory]. For there is no glory . . . nor even the one who . . . For indeed the one [without glory] is a . . . For . . . 83 21

The Configurations and Powers of the Zodiacal Signs (21,17–25,21)

84 and the [zoionic signs] . . . and the . . . and . . . which do not have . . . acquire for . . . revolution . . . And . . . soul . . . this . . . namely, the celestial soul . . . [surrounds] . . . 85 configuration . . . which is [22] . . . 86 spiritual . . . And those that [have likeness] . . . those who . . . the form . . . all the images [of which I spoke]. It is necessary that [all] the forms [become] configurations, so that a form may be assigned to [the elements themselves, including (the smooth) and the rough, 88 like the voices] of animals . . . and the . . . 89 25. They are the . . .
powers, which are the angels, are in the form of beasts and animals. Some among them are [polymorphous] and contrary to [nature]; they have [sounds] adapted to their names, that [is], they are [distinct] and [different] in [appearance] and [they are bi-formed]. But these that are [homophonic] by a third originate from substance. And concerning these, all of these remarks are sufficient, since we have already spoken about them. For [this] distribution takes place also in these regions in [the manner] we have mentioned from the [beginning].

The Alphabet and the Configurations of the Soul
(25,21–39,17)

The Soul and Its Configuration (25,21–22)

However, the soul too [has] its configuration, although it is diverse. It is [in its] form that the configuration of the only-begotten soul resides.

Vowels and Diphthongs: The First and Second Configurations of the Soul (25,22–26,17)

Its configuration is [the second] [26] spherical part—ΕΕΙΟΥ—while the first goes around [it]. The self-begotten soul—ΑΕΕΙΟΥ.

[The] second configuration—ΕΕΙΟΥ—derives from those [having] two sounds. The first that suffices them is [the upsilon], and [the iota is its companion. And these are the ones you know] in [the radiance] of the light. [Control] yourselves, receive the imperishable seed, bear fruit, and do not be attached to your possessions.

Tones and Accents (26,18–27)

But know that the long vowels exist among the vowels and the diphthongs beside them. But the [short] are deficient, as well as the [other sounds that originate through them. And those that are drawn] are intermediate.

90. The powers of the twelve signs (often animals) of the zodiac. 91. Perhaps the doubling of zodiacal signs by position or appearance (conjoined like Gemini, disjoint like Pisces, or composite of distinct parts like Sagittarius and Capricorn; Bouché-Leclercq, L’Astrologie Grecque, 151–52) or mere numerical doubling, e.g., of the twelve zodiacal signs into the twenty-four letters of the Greek alphabet (Funk). 92. Homophony and the interval of the third suggest some theory of the harmony of the spheres (Poutrier, referring to the dream of Scipio in Cicero Republic 6.8). 93. I.e., here on earth. 94. Lit., “follows it” (in a circle outside it). 95. The diphthongs. 96. The text reads ἄναψες, “those that are elevated,” possibly meaning the oxytonoi, words with stress on the final syllable, but more likely designating the long vowels ə and ə as opposed to the short ones e and o. 97. The text reads ἄρχης, “short,” which may mean either “short vowels” or barytonoi, words with stress on the next-to-last syllable. 98. Or “weak,” “worse.” 99. Reading [άρχιμ], “drawn out,” possibly rendering Greek περιφέρεια, vowels bearing a circumflex accent, occupying an intermediate value between long and short.

Consonants and Their Combinations (26,27–27,26)

Among the [consonants], the [semi]vowels superior [27] to the voiceless. And those that are double[28] are superior to the changeless semivowels. And the aspirates [29] are better than the inaspirates [30] <ο> the mute consonants. As for those that are intermediate, [31] their combinations are many. They are ignorant [of] the good combinations and are combined with the worse ones in the middle. As in the case of the nomenclature for the [gods] and the angels, it is not that the consonants are combined with each other indiscriminately, but only that they are combined so as to have a beneficial effect. It just didn’t happen that their intent was apparent.

Don’t [sin anymore], and don’t dare to have anything to do with sin. Now I speak to you [concerning the three configurations of the form] of the soul.

