THE present work, both in its Sanskrit portion and in its English, is an amended reprint of three volumes,¹ published in India, which have already become very scarce. An abridged form of those volumes,² which subsequently ² Occupying Fasciculi 32 and 81 of the New Series of the Bibliotheca Indica, issued in 1862 and 1865. The proof-sheets of only 32 pages of the whole, from the beginning, were read by Dr. Balantyne; the rest, by Professor Cowell.

The title of the abridged form runs: "The Sánkhya Aphorisms of Kapila, with Extracts from Vijnána Bhiks[h]u's Commentary," &c. But this is a misrepresentation, as regards Book I., which takes up 63 pages out of the total of 175. The expository matter in that Book is derived, very largely, from other commentators than Vijnána.

appeared, contains nothing of the Sanskrit original but the Aphorisms.

While, in the following pages, all the corrections obtainable from the abridgment have been turned to account, an immense number of improved readings have been taken from another source. Three several times I carefully read Dr. Ballantyne's translation in as many different copies of it; entering suggestions, in the second copy, without reference to those which had been entered in the first, and similarly making independent suggestions in my third copy. All these 'were, on various occasions, submitted to Dr. Ballantyne; and such of them as did not meet his approval were crossed through. The residue, many more than a thousand, have been embodied

Though not fully published till 1856, my edition of the Sánkhyapravachana-bháshya, its preface alone excepted, was in print as early as 1853; and Dr. Ballantyne had a copy of it. A few arbitrarily chosen words apart, his text, after Book I., is borrowed from it throughout, but with no mention of the fact. My advice was unheeded, that he should profit by the copious emendations which I had amassed and digested from better manuscripts than those to which I at first had access. Greatly to his disservice, he would not be induced even to look at them. It faring the same with my typographical corrections, he has, here and there, reproduced errors, more or less gross, which might easily have been avoided. See, for specimens, pp. 197, 288, 357, 373, 374, 381, 390.

Vedánti Mahádeva mainly supplies it at the outset, and, towards the end, well nigh exclusively, Aniruddha. Some share of it, however, will not be traced; it having been furnished by one of Dr. Ballantyne's pandits, whom I have repeatedly seen in the very act, as by his own acknowledgment, of preparing his elucidations.

in the ensuing sheets, but are not indicated,¹ as successively introduced. The renderings proposed in the footnotes are, for the most part, from among those which have recently occurred to me as eligible.

That Dr. Ballantyne had any thought of reissuing, in whatever form, the volumes mentioned at the beginning of this Advertisement, I was unaware, till some years after he had made over the abridgment of them to Professor Cowell, for publication.³ Otherwise, I should have placed at his disposal the materials towards improvement of his second edition, which, at the cost of no slight drudgery, are here made available.

The Sánkhya Aphorisms, in all the known commentaries on them, are exhibited word for word. The variants, now given, of the Aphorisms, afforded by accessible productions of that character, have been drawn from the works, of which only one has yet been printed, about to be specified :⁸

I. The Sánkhya-pravachana-bháshya, by Vijnána Bhikshu. Revelant particulars I have given elsewhere. My oldest MS. of it was transcribed in 1654.

II. The Kápila - sánkhya - pravachana - sútra-vritti, by Aniruddha. Of this I have consulted, besides a MS. copied in 1818, formerly the property of Dr. Ballantyne, one which I procured to be copied, in 1855, from an old MS. without date.¹

III. The Laghu-sánkhya-sútra-vritti, by Nágeśa. Of this I have two MSS., both undated. One of them is entire; but the other is defective by the three first Books.

IV. The Sánkhya-pravachana-sútra-vritti-sára, by Vedánti Mahádeva. Here, again, only one of two MSS. which I possess is complete. The other, which breaks off in the midst of the comment on Book II., Aph. 15, is, in places, freely interpolated from No. I. Neither of them has a date.

Nearly all my longer annotations, and some of the shorter, were scrutinized, while in the rough, by the learned Professor Cowell, but for whose searching criticisms, which cannot be valued too highly, they would, in several instances, have been far less accurate than they now are.

MARLESFORD, SUFFOLK, Aug. 28, 1884.

¹ I once had a second copy of this very rare work, bearing no date, but most venerable in appearance. Like many of my manuscript treasures, it was lent, and never found its way back to me.

PREFACE.

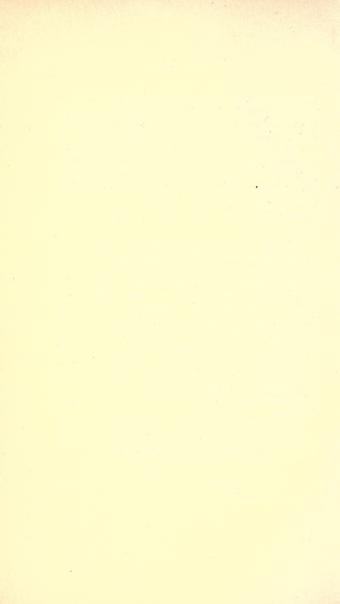

THE great body of Hindu Philosophy is based upon six sets of very concise Aphorisms. Without a commentary, the Aphorisms are scarcely intelligible; they being designed, not so much to communicate the doctrine of the particular school, as to aid, by the briefest possible suggestions, the memory of him to whom the doctrine shall have been already communicated. To this end they are admirably adapted; and, this being their end, the obscurity which must needs attach to them, in the eyes of the uninstructed, is not chargeable upon them as a fault.

For various reasons it is desirable that there should be an accurate translation of the Aphorisms, with so much of gloss as may be required to render them intelligible. A class of pandits in the Benares Sanskrit College having been induced to learn English, it is contemplated that a version of the Aphorisms, brought out in successive portions, shall be submitted to the criticism of these men, and, through them, of other learned Bráhmans, so that any errors in the version may have the best chance of being discovered and rectified. The employment of such a version as a class-book is designed to subserve, further, the attempt to determine accurately the aspect of the philosophical terminology of the East, as regards that of the West.

These pages, now submitted to the criticism of the pandits who read English, are to be regarded as proofsheets awaiting correction. They invite discussion.

THE

BOOK I.

a. Salutation to the illustrious sage, Kapila!1

b. Well, the great sage, Kapila, desirous of raising the world [from the Slough of Despond in which he found it sunk], perceiving that the knowledge of the excellence of any fruit, through the desire [which this excites] for the fruit, is a cause of people's betaking themselves to the means [adapted to the attainment of the fruit], declares [as follows] the excellence of the fruit [which he would urge our striving to obtain]:²

अय चिविधदुःखात्यन्तनिवृत्तिरत्यन्तपुरुषार्थः॥१॥

The subject proposed. Aph. 1. Well, the complete cessation of pain [which is] of three kinds is the complete end of man.

' श्रीकपिलमुनये नमः ॥ ' ऋष जगदुद्दिधीर्षुर्महामुनिः कपिलः फलसी-न्दर्यज्ञानस्य फलेच्छादारा साधनप्रवृत्तेा कारणलं पश्यन्फलसीन्दर्यमाह ॥

a. The word 'well' serves as a benediction;¹ [the particle atha being regarded as an auspicious one].

b. By saying that the complete cessation of pain, which is of three kinds,—viz., (1) due to one's self $(\acute{a}dhy\acute{a}tmika)$, (2) due to products of the elements $(\acute{a}dhibhautika)$, and (3) due to supernatural causes $(\acute{a}dhidaivika)$,—is the complete end of man, he means to say that it is the chief end of man, among the four human aims, [viz., merit, wealth, pleasure, and liberation (see Sáhitya-darpaya,§2)];² because the three are transitory, whereas liberation is not transitory: such is the state of the case.

c. But then, let it be that the above-A question whether the end may not be attained mentioned cessation [of all the three by ordinary means. kinds of pain] is the complete end of man; still, what reason is there for betaking one's self to a doctrinal system which is the cause of a knowledge of the truth, in the shape of the knowledge of the difference between Nature and Soul, when there are easy remedies for bodily pains, viz., drugs, &c., and remedies for mental pains, viz., beautiful women and delicate food, &c., and remedies for pains due to products of the elements, viz., the residing in impregnable localities, &c., as is enjoined in the institutes of polity, and remedies for pains due to supernatural causes, viz., gems [such as possess marvellous prophylactic properties], and spells, and herbs of mighty

न दृष्टाज्ञत्सिडिर्निवृत्तेरप्यनुवृत्तिदर्शनात् ॥ २ ॥

The end is not to be attained by ordinary means. Aph. 2. The effectuation of this [complete cessation of pain] is not [to be expected] by means of the visible [such as wealth, &c.]; for we see [on the loss of wealth, &c.,] the restoration [of the misery and evil,] after [its temporary] cessation.

' नन्वस्तूक्तनिवृत्तिरत्यन्तपुरुषार्थस्तथापि सच्च-पुरुषान्यताख्यातिरूपतत्त्वज्ञानहेतुशास्त्रप्रवृत्तौ के हेतुः शारीरदुःखनिवर्तकानामाेषधादीनां मानस-दुःखनिवर्तकानां वरस्त्रीमिष्टाचादीनमाधिभाति-कदुःखनिवर्तकानां नीतिशास्त्रोपदिष्टनिरत्ययस्था-नाध्यासनादीनामाधिदैविकदुःखनिवर्तकानां म-णिमन्त्रमहाषधादीनां सुकराणां सत्त्वेनानेकजन्म-परंपरायाससाध्ये तत्त्वज्ञानेऽतिदुय्करे प्रवृत्तेर्दुर्ज-भत्वेन शास्त्रप्रवृत्तेर्दुर्जभतरत्वादत आह ॥

² Instead of निवृत्ते:, the reading of Aniruddha, and of most MSS., Vijnána has, to the same effect, निवृत्ते · Ed. a. 'The visible,' in the shape of the drugs, &c., abovementioned¹ [§ 1. c.].

b. 'The effectuation of this,' i.e., the effectuation of the complete cessation of pain.²

c. Why is it not [to be thus effected]? Because, after the cessation (the cessation of pain is understood), we see its restoration, the springing up again of pain in general,³ [from whichever of its three sources ($\S 1. b$.)].

d. The state of the matter is this: not by the expedients above-mentioned is there such a removal of pain, that no pain arises thereafter; for, when, by this or that expedient, this or that pain has been destroyed, we see other pains springing up. Therefore, though it be not easy [§1. c.], the knowledge of truth [as a complete remedy] is to be desired.⁴

e. But then, grant that future pain is not debarred by drugs, &c., [employed to remove present pain], still, by

प्रात्यहिकक्षुन्प्रतीकारवत्तव्यतीकारचेष्टनात्पुरु-षार्थलम् ॥ ३ ॥

The question whether the end may not be attained by the recurrent use of ordinary means. Aph. 3. [Let us consider the doubt] that the soul's desire [the cessation of pain, may result] from exertions for the obviation [of pain], as is the case with the obviation of daily hunger.

a. When pain shall arise [let us suppose one to argue], then it is to be obviated; and thus there is the soul's desire, the cessation of pain; just as one should eat, when there is hunger; and thus there is the soul's desire of the eater, viz., the cessation of hunger. In regard to this [doubt] he states the recognized decision :²

सर्वासंभवात्संभवेऽपि सत्त्वासंभवाडेयः[®] प्रमाख-कुण्लैः ॥ ४ ॥

' ननु मा भूदीषधादिभिभीविदुःखनिवृत्तिस्तथा-पि पुनः पुनः प्रतीकारकरखे तु भाविदुःखनिवृ-त्तिरपि स्यादिति शङ्कते ।

* The more ordinary reading of MSS., and that of Aniruddha, is Halo, 'excellence,' not Halo, with Vijnána. Ed. This suggestion negative. This suggestion negative. ($3)] is to be rejected by those who are versed in evidence; because it is not everywhere possible [to employ it at all], and because, even if this were possible, there would be an impossibility as regards [ensuring] the perfect fitness [of the agents employed].

a. For there are not physicians, &c., in every place and at all times; and [to rely on physicians, &c., would not be advisable], even if there were the possibility,—i.e., even if these vere [always at hand], since physicians are not perfect [in their art];—for pain cannot with certainty be got rid of by means of physicians, &c., with their drugs, &c. Moreover, when corporeal pain has departed, there may still be that which is mental, &c.; so that there is not [under such circumstances], in every respect, liberation from pain. For these reasons, such a soul's aim [as that which contents itself with temporary palliatives] is to be rejected by those who are versed in evidence,¹ [i.e., who are acquainted with authoritative treatises].

b. He mentions another proof² [of his assertion]:

उन्कर्षादपि माक्षस्य सर्वान्कर्षेष्युतेः ॥ ५ ॥

Scriptural evidence in favour of this view.

Aph. 5. Also [an inferior method ought not to be adopted,] because of the preeminence of Liberation [as proved] by the text [of Scripture declaratory] of its preeminence above all else.

a. One ought not to endeavour after the removal of this or that pain by these and those expedients [§ 1. c.]; since Liberation (moksha), by being eternal, is transcendent as a remover of all pains. Moreover, one ought to endeavour only after the knowledge of truth, which is the means thereof [i.e., of Liberation]; because the Scripture tells its pre-eminence above all [other objects of endeavour], in the text: 'There is nothing beyond the gaining of Soul,' [with the utter exclusion of pain].'

b. But then [it may be suggested], when you say liberation, we understand you to mean from bondage. And is that bondage essential? Or is it adventitious? In the former case, it is incapable of destruction; if it come under the latter head, it will perish of itself, [like any other adventitious and, therefore, transitory thing]. What have we to do with your 'knowledge of truth,' then? To this he replies [as follows]:²

'न तैस्तैरुपायैसत्तद्दुःखेाच्छेदे यतितव्यं माध्वस्य नित्यलेन सर्वदुःखेाच्छेदरूपलेनेालर्षात्। ज्ञात्म-लाभात्यरंन विद्यत इति सर्वेालर्षेत्रुतेरपि तत्सा-धने तत्त्वज्ञान एव यतितव्यम्॥

१ ननु माक्ष इत्युक्ते बन्धादिति प्रतीयते। स च

अविशेषश्चोभयोः ॥ ६॥

An objection met.

Aph. 6. And there is no difference between the two.

a. There is no difference in the applicability of liberation, on either of the suppositions, that the bondage is essential, and that it is adventitious, [supposing it were either (see § 19. b.)]. That is to say, we can tell both how the bondage takes place, and how the liberation takes place.¹

b. Now, with the view of demonstrating [the real nature of] Bondage and Liberation, he declares, exclusively, in the first place, the objections to Bondage's being essential 2 [§ 5. b.]:

न स्वभावता बडस्य मेास्रसाधनेापदेशविधिः॥७॥

Liberation must be possible; else the means would not have been enjoined. Aph. 7. There would be no rule in the enjoining of means for the liberation of one bound essentially.

बन्धः किं स्वाभाविक उतागन्तुकः। छाद्ये ना-शायागोऽन्ये चेन्स्वत एव नङ्ख्यति। किं तत्त्वज्ञा-नेनेऌत छाह ॥

' उभयेार्वन्यस्य स्वाभाविकागन्तुकलयेार्मेाझ-स्यापादेयलेऽविशेषः । यथा बन्धस्यापपत्तिर्यथा च मासस्य तथा वयं वक्तुं शक्रुम इत्यर्थः ॥

^² ऋष बन्धमेाछयेारुपपत्त्यर्थमादेैा तावत्स्वा-भाविकाले बन्धस्य द्रषणान्याह ॥ a. Since Liberation has been stated [§ 1] to result from the complete cessation of pain, [it follows that] Bondage is the junction of pain; and this is not essential in man. For, if that were the case, then there would be no rule, i.e., no fitness, in the Scriptural or legal injunction of means for liberation: such is what must be supplied, [to complete the aphorism]. Because, to explain our meaning [by an illustration], fire cannot be liberated from its heat, which is essential to it; since that which is essential exists as long as the substance exists.¹

b. And it has been declared in the Divine Song [the İśwara-gítá,]: 'If the soul were essentially foul, or impure, or changeable, then its liberation could not take place even through hundreds of successive births.'²

c. [Since some one may be disposed to say] 'Grant that there is no fitness [in the Scriptural and legal injunctions, $(\S 7. a.)$], what have we to do with that?' Therefore he declares [as follows]:³

' दुःखात्यन्तनिवृत्तेर्मोक्षलाइन्धेा दुःखयेागः स च पुरुषे न स्वाभाविकः । तथा सति मोछाय साधनेापदेशस्य श्रीतस्य स्मार्तस्य च विधिरनुष्ठानं न घटत इति शेषः । न द्यग्नेः स्वाभाविकादौ-ष्ण्यान्मोछाः संभवति स्वाभाविकस्य यावद्रव्यभा-विलादिति भावः ।

स्वभावस्यानपायित्वादननुष्ठानलक्ष्रणमप्रा-माएयम् ॥ ৮ ॥

Scripture would be magalory, if pain were is imperishable, unauthoritativeness, iscripture, if pain were essential be chargeable against the Scripture, if pain were essential to humanity].

a. That is to say: since the essential nature of anything is imperishable, i. e., endures as long as the thing itself, it would follow [on the supposition that pain is essential to humanity], that, since Liberation is impossible, the Scripture which enjoins the means for its attainment is a false authority, inasmuch as it is impracticable¹ [in its injunctions. And this is out of the question; Scripture being assumed, here, as in all the others of the six systems, to be an exact measure of truth].

b. But then [some one may say], let it be an injunction [to use means for the attainment of an unattainable object], on the mere strength of Scripture; ² [and, since Scripture is an unquestionable authority, we may be excused from asking or answering the question, why the injunction is given]. To this he replies [as follows]:

े स्वभावस्यानपायित्वाद्यावद्र्व्यभावित्वान्मेा-द्यासंभवेन तत्साधनापदेश्र्त्रुतेरननुष्ठानलक्ष्णम-प्रामाख्यं स्यादित्यर्थः ॥

^{*} ननु श्रुतिवलादेवानुष्ठानं स्यात्तचाह ॥

An impracticable injunction is no rule. Aph. 9. There is no rule, where something impossible is enjoined: though it be enjoined, it is no injunction.

a. There can be no fitness, or propriety, in an injunction with a view to an impossible fruit; seeing that, though something be enjoined, or ordered [to be effected] by means that are impracticable, this is no injunction at all, but only the semblance of an injunction; because it stands to reason, that not even the Veda can make one see sense in an absurdity: such is the meaning.¹

b. Here he comes upon a doubt :²

शूक्षपटवडीजवचेत् ॥ १० ॥

A doubt whether the essential be not removable. Aph. 10. If [some one says] as in the case of white cloth, or of a seed, [something essential may be not irremovable, then he will find his answer in the next aphorism].

a. But then [the doubter is supposed to argue], the destruction even of what is essential [in spite of what is stated under § 7] is seen; as, for example, the essential whiteness of white cloth is removed by dyeing, and the essential power of germination in a seed is removed by fire. Therefore, according to the analogy of the white cloth and the seed, it is possible that there should be the removal of the bondage of the soul, even though it were essential. So, too, there may be [without any impropriety] the enjoinment of the means thereof. Well, if [any one argues thus], such is the meaning¹ [of the aphorism, to which he proceeds to reply].

े अज्ञक्याय फलायोपदेशस्य विधिरनुष्ठानं न संभवति यत उपदिष्टे विहितेऽप्पश्वक्योपायेनो-पदेश एव न भवति किं तूपदेशाभास एव बाधि-तमर्थं वेदाेऽपि न बाेधयतीति न्यायादित्यर्थः ॥

b. He declares² [the real state of the case, with reference to the doubt just raised]:

शत्त्युद्भवानुद्भवाभ्यां नाशक्योपदेशः ॥ ११ ॥

Decision that an essential property may be kidden, but not removed. Aph. 11. Since both perceptibleness and [subsequent] non-perceptibleness may belong to some power [which is enjoined, [when one is directed to render some indestructible power imperceptible].

a. In regard even to the two examples above-mentioned [§ 10], people do not give an injunction for [the positive destruction of] something essential, which is indestructible [§ 8]. Why [do we say this]? Because, in these two instances of the perceptibleness and non-perceptibleness of a power [the powers, namely, of appearing white and of germinating (see § 10. a.)], there are merely the manifestation and [afterwards] the hiding of the whiteness, &c., but not the removal of the whiteness, or of the power of germination; because, that is to say, the whiteness of the dyed cloth and the germinating power of the roasted seed can again be brought out by the processes of the bleacher, &c., [in the case of the dyed cloth], and by the will of the Yogi, [the possessor of supernatural powers, in the case of the roasted seed], &c.¹

b. Having thus disproved the notion that bondage is essential [to man], wishing to disprove also the notion that it is the result of some [adherent] cause, he rejects the [various supposable] causes, viz., Time, &c.:³

' उक्तटृष्टान्तयेारप्यश्रक्ताय स्वाभाविकायेाप-देशे लोकानां न भवति । कुतः । शत्त्युद्भवा-नुद्भवाभ्यां दृष्टान्तद्वये शुक्कत्वादेराविभावतिरोभा-वावेव भवतो न तु शोक्त्रस्याङ्कुरशक्तेश्वापायः । रजकादिव्यापारैर्येागिसंकल्पादिभिश्व रक्तपटभृष्ट-बीजयोः पुनः शोक्त्रस्याङ्कुरशक्तेश्वाविभावादिति भावः ॥

न काल्गयागता व्यापिना नित्यस्य सर्वसं-बन्धात् ॥ १२ ॥

Time, which applies to all, cannot be the cause of the bondage of a part. Aph. 12. Not from connexion with time [does bondage befall the soul]; because this, all-pervading and eternal, is [eternally] associated with all, [and not with those alone who are in bondage].

a. The bondage of man is not caused by time; because [if that were the case,] there could be no such separation as that of the liberated and unliberated; because time, which applies to everything, and is eternal, is at all times associated with all men,¹ [and must, therefore, bring all into bondage, if any].

न देशयोगताऽप्यस्मात् ॥ १३ ॥

Place, for the same reason, cannot be the cause.

Aph. 13. Nor [does bondage arise] from connexion with place, either, for the same [reason].

a. That is to say: bondage does not arise from connexion with place. Why? 'For the same reason,'i.e., for that stated in the preceding aphorism, viz., that, since it [viz., place] is connected with all men, whether liberated

[े] न कालनिमित्तकः पुरुषस्य वन्धो व्यापिनेा नित्यस्य कालस्य सैर्वैः पुरुषैः सर्वकालावच्छेदेन संवन्धान्मुक्तामुक्तव्यवस्यानुपपत्तेः ॥ or not liberated, bondage would [in that case] befall the liberated, also.¹

नावस्थातो देहधर्मत्वान्तस्याः ॥ १४ ॥

The soul is not kept in bondage by its being conditioned. Aph. 14. Nor [does the bondage of the soul arise] from its being conditioned [by its standing among circumstances that clog it by limiting it]; because that is the fact in regard to [not the soul, but] the body.

a. By 'condition' we mean the being in the shape of a sort of association. The bondage [of the soul] does not arise from that; because that is the property of the body [and not of the soul]; because, that is to say, bondage might befall even the liberated [which is impossible], if that which is the fact in regard to another could occasion the bondage of one quite different.²

b. But then [some one might say], let this conditioned state belong to the soul. On this point [to prevent mistakes], he declares:³

ननु पुरुषस्येवावस्था स्यात्तचाह ॥

ग्रसङ्गाऽयं पुरुष इति ॥ १५ ॥

Aph. 15. Because this soul is [unassociated with any conditions or circumstances that could serve as its bonds, it is] absolute.

a. The word iti here shows that it [i.e., the assertion conveyed in the aphorism] is a reason; the construction with the preceding aphorism being this, that, since the soul is unassociated, it belongs only to the body to be conditioned.¹

न कर्मणान्यधर्मनादतिप्रसक्तेश्व ॥ १६ ॥

The fruit of works belongs not to the soul. [viz., the mind], and because it [the bondage] would be eternal,⁸ [if the case were as you imagine].