Vowels and the Second and Third Configurations of the Soul (27,26–29,2)

[The] third configuration of the soul is [a sphere and] [29] a spherical one goes around it. From the simple vowels <AAA>, EEE, <EEE>, III, O0, UUU, O0O, the diphthongs were as follows: AI, AU, [E], EU, ÉU, OU, OI, ÉI, [IU], OI, AU EI, EU EU, Oliver, [CG]G, GGG, GGG, AI AU, [E] EU, EU, OI, OU, OU, GGG, [GGG], AUEIUE, OIOU, EU—three times for a male soul. The third configuration is spherical, since it goes around it, has two sounds. The male soul’s third configuration consists of the simple vowels: AAA, EEE, EEE, III, O0O, UUU, O0O, O0O, O0O. And this configuration is distinct [from] the first, but [they resemble] each other [and] they make some [easy sounds] of [this sort: AEEIOO]. And [29] from these are made the diphthongs.

101. Mute consonants (B, G, D, K, P, T, TH, PH, KH), thought to be deprived of soul. 102. The affricates X, Z, PS, 103. The liquids L, M, N, R, 104. TH, TH, KH, 105. K, P, T, TH, B, G, D. Perhaps in the sense of weaker consonants. 106. The text reads ἄριστος, “the (or, with syncope, “their”) will, intent,” or Perhaps φυσικά, “their utterance, pronunciation.” 107. On these configurations of the soul, see the introduction, and for more detail, the introduction in Funk, Poirier, and Turner, eds., Marsæns, 57–76. 110. The configurations of the cosmic and individual soul are represented as five concentric spheres, moving from the stability of the outermost to the instability of the innermost. 111. Perhaps the gammas are the numeral three; thus 28,9 ([3]3 [3]3 [3]3 [3]3 [3]), followed by 28,10,11 (3 [3]3 [3]3 [3]3). The significance of the gammas is unclear; they may have some numerical significance, e.g., (x + x) + (x + x) = 27 and (x + x) + (x + x) = 18, having to do with certain phonetic considerations. Perhaps the numerical patterns underlying this series of diphthongs is an adaptation of Plato’s famous lambda (Timæus 35a), which symbolized the demiurge’s sectioning of the stuff of the world soul into seven portions (2 3 4 5 6 7 2), which was thematized into two classes of intervals, the “double” (1 2 4 8) and the “triple” (1 3 9 27). 112. A diphthong 113. By appending Ι or Ο to a single vowel. Funk translates: “And through the diphthongs (are) likewise also given/produced the fourth and fifth.”
Vowel Combinations and the Fourth and Fifth Configurations of the Soul (29.2–30.2)

So also the fourth and the fifth: with regard to them, not everything was allowed to be revealed, but only those things that are obvious. You were taught about them, that you should contemplate them in order that they too might seek and find [what] they all are—either through themselves alone or through one another—or seek to reveal [limits] set from the beginning—either with reference to themselves alone or with reference to one another. Just as [the letters] coexist with each other [in] speech, whether individually or by similarity,115 [they are] prefixed or [they are] suffixed. Either their [part] is derivative and similar, whether through [the long] vowels,116 or [through] those of [dual time value],117 or through [the short vowels],118 which are short . . . . [30] or the oxytones or the intermediate tones or the barytones.119

Consonant-Vowel Combinations: Syllables (30.3–32.5)

And sometimes consonants exist with the vowels, and by turns they are pre-pended and appended. They constitute a nomenclature [for] the angels. And sometimes the consonants are independent,120 and diverse—<they>121 are prefixed and are suffixed to the hidden gods.122 By means of beat and pitch and silence and attack [they] summon the semivowels, all of which are subjected123 to a single [sound]. Just as it is only the [unchanging consonants124] <and> the double consonants125 that exist among the semivowels,126 the aspirates,127 [the] inaspirates,128 and the [intermediates]129 constitute [the voiceless consonants]. Contrary to nature, the consonants and vowels are combined [with] one another, and [they] are separate [31] from one another. They are prepended and appended, and they constitute an ignorant130 nomenclature. And the resulting syllables become one or two or three or [four] or five or six up to seven having a [simple] sound. These that [have] two [sounds]131 are grouped with [the seventeen consonants. Among] the previously named, [some] are deficient and they are as if [they] had no substance, or as if [they] were an image [of] substance, [or] as if they separate the good nature [from] the evil one in the [middle].