े इतिर्हेती पुरुषस्यासङ्गलादवस्थाया देहमा-चधर्मलमिति पूर्वसूत्रेणान्वयः ॥

Celebrooke, on various occasions, represents one or other of these terms by 'wrest,' 'straining a rule,' 'room for misconstruction,' &c. As technicalities, they generally signify 'illegitimately extended application' of a canon, notion, or the like. Ed. a. That is to say: moreover, the bondage of the soul does not arise from any work, whether enjoined or forbidden; because works are the property of another, i.e., not the property of the soul [but of the mind]. And, if, through a property of another, the bondage of one quite distinct could take place, then bondage might befall even the liberated ¹, [through some acts of some one else].

b. But then [some one may say], this objection does not apply, if we hold that bondage may arise from the acts of the *associate*² [viz., the mental organ]: so, with allusion to this, he states another reason, 'and because it would be eternal,' i.e., because bondage, in the shape of connexion with pain, would occur [where it does not,] even in such cases as the universal dissolution⁸ [of the phenomenal universe, including the mental organ, but not the soul].

A doubt whether the bondage, also, belongs not to something else than the soul. c. But then [some one may say], if that be the case, then let the bondage, too, in the shape of connexion with pain, belong [not to the soul, but] to the mind alone, in accordance with the principle that it have the same locus as the works [to which it is due]; and, since it is an established point that pain is an affection of the mind, why is bondage [i.e., connexion with pain] assumed of the soul, also? With reference to this doubt, he declares [as follows]:¹

विचित्रभागानुपपत्तिरन्यधर्मत्वे ॥ १९ ॥

Why it is to the soul that the bondage must belong. Aph. 17. If it were the property of any other, then there could not be diverse experience.

a. If bondage, in the shape of connexion with pain, were the property of another, i.e., a property of the mind, there could be no such thing as diverse experience; there could be no such different experience as one man's experiencing pain, and another man's not: [for, it must be remembered, it is not in point of mind, but of soul, that men are held, by Kapila, to be numerically different]. Therefore, it must be admitted that pain is connected with the soul, also. And this [pain that belongs to the soul] is in the shape merely of a reflexion of the pain [that attaches to its attendant organism]; and this reflexion is of its own attendant [organism] only; so that there is no undue result² [deducible from our theory].

प्रकृतिनिबन्धनाचेन तस्या ऋपिं पारतन्त्यम्॥१८॥

Nature is not the immediate cause of the soul's bondage. also, is a dependent thing. Aph. 18. If [you say that the soul's bondage arises] from Nature, as its cause, [then I say] 'no;' [because] that,

a. But then [some one may say], let bondage result from Nature, as its cause. If you say so, I say 'no;' because that, also, i.e., Nature, also, is dependent on the conjunction which is to be mentioned in the next aphorism; because, if it [Nature] were to occasion bondage, even without that [conjunction which is next to be mentioned], then bondage would occur even in such cases as the universal dissolution,⁸ [when soul is altogether disconnected from the phenomenal].

If the reading [in the aphorism] be *nibandhaná*¹ [in the 1st case, and not in the 5th], then the construction will be as follows: 'If [you say that] the bondage is caused by Nature,' &c.²

c. Therefore, since Nature can be the cause of bondage, only as depending on something else [i.e., on the conjunction to be mentioned in the next aphorism], through this very sort of conjunction [it follows that] the bondage is reflexional, like the heat of water due to the conjunction of fire;³ [water being held to be essentially cold, and to seem hot only while the heat continues in conjunction with it].

d. He establishes his own tenet, while engaged on this point, in the very middle⁴ [of his criticisms on erroneous notions in regard to the matter; for there are more to come]:

न नित्यगुडवुडमुक्तस्वभावस्य तस्रोगस्तस्रो-गादृते[°]॥ १९॥

Aph. 19. [But] not without the conjunction thereof [i.e., of Nature] is there the connexion of that [i.e., of pain] with that [viz., the soul,] which is ever essentially a pure and free intelligence.

a. Therefore,¹ without the conjunction thereof, i.e., without the conjunction of Nature, there is not, to the soul, any connexion with that, i.e., any connexion with bondage; but, moreover, just through that [connexion with Nature] does bondage take place.²

b. In order to suggest the fact that the bondage [of the soul] is reflexional [and not inherent in it, either essentially or adventitiously], he makes use of the indirect expression with a double negative, ['not without']. For, if bondage were produced by the conjunction [of the soul] with Nature, as colour is produced by heating [in the case of a jar of black clay, which becomes red in the baking], then, just like that, it would continue even after disjunction therefrom ; [as the red colour remains in the jar, after the fire of the brick-kiln has been extinguished, whereas the red colour occasioned in a crystal vase by a China-rose. while it occurs not without the China-rose, ceases, on the removal thereof]. Hence, as bondage ceases, on the disjunction [of the soul] from Nature, the bondage is merely reflexional, and neither essential [§ 5. b.] nor adventitious³ [§ 11. 6.].

THE SANKHYA APHORISMS.

c. In order that there may not be such an error as that of the Vaiśeshikas, viz., [the opinion that there is] an absolutely real conjunction [of the soul] with pain, he says 'which is ever,' &c. [§ 19]. That is to say: as the connexion of colour with essentially pure crystal does not take place without the conjunction of the China-rose [the hue of which, seen athwart the crystal, seems to belong to the crystal], just so the connexion of pain with the soul, ever essentially pure, &c., could not take place without the conjunction of some accidental associate; that is to say, pain, &c., cannot arise spontaneously,¹ [any more than a red colour can arise spontaneously in the crystal which is essentially pure].

d. This has been declared, in the Saura, as follows: 'As the pure crystal is regarded, by people, as red, in consequence of the proximity of something [as a China-rose]

यदि हि वन्धः पाकजरूपवत्प्रकृतिसंयोगजन्यः स्या-त्तदा तद्वदेव तद्वियेागेऽप्यनुवर्तेत । ञ्चतः प्रकृति-वियोगे बन्धाभावादीपाधिक एव बन्धा न तुस्वा-भाविको नैमित्तिको वेति ॥

e. In that [aphorism, 19], the perpetual purity means the being ever devoid of merit and demerit; the perpetual intelligence means the consisting of uninterrupted thought; and the perpetual liberatedness means the being ever dissociated from real pain: that is to say, the connexion with pain in the shape of a reflexion is not a real bondage,² [any more than the reflexion of the China-rose is a real stain in the crystal].

f. And so the maker of the aphorism means, that the cause of its bondage is just a particular conjunction [§ 19.c.]. And now enough as to that point.³

g. Now he rejects [§18.d.] certain causes of [the soul's] bondage, preferred by others:⁴

नाविद्यातेाऽपवस्तुना बन्धायेागात् ॥ २० ॥

The Vedántic tenet on this point disputed. [does the soul's bondage arise]; because that which is not a reality is not adapted to binding.

a. The word 'too' is used with reference to the previously mentioned 'Time,' &c.,¹ [§ 12, which had been rejected, as causes of the bondage, antecedently to the statement, in §19, of the received cause].

b. Neither, too, does [the soul's] union with bondage result directly from 'Ignorance,' as is the opinion of those who assert non-duality [or the existence of no reality save one (see Vedánta-sára, § 20. b.)]; because, since their 'Ignorance' is not a real thing, it is not fit to bind; because, that is to say, the binding of any one with a rope merely dreamt of was never witnessed.²

c. But, if 'Ignorance' be a reality [as some assert], then he declares [as follows] $:^{3}$

वस्तुले सिडान्तहानिः ॥ २१ ॥

The Vedántí cannot evade the objection, without stultifying himself. Aph. 21. If it ['Ignorance'] be [asserted, by you, to be] a reality, then there is an abandonment of the [Ve-dántic] tenet, [by you who profess to follow the Vedánta].

That is to say: and, if you agree that 'Ignorance' is a reality, then you abandon your own implied dogma [see Nyáya Aphorisms I., § 31] of the unreality of 'Ignorance;' [and so you stultify yourself].

b. He states another objection :2

विजातीयदेतापत्तिश्व ॥ २२ ॥

The Vedántí cannot evade the objection, without conceding a duality. Aph. 22. And [if you assume 'Ignorance' to be a reality, then] there would be a duality, through [there being] something of a different kind [from soul; which you asserters of non-duality cannot contemplate allowing].

a. That is to say: if 'Ignorance' is real and without a beginning, then it is eternal, and coordinate with Soul: if [therefore] it be not soul, then there is a duality, through [there being] something of a different kind [from soul; and this the Vedántís cannot intend to establish]; because these followers of the Vedánta, asserting non-duality, hold that there is neither a duality through there being something of the same kind [with soul], nor through there being something of a different kind.³

The Vedánti must not allege that 'Ignorance' is at once real and unreal.

a. The meaning is: if [the Vedántí says that] 'Ignorance' is not real,—else there would be a duality through [there being] something of a different kind [from soul, which a follower of the Vedánta cannot allow],—and, moreover, it is not unreal, because we experience its effects; but it is in the shape of something at once real and unreal,² [like Plato's $\delta\nu \ \kappa a\lambda \ \mu\dot{\eta} \ \delta\nu$: (see Vedántasára, §21)].

न तादृक्पदार्थाप्रतीतेः ॥ २४ ॥

There is no such thing as a thing at once real and unreal. Aph. 24. [To the suggestion that 'Ignorance' is at once real and unreal, we say] 'no;' because no such thing is known [as is at once real and unreal.]

a. That is to say: it is not right to say that 'Ignorance' is at once real and unreal. The reason of this he states in the words 'because no such thing,' &c.; because any such thing as is at once real and unreal is not known.

ै ऋविद्या न सती येन विजातीयद्वैतापन्ति-नापसती कार्यापलम्भान्किं तु सदसदूपा चेदि-त्यर्घः ॥ For, in the case of a dispute, it is necessary that there should be an example of the thing [i.e. (see Nyáya Aphorisms, I., § 25), a case in which all parties are agreed that the property in dispute is really present]; and, as regards your opinion, such is not to be found; [for, where is there anything in regard to which both parties are agreed that it is at once real and unreal, as they are agreed that fire is to be met with on the culinary hearth?]: such is the import.¹

b. Again he ponders a doubt :2

न वयं षट्टदार्थवादिनेा वैशेषिकादिवत् ॥ २५ ॥

A question whether the Vedántí is bound to avoid self-contradiction. Aph. 25. [Possibly the Vedántí may remonstrate] ' We are not asserters of any Six Categories, like the Vaiseshikas and others.'

a. 'We are not asserters of a definite set of categories [like the Vaiśeshikas, who arrange all things under six heads, and the Naiyáyikas, who arrange them under sixteen]. Therefore, we hold that there is such a thing, unknown though it be [to peoplein general], as 'Ignorance' which is at once real and unreal, or [if you prefer it], which differs at once from the real and the unreal [see

b. By the expression [in the aphorism] 'and others 'are meant the Naiyáyikas; for the Naiyáyika is an asserter of sixteen categories² [see Nyáya Aphorisms, I., § 1].

The self-contradictory is altogether inadmissible. Aph. 26. Even although this be not compulsory [that the categories be six, or sixteen], there is no acceptance of the inconsistent; else we come to the level of children, and madmen, and the like.

a. Let there be [accepted] no system of categories [such as that of the Vaiseshika, $\S 25$]; still, since being and *not*being are contradictory, it is impossible for disciples to

b. Certain heretics [deniers of the authority of the Vedas] assert that there exist external objects of momentary duration [individually; each being, however, replaced by its facsimile the next instant, so that the uninterrupted series of productions becomes something equivalent to continuous duration], and that by the influence² of these the bondage of the soul [is occasioned]. This he objects to, [as follows]:³

² Vásaná, a term which Dr. Ballantyne has rendered variously, in divers passages of the present work, and also elsewhere. Ed.

The heretical theory of a succession of momentary objects from all eternity, as causing the soul's bondage, rejected. Aph. 27. [The bondage] thereof, moreover, is not caused by any influence of objects from all eternity.

a. 'Thereof,' i.e., of the soul. An eternal influence of objects, an influence of objects the effect of which, in the shape of a continued stream, has had no commencement,—not by this, either, is it possible that the bondage [of the soul] has been occasioned: such is the meaning.²

b. He states the reason of this [impossibility]:³

⁵ Aniruddha has - भेट्, 'division,' in place of - व्यवधान॰, separation.' Ed. A thing cannot act where it is not.

Aph. 28. Also [in my opinion, as well as in yours, apparently], between the external and the internal there is not the relation of influenced and influencer; because there is a local separation; as there is between him that stays at Srughna and him that stays at Pátaliputra.

a. In the opinion of these [persons whose theory we are at present objecting to], the soul is circumscribed, residing entirely within the body; and that which is thus within cannot stand in the relation of the influenced and the influencer, as regards an external object. Why? Because they are separated in regard to place; like two persons the one of whom remains in Srughna and the other in Pátaliputra: such is the meauing. Because the affection which we call 'influence' (vásaná) is seen only when there is conjunction, such as that of madder and the cloth to which it gives its colour], or that of flowers and the flower-basket¹ [to which they impart their odour.]

b. By the word 'also' the absence of conjunction [between the soul and objects (see § 15)], &c., which he himself holds, is connected³ [with the matter of the present aphorism].

' तन्मते परिच्छिन्नो देहान्तरस्य एवात्मा तस्या-भ्यन्तरस्य न बाह्यविषयेख सहेापरज्योापरज्ञक-भावेाऽपि संभवति । कुतः । सुग्नस्थपाटलिपुच-स्थयेारिव देशव्यवधानादित्यर्थः । संयोगे सत्यव हि वासनाख्य उपरागेा दृष्टो यथा मज्जिष्ठावस्त-योर्थथा वा पुष्पपुटकयोरिति ॥

d. But then [these heretics may reply], 'The influence of objects [on the soul] may be asserted, because there is a contact with the object; inasmuch as the soul, according to us, goes to the place of the object, just as the senses, according to Your Worship.' Therefore he declares [as follows]:

दयोरेकदेशलव्यापरागान व्यवस्था॥ २९॥

On the heretical view, the free soul would be equally liable to bondage. Aph. 29. [It is impossible that the soul's bondage should arise] from an influence received in the same place [where the object is; because, in that case], there would be no distinction between the two, [the bond and the free].

a. To complete the sense, we must supply as follows: 'It is impossible that the bondage should arise from an influence received in one and the same place with the object.' Why? Because there would be no distinction between the two, the soul bound and the soul free; because bondage would [in that case] befall the liberated soul, also; [the free soul, according to this hypothesis, being just as likely to come across objects as any other]: such is the meaning.³

a. But then [the heretic, admitting the principle that the merit or demerit of an act belongs entirely to the agent, may urge that], as the son is benefited by ceremonies in regard to a son, such as that [ceremony (see Colebrooke's 'Hindú Law,' Vol. III., p. 104) celebrated] in anticipation of conception, which [no doubt] belongs to the father [who performs the ceromonies, to propitiate the gods], in like manner there may be an influence of objects on the experiencer [say, the soul of to-day], through the 'unseen' [merit or demerit] that belongs even to a different subject [say, the soul of yesterday]: such is the meaning¹ [of the heretic].

b. He refutes this, by showing that the illustration is not a fact :²

नास्ति हितव स्थिर एक ज्ञात्मा येा गर्भाधानादि-ना ै संस्क्रियेत '॥ ३३ ॥

This will not help the heretic's argument. Aph. 33. [Your illustration proves nothing;] for, in that case, there is no one permanent soul which could be consecrated by the ceremonies in anticipation of conception, &c.

a. 'In that case,' i.e., on thy theory, too, the benefit of the son, by [means of the performance of]¹ the ceremonies in anticipation of conception, &c., could not take place; 'for,' i.e., because, on that theory, there is not one [self-identical] soul, continuing from the [time of] conception to birth, which could be consecrated [by the ceremonies in question], so as to be a fit subject for the duties that pertain to the time subsequent to birth [such as the investiture with the sacred thread, for which the young Bráhman would not be a fit subject, if the ceremonies in anticipation of his conception had been omitted]: and thus your illustration is not a real one,² [on your own theory: it is not a thing that you can assert as a fact].

b. And, according to my theory, also, your illustration is not a fact; seeing that it is possible that the benefit to the son should arise from the 'unseen' [merit] deposited in the son by means of the ceremony regarding the son: for it is an implied tenet [of my school], that it [the soul] is permanent [in its self-identity]; and there is the injunction³ [of Manu, (Ch. II., v. 26), with regard to the ceremonies in question, which proceeds on the same grounds].

Some other heretic may encounter us, on the strength of [the argument here next stated, viz.,] 'But then, since bondage, also, [like everything else] is momentary, let this bondage have nothing determinate for its cause, or nothing at all for its cause,'¹ [which view of matters is propounded in the next aphorism]:

स्थिरकार्यासिडेः स्रणिकलम् ॥ ३४ ॥

Whether bondage may not be momentary, and so require no cause. Aph. 34. Since there is no such thing as a permanent result [on the heretical view], the momentariness [of bondage, also, is to be admitted].

a. 'Of bondage': this must be supplied, [to complete the aphorism].²

b. And thus the point relied on is, that it [i.e., bondage] have no cause at all. And so this is the application [of the argument, viz.]:

- (1) Bondage, &c., is momentary;
- (2) Because it exists,
- (3) [Everything that exists is momentary,] as the apex of the lamp-flame, or the like.³

'ननु वन्धस्यापि क्षणिकत्वादनियतकारणको-ऽभावकारणको वा बन्धे।ऽस्तित्याश्ययेनापरा ना-स्तिकः प्रत्यवतिष्ठते ॥

c. And [continues the heretic,] this [reason, viz., 'existence'] does not extend unduly ¹ [as you may object,] to the case of a jar, or the like; because that, also [in my opinion], is like the subject in dispute, [in being momentary]. This [in fact] is precisely what is asserted in the expression, 'since there is no such thing as a permanent result'⁴ [§34].

d. He objects³ [to this heretical view]:

न प्रत्यभिज्ञाबाधात् ॥ ३५ ॥

The fact of recognition proves that things are not momentary. Aph. 35. No, [things are not momentary in their duration]; for the absurdity of this is proved by recognition.

a. That is to say: nothing is momentary; because the absurdity of its being momentary follows from the opposite argument [to that under $\S34$. b.], taken from such facts of recognition as, 'what I saw, that same do I touch,' [an argument which may be stated as follows], viz.:

(1) Bondage, &c., is permanent;

(2) Because it exists,

That things are momentary is contradicted by Scripture and reasoning. Aph. 36. And [things are not momentary;] because this is contradicted by Scripture and by reasoning.

a. That is to say: nothing is momentary; because the general principle, that the whole world, consisting of effects and causes, is momentary, is contradicted by such texts as this, viz., '[All] this, O ingenuous one, was antecedently existing,' and by such Scriptural and other arguments as this, viz., 'How should what exists proceed from the non-existent?'²

That is to say: the general principle of the momentariness [of all things] is denied; because this momentary character does not [in fact] belong to the apex of the lamp-flame, &c., the instance [on which thou, heretic, dost ground thy generalization, (\S 34. b.)]. Moreover, thou quite errest in regard to momentariness, in that instance, from not taking account of the minute and numerous instants [really included in a duration which seems to thee momentary]: such is the import.¹

If things were momentary, there could be no relation of cause and effect. b. Moreover, if the momentary duration, &c., [of things] be asserted, then there can be no such thing as the relation of cause and effect, in the case of the earth and the jar, and the like.

And you must not say that there is no such thing as that [relation of cause and effect]; because it is proved to be a reality by the fact that, otherwise, there would be no such thing as the efforts of him who desires an effect, [and who, therefore, sets in operation the causes adapted to its production]. With reference to this, he declares [as follows]:²

a. Let us ask, does the relation of product and [material] cause exist between the earth and the jar, as simultaneously coming into [their supposed momentary] existence, or as successive? Not the first; because there is nothing to lead to such an inference, and because we should not [in that case] find the man, who wants a jar, operating with earth, &c., [with a view to the jar's subsequent production]. Neither is it the last; in regard to which he declares [as follows] :¹

A product cannot survive its substantial cause. Aph. 39. Because, when the antecedent departs, the consequent is unfit [to arise, and survive it].

a. The relation of cause and effect is, further, inconsistent with the theory of the momentary duration of things; because, at the time when the antecedent, i. e., the cause, departs, the consequent, i. e., the product, is 'unfit,' i. e., is not competent to arise; because, that is to say, a product is cognized only by its inhering in [and being substantially identical with, however formally different from,] its substantial cause,¹ [and is incapable, therefore, of surviving it].

b. With reference to this same [topic, viz., the] substantial cause, he mentions another [the converse] objection² [to the theory of the momentary duration of things]:

The coexistence of substance and product is impossible, if things be momentary. Aph. 40. Moreover, not [on the theory of the momentary duration of things, can there be such a relation as that of cause and effect]; because, while the one [the antecedent] exists, the other [the consequent] is incompatible, because the two keep always asunder.³

a. To complete [the aphorism], we must say, 'moreover, [on the theory objected to], there can be no such relation as that of cause and effect; because, at the time when the antecedent exists, the consequent cannot coexist with it, the two being mutually exclusive.'⁴ The two suggesters of the relation of cause and effect, in product and sub

b. But then, [the heretic may say, do not let the coexistence of substance and product be insisted upon, as indispensable to the causal relation between the two, but] 'let the nature of a cause belong to the substantial cause, ¹ I have inserted the words 'in product and substance.' Ed.

Antecedence to the product does not distinguish the Matter from the Iustrument. Aph. 41. If there were merely antecedence, then there would be no determination [of a substantial or material cause, as distinguished from an instrumental cause].

a. And it could not be determined that this was the substance [of this or that product], on the granting of nothing more than its antecedence [to the product]; because antecedence constitutes no distinction between it and the instrumental causes; for, [as we need scarcely remind you], that there is a distinction between instrumental and substantial causes, the whole world is agreed: such is the meaning.²

The question whether anything exists besides Thought. b. Other heretics say: 'Since nothing [really] exists, except Thought, neither does Bondage; just as the things of a dream [have no real exist-

न विज्ञानमाचं बाह्यप्रतीतेः ॥ ४२ ॥

We have the evidence of Intuition for the External, as well as for the Internal. Aph. 42. Not Thought alone exists; because there is the intuition of the external.

a. That is to say: the reality is not Thought alone; because external objects, also, are proved to exist, just as Thought is, by intuition.²

b. But then [these heretics may rejoin], 'From the example of intuitive perception in dreams [see Butler's 'Analogy,' Part I., Ch. I.], we find this [your supposed evidence of objective reality] to exist, even in the absence of objects!' To this he replies:³

तत्मावे तदभावाच्छून्यं तर्हि ॥ ४३ ॥

The denial of the external amounts to Nihulism. Aph. 43. Then, since, if the one does not exist, the other does not exist, there is a void, [i.e., nothing exists at all].

' छपरे नास्तिका छाडुः। विज्ञानातिरिक्तव-स्त्वभावेन बन्धोऽपि स्वप्नपदार्थवत्। छतोऽत्यन्त-मिथ्यालेन न तच कारणमस्तीति तन्मतमपा-करोति॥

³ ननु स्वप्नप्रतीतिदृष्टान्तेन विषयाभावेऽपि तदुपपत्तिरिति । तचाह ॥ a. That is to say: if external things do not exist, then a mere void offers itself. Why? Because, if the external does not exist, then thought does not exist; for it is intuition that proves the objective: and, if the intuition of the external did not establish the objective, then the intuition of thought, also, would not establish [the existence of] thought.¹

b. 'Then let the reality be a mere void; and, therefore, the searching for the cause of Bondage is unfitting, just because a void is all:' with such a proposal [as recorded in the next aphorism] does [some one who may claim the title of] the very crest-gem of the heretics rise up in opposition:²

गून्यं तन्वं भावेा विनश्यति वस्तुधर्मलादिना-शस्य ॥ ४४ ॥

The heretic goes the length of asserting sheer Nihilism. Aph. 44. The reality is a void: what is perishes; because to perish is the habit of things.

a. The void alone [says this prince of heretics, or the fact that nothing exists at all] is the reality, [or the only

ै छस्तु तर्हि शून्यमेव तत्त्वमतश्व बन्धकारणा-न्वेषणमयुक्तं तुच्छलादिति नास्तिकशिरोमणिः प्रत्यवतिष्ठते॥ truth]. Since everything that exists perishes, and that which is perishable is false, as is a dream, therefore, as of all things the beginnings and endings are merely nonentities, Bondage, &c., in the midst [of any beginning and ending], has merely a momentary existence,—is phenomenal, and not real. Therefore, who can be bound by what? This [question] is what we rest upon. The reason assigned for the perishableness of whatever exists is, 'because to perish is the habit of things;' because to perish is the very nature of things: but nothing continues, after quitting its own nature; [so that nothing could continue, if it ceased to perish]: such is the meaning.¹

b. He rejects² [this heretical view]:

ञ्जपवादमाचमबुद्वानाम् ॥ ४५ ॥

Nihilism d-nied; as the indiscerptible is indestructible. Aph. 45. This is a mere counterassertion of unintelligent persons.

a. 'Of unintelligent persons,' i.e., of blockheads, this is 'a mere counter-assertion,' i.e., a mere idle counterassertion, that a thing must needs be perishable, because it exists; [and such an assertion is idle,] because things that are not made up of parts, since there is no cause of the destruction of such things, cannot perish.¹

b. [But] what need of many words? It is not the fact, that even products perish; [for] just as, by the cognition that 'the jar is old ' [we mean that it has passed from the condition of new to that of old], so, too, by such a cognition as this, that 'the jar has passed away,' it is settled only that the jar, or the like, is in the condition of having passed away.²

c. He states another objection³ [to the heretical view]:

उभयपद्यसमानद्यमपि⁴॥ ४६ ॥

Nihilism is open to the same objections as both the Momentary and the Ideal theories. Aph. 46. Moreover, this [nihilistic theory is not a right one]; because it has the same fortune as both the views [which were confuted just before].