And you [will assemble] the patterns that resemble each other, the vowels [together with] the consonants. Some examples are: BAGAD[A]ZATHA, BEGED[E]ZETHE, [BEDEDE]ZETHÉ, [BIGIDIZITHI, BOGO]ZOTHÔ, [BUGUDUZUTHU], BÔGÔDÔ[THÔ], and the rest. [And some are]: BA[BEBBIEBOBOBO]. [32] But the rest are different: ABEBEBI[B]OB, in order that you might [assemble] them and become separate from the angels. And certain effects will follow!

Arithmology (32.5–33.9?)

A good point of departure132 is from the Triad, and it [extends to that133 which] has need of [the One that] confined [it in] a shape. <The> Dyad and the Monad do not resemble anything: rather they are principles. The Dyad [constitutes] a division [from] the Monad, [and] it belongs to the hypostasis. But the Tetrad received the [elements] and the Pentad received concord, and the [Hexad] was perfected by itself. The [Hebdomad] received beauty, and [the] Ogdoad [attuned] its constituents to harmony, and the Ennead is honored much more. [33] And the [Decad revealed] the entire place.134 But the Hendecad and the [Dodecad] have passed over [into the boundless, and] it is [higher than] the Hebdomad [which is bounded].

Syllables and Nouns (33.107–35.20)

. . . . ,115 [nouns] . . . . promise that [the articulation marks] begin [to separate] them by means of a sign and a point, the [uninflected]136 one and the [in-]flected137 one. So also [are the images] of being: they derive [from a joining] of the letters138 in [a holy union]139 according to [a juxtaposition] where they exist independently. And <they> exist with each [other] by generation or [by kinship]. And [according to] their own generation they do not have . . . these . . . .139 [they have] . . . . one . . . speaking the riddle. Just as in the sense-perceptible world there exists the temple [which measures] seven hundred [cubits], and a river which . . . within an eternity, they . . . three . . . to the four . . . seals . . . clouds . . . [and the] waters, and the [forms of the] wax images, and some emerald images.140

For the rest, I will [teach you] about them. This is the generation of the names. That which141 [was not] generated . . . [from the] beginning . . .142 with regard to . . . stand . . . however, . . . [three] times, when [closed], when lengthened, when [short].143

Words (35.21–39.17)

But there exists a quiet [discourse] and there exists another discourse [related to free] <association> 144 [by speaking] of [that which is invisible], and it [manifests] the difference [between the Same] and the [Different] 145 and [36] between the whole and a [part] of an [indivisible] substance. And [that] power has a share in [the joy]—in both discord and [unity of the honor], whether... body 146 [it is] possible [to know that the things that] exist everywhere [are honored] always, [since they] dwell both with the corporeal and the incorporeal ones. This is the discourse on the hypostases that one should [know] in this way. If [they do] not [speak] with one another, [how then] does the discourse help [those who] are troubled [with the discourse about that which is] visible? [Therefore] if one 37 knows it, one will [speak] it.

But there are words, some of which are [dual, and others] that exist [separately, the ones that pertain] to [substance] 147 and they or those which [according to those that endure] or according to [those that] have time. 148 And [these] are either separated or joined with one another or with themselves, whether the diphthongs, or the simple [vowels], or every... or... or... [exist] just as... [exist]... the [consonants]... [38] they exist individually until they are divided and joined. Now some are able [to generate the consonants letter] by [letter]... difference... 149 become [substance]... [They will count] once [or twice] and thence [for] the vowels, and twice [for] the consonants, and once for the entire ensemble, and unpredictably for [those] subject to change 151 [as well as those that] originated [from them] and [everything] thereafter. And they are all [the names at once]. They were [39] hidden, but they were pronounced openly. They did not stop being revealed, nor did they stop naming the angels. The vowels are [joined with] the [consonants, whether] externally [or] internally, by means of... they said... [teach you]... again [in this way they were counted] four times, and they were [engendered] three times, and they became [twelfold].