े दूषणान्तरमाह ॥

Aniruddha, according to the MSS. which I have seen, reads - كَظَارَ Ed. a. This view, moreover [§ 44], is not a good one; because it has the same fortune as, i. e., is open to similar reasons for rejection as, the theory that external things are momentary [§ 26. b.], and as the theory that nothing exists besides Thought [§ 41. b]. The reason for the rejection of the theory that things are momentary in their duration, viz. [as stated in § 35], the fact of recognition, &c., [which is, at least, as little consistent with Nihilism as it is with the momentary duration of things], and the reason for the rejection of the theory that nothing exists besides Thought, viz. [as stated in § 42], the intuition of the external, &c., apply equally here [in the case of Nihilism]: such is the import.¹

b. Moreover, as for the opinion which is accepted by these [heretics], viz., 'Let the mere void [of absolute nonentity] be the soul's aim [and summum bonum], since herein consist at once the cessation of pain [which cannot continue, when there is absolutely nothing], and also the means thereof [since there can be no further means required for the removal of anything, if it be settled that the thing positively does not exist],' this, too, can hardly be : so he declares [as follows]:²

' श्वणिकवाह्यपश्चेण विज्ञानमाचपश्चेण सह समानश्चेमत्वात्नुस्यनिरसनहेतुकत्वादयमपि पश्चो न सम्यक्। श्वणिकपश्चनिरासहेतुः प्रत्यभिज्ञा-दिर्विज्ञानपश्चनिरासहेतुर्वाह्यप्रतीत्यादिश्वाचापि समान इति भावः॥

ञ्चपुरुषार्थत्वमुभयथा ॥ ४९ ॥

The soul's aim is not annihilation.

Aph. 47. In neither way [whether as a means, or as an end,] is this [annihilation] the soul's aim.

a. 'Let the void [of mere nonentity] be the soul's aim, whether as consisting in the cessation of pain, or as presenting the means for the cessation of pain,' [says the heretic. And this cannot be; because the [whole] world agrees, that the aim of the soul consists in the joys, &c., that shall abide in it; that is to say, because [they hold, while] you do not hold, that there is a permanent soul, [(see § 33) in respect of which the liberation or beatification would be possible, or even predicable].¹

b. Now [certain] other things, also, entertained, as causes of [the soul's] bondage, by [imperfectly instructed] believers, remaining over and above those [proposed by unbelievers, and] already rejected, are to be set aside :³

न गतिविशेषात् ॥ ४८ ॥

It is by no movement that the soul gets into bondage. Aph. 48. Not from any kind of motion [such as its entrance into a body, does the soul's bondage result].

 δ . The meaning is, that the soul's bondage, moreover, does not result from any sort of motion, in the shape, for instance, of its entrance into a body.²

c. He states a reason for this :3

निष्क्रियस्य तद्संभवात् ॥ ४९ ॥

What is all-pervading does not change place.

Aph. 49. Because this is impossible for what is inactive, [or, in other words, without motion].

a. That is to say: because this is impossible, i.e., motion is impossible, in the case of the soul, which is inactive, [because] all-pervading, [and, therefore, incapable of changing its place].⁴

b. But then [the objector may say], 'Since, in the books of Scripture and of law, we hear of its going and coming into this world and the other world, let soul be [not all-pervading, as you allege, but] merely limited [in its extent] : and to this effect, also, is the text, 'Of the size

Were the soul limited, it might be perishable. Aph. 50. [We cannot admit that the soul is other than all-pervading; because] by its being limited, since it would come under the same conditions as jars, &c., there would be a contradiction to our tenet [of its imperishableness].

a. That is to say: and, if the soul were admitted to be, like a jar, or the like, limited, i.e. circumscribed [in dimension], then, since it would resemble a jar, or the like, in being made up of parts, and [hence] in being perishable, &c., this would be contrary to our settled principle,⁸ [that the soul is imperishable].

b. He now justifies the text [see § 49. b.] referring to the motion ⁴ [of the soul, by showing that the motion is not really of the soul, but of an accessory]:

of an attendant;¹ as in the case of the Ether [or Space, which moves not, though we talk of the space enclosed in a jar, as moving with the jar].

a. Since there are such proofs of the soul's unlimitedness, as the declaration that 'It is eternal, omnipresent, permanent,² the text³ regarding its motion is to be explained as having reference to a movement pertaining [not to the soul, but] to an attendant; for there is the text, 'As the Ether [or space] included in a jar, when the jar is removed, [in this case] the jar may be removed, but not the space; and in like manner is the soul, which is like the sky, [incapable of being moved]';⁴ and because we may conclude that the motion [erroneously supposed to belong to the soul (49. δ .),] belongs to Nature [see Vedánta Aphorisms, Part I, § 4. l], from such maxims³ as this, that 'Nature does the works the fruits of which are blissful or baneful;

The bondage of the soul is no result of any merit or demerit. Aph. 52. Nor, moreover, [does the bondage of the soul result from the merit or demerit arising] from works; because these belong not thereto.

a. That is to say: the bondage of the soul does not arise directly from the 'unseen' [merit or demerit] occasioned by works.¹ Why? Because this is no property thereof, i.e., because this [merit or demerit (see § 16. a.)] is no property of the soul.²

b. But then [some one may say], 'Let it be that the bondage resulting from the 'unseen,' i.e., the merit [or demerit] even of another, should attach to a different person;' whereupon he declares [as follows]:³

• अतिप्रसक्तिरन्यधर्मत्वे ॥ ५३ ॥

Else, bondage might cling even to the emancipated. Aph. 53. If the case were otherwise [than as I say], then it [the bondage of the soul] might extend unduly, [even to the emancipated].

a. That is to say: if the case were otherwise, if bondage and its cause were under other conditions [than we have declared them to be], then there might be an undue extension; bondage would befall even the emancipated,⁵ [for the same reasons as those stated under § 16. a.].

b. What need of so much [prolixity]? He states a general objection why the bondage of soul cannot result from any one or other [of these causes], beginning with its essence [see § 6. b.], and ending with its [supposed] works [see § 16]; inasmuch as it is contrary to Scripture,¹ [that any one of these should be the cause]:

निर्गणदिष्युतिविरोधश्वेति ॥ ५४ ॥

A single text of Scripture upsets, equally, all the heretical notions of the soul's relation to bondaye. Aph. 54. And this [opinion, that the bondage of the soul arises from any of these causes alleged by the heretics,] is contrary to such texts as the one that declares it [the soul] to be without qualities : and so much for that point.

a. And, if the bondage of the soul arose from any one or other of those [supposed causes already treated of,] among which its essential character [§ 6. b.] is the first, this would be contradictory to such texts as, 'Witness, intelligent, alone, and without the [three] qualities [is the soul:'² such is the meaning.³

b. The expression 'and so much for that point' means,

' किं बढ़ना । स्वभावादिकर्मान्तैरन्येन वा केनापि पुरुषस्य बन्धोत्पत्तिर्न घटते श्रुतिविरोधा-दिति साधारणं बाधकमाह ॥

ै स्वभावाद्यन्यतमेन पुरुषस्य बन्धेालत्ती साक्षी चेता केवलो निर्गुणश्रेत्यादिश्रुतिविरोधश्रेत्यर्थः ॥ that the investigation of the cause of the bondage [of the soul] here closes.¹

c. The case, then, stands thus: since [all] other [theories] are overthrown by the declaratory aphorisms, 'There would be no fitness in the enjoining' [see § 7], &c., it is ascertained that the immediate cause of the bondage [of the soul] is just the conjunction of Nature and of the soul.²

d. But then, in that case, [some one may say], this conjunction of Nature and of the soul [\S 54. c.], whether it be essential, or adventitiously caused by Time or something else [\S 5. b.], must occasion the bondage even of the *eman*cipated. Having pondered this doubt, he disposes of it [as follows]:⁸

तयोगोऽणविवेकान्न 'समानत्वम् ॥ ५५ ॥

How the true cause of bondage affects not the emancipated. Aph. 55. Moreover, the conjunction thereof does not, through non-discrimination, take place [in the case of the emancipated]; nor is there a parity,

ैननु तत्र प्रकृतिपुरुषसंयोगेाऽपि स्वाभावि-कले कालादिनिमित्तकले वा मुक्तस्यापि बन्धा-पादक इत्याण्डद्य समाधत्ते ॥

⁴ तद्योग, the reading which I find in MSS. of Aniruddha, seems to be indefensible. Ed.

a. 'The conjunction thereof,' i.e., the conjunction of Nature and of the soul; this conjunction, moreover, does not take place again 'through non-discrimination,' i.e., through the want of a discrimination [between Nature and soul] in the emancipated, [who do discriminate, and who thus avoid the conjunction which others, failing to discriminate, incur, and thus fall into bondage]: such is the meaning. And thus the emancipated and the bound are not on a level, [under the circumstances stated at § 54. c.]: such is the import.¹

The true cause of bondage, in other words, non-discrimination. Aph. 56. Bondage arises from the error [of not discriminating between Nature and soul].

a. Having thus declared the cause of that [bondage]

² These words, a bad reading of the 24th Aphorism of Book III., were pointed out, by me, as having, with the sentence of comment attached to them, no place here; and Dr. Ballantyne, when he republished the Sánkhya Aphorisms in the Bibliotheca Indica, omitted them. Hence the brackets now inserted, and my alteration of the numbering of the Aphorisms throughout the remainder of Book I. Ed.

which is to be got rid of, he declares the means of getting rid of it $!^{1}$

नियतकारणात्तदुच्छित्तिर्ध्वान्तवत् ॥ ५६ ॥

Non-discrimination is removable by discrimination alone. Aph. 56. The removal of it is to be effected by the necessary means, just like darkness.

a. The necessary means, established throughout the world, in such cases as 'shell-silver' [i.e., a pearl-oyster-shell mistaken for silver], viz., the immediacy of discrimination, by this alone is 'its removal,' i.e., the removal of the non-diserimination [between Nature and soul], to be effected, and not by works, or the like: such is the meaning: just as darkness, the dark, is removed by light alone,² [and by no other means].

b. 'But then [some one may say], if merely the nondiscrimination of Nature and soul be, through the conjunction [of the two, consequent on the want of discrimination], the cause of bondage, and if merely the discrimination of the two be the cause of liberation, then there would be liberation, even while there remained the conceit of [one's possessing] a body, &c.; and this is contrary to Scripture,

a. By reason of the non-discrimination of Nature from the soul, what non-discrimination of other things there is, such as the non-discrimination of the understanding [as something other than the soul], this necessarily ceases, on the cessation of the non-discrimination of Nature; because, when the non-discrimination of the understanding, for example, [as something other than soul,] does occur, it is based on the non-discrimination [from soul] of that cause to which there is none antecedent [viz., Nature]; since the non-discrimination of an effect [and the 'understanding' is an effect or product of Nature,] is, itself, an effect,² [and will, of course, cease, with the cessation of its cause].

b. The state of the case is this: as, when the soul has been discriminated from the body, it is impossible but that it should be discriminated from the colour and other [properties], the effects of the body, [which is the substantial cause of its own properties]; so, by parity of reasoning, from the departure of the cause, when soul, in its character of unalterableness, &c., has been discriminated from Nature, it is impossible that there should remain a conceit of [the soul's being any of] the products thereof [i. e., of Nature], such as the 'understanding,' and the like, which have the character of being modifications¹ [of primal Nature, while the soul, on the other hand, is a thing unalterable].

c. But then [some one may say], 'What proof is there that there is a conceit [entertained by people in general,] of a Nature [or primal principle] different from the conceit of an 'understanding,' &c., [which, you tell us, are products of this supposed first principle]? For all the various conceits [that the soul falls into], such as, 'I am ignorant,' and so on, can be accounted for on the ground simply of an 'understanding,' &c., [without postulating a primal Nature which is to assume the shape of an 'understanding,' &c.]:'

' यथा शरीरादात्मनि विविक्ते शरीरकार्येषु रूपादिष्वविवेकाे न संभवति तथा कूटस्यत्वादि-धर्मैः प्रधानात्पुरुषे विविक्ते तत्कार्येषु परिणामा-दिधर्मकेषु बुद्यादिष्वभिमानेा न स्थातुमुत्सहते तुल्यन्यायात्कारणनाशाचेति भावः ॥ well, if any one says this, I reply, 'no;' because, unless there were such a thing as Nature, we could not account for such conceits as the following, viz., 'Having died, having died, again, when there is a creation, let me be a denizen of Paradise, and not of hell;' because no products, such as the 'understanding,' when they have perished, can be created anew,¹ [any more than 'a gold-bracelet, melted down, can be reproduced, though another like it may be produced from the materials].

The soul's confounding itself with Nature is logically antecedent to its confounding itself with anything else. d. Moreover, it is inadmissible to say that men's conceit of [the identity of themselves with their] 'understanding,' &c., is [the primary cause of the soul's bondage, and is] not preceded by anything; because 'understanding' and the rest [as you will not deny] are effects. Now, while it is to be expected that there should be some predetermining agency to establish a conceit of [ownership in, or of one's identity with,] any effects, it is clear that it is a conceit of [ownership, &c.,] in respect of the cause, and nothing else, that must be the predetermining agency: for we see this in ordinary life; and our theories are bound to conform [deferentially] to experience. For [to explain,] we see, in ordinary life, that the conceit of [the ownership of] the grain, &c., pro-

' ननु बुद्याद्यभिमानातिरिक्ते प्रधानाभिमाने किं प्रमाणमहमज्ञ इत्याद्यखिलाभिमानानां बुद्धा-दिविषयत्वेनैवेापपत्तेरिति चेच्न मृत्वा मृत्वा पुनः सृष्टी स्वर्गी स्यां मा च नारकीत्याद्यभिमानानां प्रधानविषययत्वं विनानुपपत्तेरतीतानां बुद्धाद्य-खिलकार्याणां पुनः सृष्ट्यभावात् ॥ duced by a field, results from the conceit of [the ownership of] the field; and, from the conceit of [the ownership of] gold, the conceit of [the ownership of] the bracelets, or other things, formed of that gold; and, by the removal of these [i.e., the removal of the logically antecedent conceits, that the field, or the gold, is one's property], there is the removal of those,¹ [i.e., the removal of the conceits that the grain, &c., and that the bracelets, &c., the correspouding products or effects of the field and of the gold, are one's property: and so the soul will cease to confound itself with the 'understanding,' when it ceases to confound itself with Nature, of which the 'understanding ' is held to be a product].

e. [And, if it be supposed that we thus lay ourselves open to the charge of a regressus in infinitum, seeing that, whatever we may assign as the first cause, we may, on our own principles, be asked what was the 'predetermining agency' in regard to it; or if it be supposed that we are chargeable with reasoning in a circle, when we hold that the soul's confounding itself with Nature is the cause of

' किं च बुद्यादिषु पुरुषाणामनिमानोऽना-दिर्वक्तुं न शक्यते बुद्धादीनां कार्यवात् । कार्येष्व-भिमानव्यवस्थार्थं नियामकाकाङ्खायां कारणा-भिमान एव नियामकतया सिद्धति लोके दृष्टत्वा-कल्प्पनायाश्व दृष्टानुसारित्वात् । दृष्टो हि लोके छेचानिमानात्स्वेचजन्यधान्यादिष्वभिमानः सुव-णाभिमानात्तज्जन्यकटकादिष्वभिमानस्तयोर्निवृ -स्या च तयोर्निवृत्तिरिति ॥ its continuing so to confound itself, and its continuing so to confound itself is, reciprocally, the cause why it confounds itself; we reply, that] there is no occasion to look for any other 'predetermining agency,' in the case of the conceit of [the identity of the soul with] Nature, or in the case of the self-continuance¹ thereof, [i.e., of that error of confounding one's self with Nature]; because [these two are alike] without antecedent, like seed and sprout,² [of which it is needless to ask which is the first; the old puzzle, 'which was first, the acorn, or the oak ?' being a frivolous question].

f. But then [some one may say], if we admit the soul's bondage [at one time], and its freedom [at another], and its discrimination [at one time], and its non-discrimination [at another], then this is in contradiction to the assertion [in § 19], that it is 'ever essentially a pure and free intelligence;' and it is in contradiction to such texts as this, viz., 'The absolute truth is this, that neither is there destruction [of the soul], nor production [of it]; nor is it bound, nor is it an effecter [of any work], nor is it desirous of liberation, nor is it, indeed, liberated; [seeing that that cannot desire or obtain liberation, which was never bound]'³ This [charge of inconsistency] he repels :⁴

Whether Testimony, or Inference, without Perception, might not avail to dissipate the soul's bondage. b. But then, if bondage, &c., as regards the soul, be merely verbal, let them be set aside by hearing [that they are merely verbal], or by argument [establishing that they are so]. Why, in the Scripture and the Law, is there enjoined, as the cause of liberation, a discriminative knowledge [of Soul, as distinguished from Non-soul], going the length of immediate cognition? To this he replies:¹

युक्तितेाऽपि न बाध्यते दिङ्कूढवदपरासाटृते ॥ ५९ ॥

The truth must be directly discerned, and not merely accepted on the ground of Testimony, or of Inference. Aph. 59. Moreover, it [the nondiscrimination of Soul from Nature,] is not to be removed by argument; as that of the person perplexed about the points of the compass [is not to be a. By 'argument' we mean thinking. The word 'moreover' is intended to aggregate [or take in, along with 'argument'] 'testimony,'² [or verbal authority, which, no more than 'argument,' or inference, can remove the evil, which can be removed by nothing short of direct intuitive perception of the real state of the case].

b. That is to say: the bondage, &c., of the soul though [granted to be] merely verbal, are not to be removed by merely hearing, or inferring, without immediate cognition, without directly perceiving; just as the contrariety in regard to the [proper] direction, though merely verbal [as resulting from misdirection], in the case of ¹ a person who is mistaken as to the points of the compass [and hence as to his own bearings], is not removed by testimony, or by inference, without immediate cognition, i. e., without [his] directly perceiving² [how the points of the compass really lie, to which immediate perception 'testimony,' or 'inference,' may conduce, but the necessity of which these media, or instruments of knowledge, cannot supersede].

c. Or it [Aph. 59] may be explained as follows, viz.: But then, [seeing that] it is declared, by the assertion [in Aph. 56], viz., that 'The removal of it is to be effected by the necessary means,' that knowledge, in the shape of discrimination [between Soul and Nature], is the remover of non-discrimination [in regard to the matter in question], tell us, is that knowledge of a like nature with the hearing

[of Testimony], &c.? Or is it something peculiar? A reply to this being looked for, he enounces the aphorism [§ 59]: 'Moreover, it is not to be removed by argument,' &c. That is to say: non-discrimination is not excluded, is not cut off, by argument, or by testimony, unless there be discrimination as an immediate perception; just as is the case with one who is bewildered in regard to [his] direction ; because the only thing to remove an immediate error is an immediate individual perception¹ [of the truth. For example, a man with the jaundice perceives white objects as if they were yellow. He may infer that the piece of chalk which he looks at is really white ; or he may believe the testimony of a friend, that it is white; but still nothing will remove his erroneous perception of yellowness in the chalk, except a direct perception of its whiteness].

d. Having thus, then, set forth the fact that Liberation results from the immediate discrimination [of Soul from Nature], the next thing to be set forth is the 'discrimination'' [here referred to].

e. This being the topic, in the first place, since only if Soul and Nature exist, liberation can result from the discrimination of the one from the other, therefore that 'instrument of right knowledge' (pramána) which establishes the existence of these [two imperceptible realities] is [first] to be set forth :²

ञ्चचाक्षुषाणामनुमानेन वाेधो धूमादिभिरिव वह्रे ॥ ६० ॥

The evidence for things imperceptible. The evidence for things imperceptible. as that of fire [when not directly perceptible,] is by means of smoke, &c.

a. That is to say: 'of things imperceptible,' i.e., of things not cognizable by the senses, e.g., Nature and the Soul, 'the knowledge,' i. e., the fruit lodged in the soul, is brought about by means of that instrument of right knowledge [which may be called] 'Inference' (anumána), [but which (see Nyáya Aphorisms, I., \S 5) is, more correctly, 'the recognition of a Sign']; as [the knowledge that there is] fire [in such and such a locality, where we cannot directly

b. Moreover, it is to be understood that that which is [true, but yet is] not established by 'Inference,' is established by Revelation. But, since 'Inference' is the chief [among the instruments of knowledge], in this [the Sánkhya] System, 'Inference' only is laid down [in the aphorism,] as the chief thing; but Revelation is not disregarded² [in the Sánkhya system; as will be seen from Aph. 88 of this Book].

c. He [next] exhibits the order of creation of those things among which Nature is the first, and the relation of cause and effect [among these, severally], preparatorily to the argument that will be [afterwards] stated:³

The twenty-five Realities enumerated. Aph. 61. Nature (prakriti) is the state of equipoise of Goodness (sattwa), Passion (rajas), and Darkness (tamas):

from Nature [proceeds] Mind (mahat); from Mind, Selfconsciousness (ahankára); from Self-consciousness, the five Subtile Elements (tan-mátru), and both sets [external and internal,] of Organs (indriya); and, from the Subtile Elements, the Gross Elements (sthúla-bhúta). [Then there is] Soul (purusha). Such is the class of twenty-five.

a. 'The state of equipoise' of the [three] things called 'Goodness,' &c., is their being neither less nor more [one than another]; that is to say, the state of not being [developed into] an effect [in which one or other of them predominates]. And thus 'Nature' is the triad of 'Qualities' (guna), distinct from the products [to which this triad gives rise]: such is the complete meaning.^{2 3}

b. These things, viz., 'Goodness,' &c., [though spoken of as the three Qualities], are not 'Qualities' (guna) in the Vaiścshika sense of the word; because [the 'Qualities' of the Vaišeshika system have, themselves, no qualities (see Kaņāda's 16th Aph.); while] these have the qualities of Conjunction, Disjunction, Lightness, Force,¹ Weight, &c.² In this [Sánkhya] system, and in Scripture, &c., the word 'Quality' (guna) is employed [as the name of the three things in question],³ because they are subservient to Soul [and, therefore, hold a secondary rank in the scale of being], and because they form the cords [which the word guna also signifies], viz., 'Mind,' &c., which consist of the three [socalled] 'Qualities,' and which bind, as a [cow, or other] brute-beast, the Soul.⁴ ⁵

c. Of this [Nature] the principle called 'the great one' (mahat), viz., the principle of 'Understanding' (buddhi), is the product. 'Self-consciousness' is a conceit [of separate personality]. Of this there are two products, (1) the

The two sets of 'Organs,' through their division into the external and the internal, are of eleven kinds. The products of the 'Subtile Elements' are the five 'Gross Elements.' But 'Soul' is something distinct from either product or cause. Such is the class of twenty-five, the aggregate of things. That is to say, besides these there is nothing.¹

d. He [next], in [several] aphorisms, declares the order of the inferring² [of the existence of these principles, the one from the other:

स्यूलात्मज्जतन्मात्रस्य ॥ ६२ ॥

The existence of the 'Subtile Elements' is inferred from that of the 'Gross.' Aph. 62. [The knowledge of the existence] of the five 'Subtile Elements' is [by inference,] from the 'Gross Elements.'

a. 'The knowledge, by inference,' so much is supplied,' [to complete the aphorism, from Aph. 60].

b. Earth, &c., the 'Gross Elements,' are proved to exist, by Perception; [and] thereby [i.e., from that Perception; for Perception must precede Inference, as stated in Gotama's 5th Aphorism,] are the 'Subtile Elements' inferred, [the $\sigma \tau oix cia \sigma \tau oix ciwv$ of Empedocles]. And so the application [of the process of inference to the case] is as follows:

(1) The Gross Elements, or those which have not reached the absolute limit [of simplification, or of the atomic], consist of things [Subtile Elements, or Atoms,] which have distinct qualities; [the earthy element having the distinctive quality of Odour; and so of the others]:

(2) Because they are gross;

(3) [And everything that is gross is formed of something less gross, or, in other words, more subtile,] as jars, webs, &c.;² [the gross web being formed of the less gross threads; and so of the others].