Being Worthy of and Safeguarding the Revelation (39.18–45.20?)

For these reasons we have acquired sufficiency; for it is fitting that one acquire power for himself that he may bear fruit, and that we never reap scorn [on] the mysteries... the... For... which [is]... soul... the signs of the zodiac... 152 [40] a new hypostasis. And the reward that will be provided for such a one is salvation. But the opposite will happen there to the one who commits sin. Only [the one who commits] sin... will be [in a]... in a... of the [remainder]... these. Ponder them, so that even before you examine what one might [convey] to another, [you may re-

---

144. Emending ouxia, "substance," to <euxia, "association," "intercourse." 145. Cf. the mixture (and circles) of the Same and the Different in the cosmic soul according to Plato Timaeus 32a–32c. 146. Lines 9–14 unrestorable. 147. Substantives, perhaps common nouns. Lines 8–12 unrestorable. 148. Referring to temporary terms in general, or perhaps to vowels that have "dual time" (A, L, U). 149. Lines 9–11 unrestorable. 150. The letters. 151. i.e., those that undergo change in the process of conjugation and declension. 152. Last two lines missing.

---

Marsanes

Further Discussion in Severely Damaged Text

(42.26–46.20; 46.25–55.16; 55.20–60.26; 61.6–28; 62.11–29; 63.23–29; 64.6–15.22–29) 164

Marsanes' Concluding Vision Concerning the Destiny of Souls (45.21?–68.18)

The Vision of Marsanes (45.21?–58.1)

[46] 165 the voice of... names and... [for] ever... [names]...
Marsanes’ Response (58,1–62,4?)

[61] . . . for your daughters . . . . for just as . . . . the kingdom of [the Triple-Powered One]. But this one . . . .[62] [speak] on the basis of what [you] don’t [know. And] . . . . for it is . . . . that you . . . . the one whose . . . . [you did not] know . . . .

Marsanes’ Apocalyptic Vision of the Fearsome Angels

(62,4?–64,17?)

And I [said] . . . .[63] for the . . . .[63] in . . . . the remainder down [against the] earth. And they spoke like the angels. [And one] was like the wild [beasts]. And he said, . . . [for] ever . . . . beast . . . .[63] beast . . . .[63] from . . . . of my [soul] . . . I saw a . . . [standing] . . . and his [image] was [fearsome]. And [his face] was . . . .[64] I . . . . because I [saw] all of [the lights] around [me blazing with] fire. [And I looked at myself] in their midst . . . . angels [attending] me.

Gamaliel Comes to Marsanes’ Aid (64,17?–65,5?)

And . . . .[65] . . . Gamaliel, [the one] who presides over [those spirits . . . .[65] the great] angels [who are those] that receive [all of them] . . . . with their . . . .

Gamaliel’s Revelation (65,5?–66,16?)

And he [guided me down], and he [bore] me . . . .[65] [her] members . . . . the [invisible] . . . .[65] judgment . . . . thrown . . . . every . . . . who is placed . . . .[65] overflowing fountain] of the living [water] . . . . the two . . . silent . . . [gods] . . . .[66] cleanse it . . . . from . . . . the one whom they [sealed] has been adorned [with the] celestial [seal] . . . .[65] to his . . . great . . .

Marsanes’ Vision of the Judgment of Souls, and the Title

(66,17?–68,18)

And I [saw . . . . unmixed] . . . . those who . . . .[67] they will become . . . . of God . . . a woman . . . while she is in [travail] . . . . after she begot . . . .

166. First sixteen and last seven lines missing.

174. 67,22–23 as restored by Funk; lines 25–35 unreconstructable; last four are missing. 185. Lines 10–11 unreconstructable. 186. Line 15 unreconstructable.