And thence that of Self-consciousness. Aph. 63. [The knowledge of the existence] of Self-consciousness is [by inference,] from the external and internal [organs], and from these ['Subtile Elements,' mentioned in Aph. 62].

a. By inference from [the existence of] the external and internal organs, and from [that of] these 'Subtile Elements,' there is the knowledge of [the existence of such a principle as] Self-consciousness.¹

b. The application [of the process of inference to the case] is in the following [somewhat circular] manner:

(1) The Subtile Elements and the Organs are made up of things consisting of Self-consciousness:

(2) Because they are products of Self-consciousness:

(3) Whatever is not so [i. e., whatever is not made out of Self-consciousness] is not thus [i. e., is not a product of Self-consciousness]; as the Soul, [which, not being made up thereof, is not a product of it].³

c. But then, if it be thus [i. e., if it be, as the Sánkhyas declare, that all objects, such as jars, are made up of Self-consciousness, while Self-consciousness depends on 'Understanding,' or 'Intellect,' or 'Mind,' the first product of 'Nature' (see Aph. 61)], then [some may object, that], since it would be the case that the Self-consciousness of the potter is the material of the jar, the jar made by him would disappear, on the beatification of the potter, whose internal organ [or 'Understanding'] then surceases.

' बाह्याभ्यन्तराभ्यामिन्द्रियाभ्यां तैस्तन्माचैश्चाहं-कारस्यानुमानेन वोधः ॥

THE SANKHYA APHORISMS.

And this [the objector may go on to say,] is not the case; because another man [after the beatification of the potter,] recognizes that 'This is that same jar^1 [which, you may remember, was fabricated by our deceased acquaintance].'

d. [In reply to this we say,] it is not thus; because, on one's beatification, there is an end of only those modifications of his internal organ [or 'Intellect'] which could be causes [as the jar no longer can be,] of the emancipated soul's experiencing [either good or ill], but not an end of the modifications of intellect in general, nor [an end] of intellect altogether:² [so that we might spare ourselves the trouble of further argument, so far as concerns the objection grounded on the assumption that the intellect of the potter surceases, on his beatification: but we may go further, and admit, for the sake of argument, the surcease of the 'intellect' of the beatified potter, without conceding any necessity for the surcease of his pottery. This alternative theory of the case may be stated as follows]:

e. Or [as Berkeley suggests, in his Principles of Human knowledge, Ch. vi.], let the Self-consciousness of the Deity be the cause why jars and the like [continue to exist], and not the Self-consciousness of the potter, &c.,¹ [who may lose their Self-consciousness, whereas the Deity, the sum of all life, Hiranyagarbha (see Vedánta-śara, § 62), never loses his Self-consciousness, while aught living continues].

तेनान्तः कर गस्य ॥ ६४ ॥

And thence that of Intellect.

Aph. 64. [The knowledge of the existence] of Intellect is [by inference,] from that [Self-consciousness, § 63].

a. That is to say: by inference from [the existence of] 'that,' viz., Self-consciousness, which is a product, there comes the knowledge of 'Intellect' (buddhi), the great 'inner organ' (antahkarana), [hence] called 'the great one' (mahat), [the existence of which is recognized] under the character of the cause of this' [product, viz., Self-consciousness].

b. And so the application [again rather circular, of the process of inference to the case,] is as follows:

(1) The thing called Self-consciousness is made out of the things that consist of the moods of judgment [or mind];

(2) Because it is a thing which is a product of judgment [proceeding in the Cartesian order of cogito, ergo sum; and]

े ऋषवा घटादिष्वपि हिरख्यगभाहंकार एव कारणमस्तू न कुलालाद्यहंकारः ॥

⁸ तेनाहंकारेख कार्येख तत्कारखतया मुख्यस्या-न्तःकरखस्य महदाख्यस्य बुडेरनुमानेन वाेध इत्यर्थः ॥ (3) Whatever is not so [i. e., whatever is not made out of judgment, or mental assurance], is not thus [i. e., is not a product of mental assurance]; as the Soul, [which is not made out of this or of anything antecedent], &c.¹

c. Here the following reasoning is to be understood : Every one, having first determined anything under a concept [i.e., under such a form of thought as is expressed by a general term; for example, that this which presents itself is a jar, or a human body, or a possible action of one kind or other], after that makes the judgment, 'This is I,' or 'This ought to be done by me,' and so forth: so much is quite settled; [and there is no dispute that the fact is as here stated]. Now, having, in the present instance, to look for some cause of the thing called 'Selfconsciousness' [which manifests itself in the various judgments just referred to], since the relation of cause and effect subsists between the two functions [the occasional conception, and the subsequent occasional judgment, which is a function of Self-consciousness], it is assumed, for simplicity, merely that the relation of cause and effect exists between the two substrata to which the [two sets of] functions belong; [and this is sufficient,] because it follows, as a matter of course, that the occurrence of a function of the effect must result from the occurrence of a function of the cause;² [nothing, according to the Sánkhya, being in any

And thence that of Nature.

Aph. 65. [The knowledge of the existence] of Nature is [by inference,] from that ['Intellect,' \S 64].

a. By inference from [the existence of] 'that,' viz., the principle [of Intellect, termed], 'the Great one,' which is a product, there comes the knowledge of [the existence of] Nature, as [its] cause.¹

b. The application [of the process of inference to the case] is as follows:

(1) Intellect, the affections whereof are Pleasure, Pain, and Dulness, is produced from something which has these affections, [those of] Pleasure, Pain, and Dulness:

(2) Because, whilst it is a product [and must, therefore, have arisen from something consisting of that which itself now consists of], it consists of Pleasure, Pain, and Dulness; [and]

मयेदं कर्तव्यमित्यादिरूपेग्रेति तावल्सिडमेव। त-चाहंकारद्रव्यकारणाकाङ्खायां वृत्त्योः कार्यकारण-भावेन तदाश्रययोरेव कार्यकारणभावा लाघवा-न्कल्पते कारणस्य वृत्तिलाभेन कार्यवृत्तिलाभस्या-त्सर्गिकत्वादिति॥

c. For an agreeable woman gives pleasure to her husband, and, therefore, [is known to be mainly made up of, or] partakes of the quality of 'Goodness;' the indiscreet one gives pain to him, and, therefore, partakes of the quality of 'Foulness;' and she who is separated [and perhaps forgotten,] occasions indifference, and so partakes of the quality of 'Darkness.'²

d. And the appropriate refutation [of any objection], in this case, is [the principle], that it is fitting that the qualities of the effect should be [in every case,] in conformity with the qualities of the cause.³

e Now he states how, in a different way, we have [the evidence of] inference for [the existence of] Soul, which is void of the relation of cause and effect that has been mentioned,¹ [in the four preceding aphorisms, as existing between Nature and its various products]:

संहतपरार्थनात्पुरुषस्य ॥ ६६ ॥

The argument for the existence of Soul. Aph. 66. [The existence] of Soul [is inferred] from the fact that the combination [of the principles of Nature into their various effects] is for the sake of another [than unintelligent Nature, or any of its similarly unintelligent products].

a. 'Combination,' i. e., conjunction, which is the cause [of all products; these resulting from the conjunction of their constituent parts]. Since whatever has this quality, as Nature,² Mind, and so on [unlike Soul, which is not made up of parts], is for the sake of some other; for this reason it is understood that Soul exists: such is the remainder,³ [required to complete the aphorism].

b. But the application [of the argument, in this particular case, is as follows]:

(1) The thing in question, viz., Nature the 'Great one,' with the rest [of the aggregate of the unintelligent], has, as its fruit [or end], the [mundane] experiences and the [eventual] Liberation of some other than itself:

' ऋष यथोक्तकार्यकारग्रभावणून्यस्य पुरुषस्य प्रकारान्तरेणानुमानमाह ॥

(2) Because it is a combination [or compages];

(3) [And every combination,] as a couch, or a seat, or the like, [is for another's use, not for its own; and its several component parts render no mutual service].¹

c. Now, in order to establish that it is the cause of all [products], he establishes the eternity of Nature (prakriti):²

मूले मूलाभावादमूलं मूलम् ॥ ६७ ॥

Argument for the eternity of Nature. Aph. 67. Since the root has no root, the root [of all] is rootless.

a. Since 'the root' (múla), i.e., the cause of the twentythree principles, [which, with Soul and the root itself, make up the twenty-five realities recognized in the Sánkhya,] 'has no root,' i.e., has no cause, the 'root,' viz., Nature (pradhána), is 'rootless,' i.e., void of root. That is to say, there is no other cause of Nature; because there would be

' प्रयेागस्तु विवादास्पदं प्रकृतिमहदादिकं स्वेत-रस्य भागापवर्गफलकं संहतलाच्छय्यासनादिव-दिति ॥

^² इदानीं सर्वकारणलेापपत्तये प्रकृतेर्नित्यत्वमु-पपादयति ॥

³ This seems to mean: 'There being no root to a root, the root [or radical principle, in the Sánkhya,] is rootless.'

In several MSS. which I consulted in India I found the strange reading : मूलं मूलाभावादमूलं मूलानाम् I 'The root of roots, since it has no root, is rootless.' This is very like saying that A=A. Ed. a regressus in infinitum,¹ [if we were to suppose another cause, which, by parity of reasoning, would require another cause; and so on without end].

b. He states the argument [just mentioned] in regard to this, [as follows]:²

पारम्पर्येऽप्येकच परिनिष्ठेति संज्ञामाचम् ॥ ६८ ॥

'मूले चयोविंशतितत्त्वानां कारणे मूलाभा-वान्कारणाभावान्मूलं प्रधानममूलं मूलशून्यम् । छनवस्थापत्त्या प्रधानस्य न कारणान्तरमस्ती-त्यर्थः॥

The source of the preceding exposition I have not ascertained. Vijnána has: चयोविंशतितत्त्वानां मूलमुपादानं प्र-धानं मूलग्रून्यमनवस्थापत्त्या तच मूलान्तरा-संभवादित्यर्थः। Nágeśa: मूलं सर्वेषामुपादानं प्र-धानं मूलग्रून्यमनवस्थापत्त्या मूलभूते तच मूला-न्तरासंभवादित्यर्थः। Aniruddha: मूलप्रकृतेर्मूलाभा-वात्कारणाभावादमूलं यन्कारणं तन्मूलम् । सा प्रकृति: । Vedánti Mahádeva: चयोविंशतितत्त्वानां मूले प्रधानेऽनवस्थापत्त्या कारणाभावादकारणं प्रधानमित्यर्थः । Ed.

THE SANKHYA APHORISMS.

The employment of the term Primal Agency, or Nature, is merely to debar the regressus in infinitum. Aph. 68. Even if there be a succession, there is a halt at some one point; and so it is merely a name [that we give to the point in question, when we speak of the root of things, under the

the name of 'Nature'].

a. Since there would be the fault of regressus in infinitum, if there were a succession of causes,—another cause of Nature, and another [cause] of that one, again,—there must be, at last, a halt, or conclusion, at some one point, somewhere or other, at some one, uncaused, eternal thing. Therefore, that at which we stop is the Primal Agency (pra-kriti); for this [word prakriti, usually and conveniently rendered by the term Nature,] is nothing more than a sign to denote the cause which is the root: such is the meaning.¹

b. But then [some Vedántí may object, according to this view of matters], the position that there are just twentyfive realities is not made out; for, in addition to³ the 'Indiscrete' [or primal Nature], which [according to you,] is the cause of Mind,³ another unintelligent principle, named 'Ignorance' [see Vedánta-sára, § 21], presents

² Read 'in connexion with.' Ed.

समानः प्रकृतेईयोः ॥ ६९ ॥

Nature and Soul alike Aph. 69. Alike, in respect of Nature, uncreated. and of both [Soul and Nature, is the argument for the uncreated existence].²

a. In the discussion of the Primal Agent [Nature], the cause which is the root [of all products], the same side is taken by us both, the asserter [of the Sánkhya doctrine] and the opponent [Vedántí]. This may be thus stated : As there is mention, in Scripture, of the production of Nature, so, too, is there of that of Ignorance, in such texts as this, viz. : 'This Ignorance, which has five divisions. was produced from the great Spirit.' Hence it must needs be that a figurative production is intended to be asserted, in respect of one of these [and not the literal production of both; else we should have no root at all]; and, of the two, it is with Nature only that a figurative production, in the shape of a manifestation through conjunction with Soul, &c., is congruous. A production [such as that metaphorical one here spoken of,] the characteristic of which is conjunction is mentioned : for there is mention of [such] a figurative origination of Soul and Nature, in a passage of the Kaurma [Purána], beginning, 'Of action [or the Primal Agency], and knowledge [or Soul],' and so on. And, as there is no mention, in Scripture, of the origin of Ignorance, as figurative, it is not from eternity. And Ignorance, which consists of false knowledge, has been declared, in an aphorism of the Yoga, to be [not a separate entity, but] 'an affection of the mind.' Hence there is no increase to the [list of the twenty-five] Realities,' [in the shape of a twenty-sixth principle, to be styled Ignorance].

े ननु पञ्चविंशतितत्त्वानीति नेापपद्यते मह-त्रत्वकारणाव्यक्तापेक्षयाविद्याख्यजडतत्त्वान्तराप-त्रेरित्याशङ्काह ॥

² This is Dr. Ballantyne's revised translation, suggested by a remark of Vijnána, quoted and translated below, in b. The rendering now replaced runs: 'Alike [is the opinion] of both [of us], in respect of Nature.' The side-note was formerly correspondent to a., viz.: 'He meets a Vedántic objection.' Ed.

b. Or [according to another, and more probable, interpretation of the aphorism,] the meaning is this, that the argument is the same in support of both, i.e., of both Soul and Nature: such is the meaning.¹

c. But then, there being [as has been shown,] a mode of arriving, by inference, at [a knowledge of the saving truth in regard to] Nature, Soul, &c., whence is it that reflexion, in the shape of discrimination [between Soul and Nature], does not take place in the case of all [men]? In regard to this point, he states [as follows]:²

अधिकारिचैविध्याच नियमः ॥ ७० ॥

All do not profit by the saving truth; because it is only the best kind of people that are fully amenable to reason. Aph. 70. There is no rule [or necessity, that all should arrive at the truth]; because those who are privileged [to engage in the inquiry] are of three descriptions.

a. For those privileged [to engage in the inquiry] are of three descriptions, through their distinction into those who, in reflecting, are dull, mediocre, and best. Of these, by the dull the [Sánkhya] arguments are frustrated [and altogether set aside], by means of the sophisms that have been uttered by the Bauddhas, &c. By the mediocre they [are brought into doubt, or, in other words,] are made to appear as if there were equally strong arguments on the other side, by means of arguments which really prove the reverse [of what these people employ them to prove], or by arguments which are not true: [see the section on Fallacies in the Tarka-sangraha]. But it is only the best of those privileged, that reflect in the manner that has been set forth [in our exposition of the process of reflexion which leads to the discriminating of Soul from Nature]: such is the import. But there is no rule that all must needs reflect in the manner so set forth: such is the literal meaning.¹

b. He now, through two aphorisms, defines 'the Great one' and 'Self-consciousness';² [the reader being presumed to remember that Nature consists of the three 'Qualities' in equipoise, and to be familiar with the other principles, such as the 'Subtile elements' (see § 61)]:

By 'the Great one' is meant Mind. Aph. 71. The first product [of the Primal Agent, Nature], which is called 'the Great one,' is Mind.

a. 'Self-consciousness,' the function of which is a conceit [that 'I exist,' 'I do this, that, and the other thing'], is that which is subsequent: that is to say, 'Self-consciousness' is the next after 'the Great one'² [§ 71].

b. Since 'Self-consciousness' is that whose function is a conceit [which brings out the Ego, in every case of cognition, the matter of which cognition would, else, have lain dormant in the bosom of Nature, the formless Objective], it therefore follows that the others [among the phenomena of mundane existence,] are effects of this [Self-consciousness]; and so he declares [as follows]:³

All products, save Mind, result from Selfconsciousness. Aph. 73. To the others it belongs to be products thereof, [i.e., of Selfconsciousness].

a. 'To be products thereof,' i.e., to be products of Selfconsciousness: that is to say, the fact of being products thereof belongs to the others,² the eleven 'Organs' (indriya), the five 'Subtile elements,' and, mediately, to the [gross] Elements, also, the products of the Subtile elements.³

b. But then, if it be thus [some one may say], you relinquish your dogma, that Nature is the cause of the whole world. Therefore he declares [as follows]:⁴

Nature, immediately the cause of Mind, is, mediately, the cause of all other products. Aph. 74. Moreover, mediately, through that [i.e., the 'Great one' (§71)], the first [cause, viz., Nature,] is the cause [of all products]; as is the case with the Atoms, [the causes, though not the immediate causes, of jars, &c.].

a. 'Moreover, mediately,' i.e., moreover, not in the character of the immediate cause, 'the first,' i.e., Nature, is the cause of 'Self-consciousness' and the rest, [mediately,] through 'the Great one' and the rest; as, in the theory of the Vaiseshikas, the Atoms are the cause of a jar, or the like, only [mediately,] through combinations of two atoms, and so on : such is the meaning.¹

b. But then, since, also, both Nature and Soul are eternal, which of them is [really] the cause of the creation's commencing? In regard to this, he declares [as follows]:²

That is to say: 'while both,' viz., Soul and Nature, are preexistent to every product, still, 'since the one,' viz., Soul, from the fact of its not being modified [into anything else, as clay is modified into a jar], must be 'devoid,' or lack the nature of a cause, 'it is applicable,' i.e., the nature of a cause must belong, to the other of the two.¹

b. But then [some one may say], let Atoms alone be causes; since there is no dispute [that these are causal]. In reply to this, he says:²

¹ दयोरेव पुंप्रकृत्येारखिलकार्यपूर्वभाविलेऽपे-कतरस्य पुरुषस्यापरिणामिलेन हाने कारणता-हान्यामन्यतरस्य याेगः कारणतासंभव इत्यर्थः ॥

[°] नन्वविवादालरमाणूनामेव कारणलमस्ति-त्यत ञ्चाह ॥

a. That which is limited cannot be the substance of all [things]; as yarn cannot be the [material] cause of a jar. Therefore it would [on the theory suggested,] be necessary to mention separate causes of [all] things severally; and it is simpler to assume a single cause. Therefore Nature alone is the cause. Such is the meaning.¹

b. He alleges Scripture in support of this:2

तदुत्पत्तिश्रुतेश्व ॥ ७९ ॥

Scripture declares in favour of the theory. Aph. 77. And [the proposition that Nature is the cause of all is proved] from the text of Scripture, that the origin [of the world] is therefrom, [i.e., from Nature].

a. An argument, in the first instance, has been set forth [in § 76; for, till argument fails him, no one falls back upon authority]. Scripture, moreover, declares that Nature is the cause of the world, in such terms as, 'From Nature the world arises,' &c.³

' यत्परिच्छिनं न तत्सर्वोपादानं यथा न तन्तु-घेटस्य कारणम् । तस्मात्पदार्थानां पृथक्पृथक्कारणं वक्तव्यमेककारणते च लाघवम् । तस्मात्प्रधा-नस्यैव कारणतमित्यर्थः ॥

3 छात्र युतिं दर्शयति॥

³ युक्तिस्तावत्प्रोक्ता। श्रुतिरपि प्रधानस्य जग-त्कारगतामाह प्रधानाज्जगज्जायत इति ॥ b. But then [some one may say], a jar which antecedently did not exist is seen to come into existence. Let, then, antecedent non-existence be the cause [of each product]; since this is an invariable antecedent, [and, hence, a cause; 'the invariable antecedent being denominated a cause,' if Dr. Brown, in his 6th lecture, is to be trusted]. To this he replies:¹

नावस्तुनो वस्तुसिडिः ॥ ७८ ॥

Ex sihilo nihil fit. Aph. 78. A thing is not made out of nothing.

a. That is to say: it is not possible that out of nothing, i.e., out of a nonentity, a thing should be made, i.e., an entity should arise. If an entity were to arise out of a nonentity, then, since the character of a cause is visible in its product, the world, also, would be unreal: such is the meaning.²

b. Let the world, too, be unreal: what harm is that to us? [If any ask this,] he, therefore, declares [as follows]:³

अवाधाददुष्टकारएजन्यताच नावसत्त्वम् ॥ ७९ ॥

[leading to a belief in what ought not to be believed].

a. When there is the notion, in regard to a shell [of a pearl-oyster, which sometimes glitters like silver], that it is silver, its being silver is contradicted by the [subsequent and more correct] cognition, that this is not silver. But, in the case in question [that of the world regarded as a reality], no one ever has the cognition, 'This world is not in the shape of an entity,' by which [cognition, if any one ever really had such,] its being an entity might be opposed.¹

b. And it is held that that is false which is the result of a depraved cause; e.g., some one's cognition of a [white] conch-shell as yellow, through such a fault as the jaundice, [which depraves his eye-sight]. But, in the case in question, [that of the world regarded as a reality], there is no such [temporary or occasional] depravation [of the senses]; because all, at all times, cognize the world as a reality. Therefore the world is not an unreality.²

' शुक्ती रजतमिति ज्ञाने नेदं रजतमिति ज्ञा-नाद्रजतबाधः । न चाच नेदं भावरूपं जगदिति कस्यापि ज्ञानं येन भावरूपबाधः स्यात् ॥

But then [some one may suggest], let a nonentity be the [substantial] cause of the world; still the world will not [necessarily, therefore,] be unreal. In regard to this, he declares [as follows]:¹

The product of something is something; and that of nothing, nothing. Aph. 80. If it [the substantial cause,] be an entity, then this would be the case, [that the product would be an entity], from its union [or identity] therewith; [but] if [the cause be] a nonentity, then how could it possibly be the case [that the product would be real], since it is a nonentity, [like the cause with which it is united, in the relation of identity]?

a. If an entity were the substantial cause [of the world], then, since [it is a maxim that] the qualities of the cause present themselves in the product, 'this would be the case,' i.e., it would be the case that the product was real, 'because of union therewith,' i.e., because of the union [of the product] with the reality [which is its substratum]. [But,] since, [by parity of reasoning], if a nonentity [were the substantial cause], the world would be a nonentity, then, by reason of its being a nonentity, i.e., by reason of the world's being [on that supposition,] necessarily a nonentity. [like its supposed cause], how could this be the case,² [that it would be real]?

न कर्मण उपादानायोगात् ॥ ५१ ॥

Action cannot serve as a substratum.

Aph. 81. No; for works are not adapted to be the substantial cause [of any product].

a. Granting that 'the unseen' [merit or demerit arising from actions] may be an instrumental cause, [in bringing about the mundane condition of the agent], yet we never see merit or demerit in the character of the substantial cause [of any product] : and our theories ought to show deference to our experience. 'Nature' is to be accepted; because Liberation arises [see § 56,^{*} and § 83,] from discerning the distinction between Nature and the Soul.⁴

तस्रोगेन भावयेागेन तस्तिडिः कार्यस्य वस्तुलसि-डिः । ञ्रभावे जगतोऽभावले तदभावाज्जगदभा-वस्यावश्यंभावान्कुतस्तन्तिडिरिति ॥

b. But then [some one may say], since Liberation can be attained by undertaking the things directed by the Veda, what occasion is there for [our troubling ourselves about] Nature? To this he replies :¹

नानुश्रविकादपि तस्तिडिः साध्यलेनावृत्तियोगा-दपुरुषार्थलम् ॥ ৮२ ॥

Substitution is not to be obtained by ritual observances. Aph. 82. The accomplishment thereof [i.e., of Liberation,] is not, moreover, through Scriptural rites : the chief end of man does not consist in this [which is gained through such means]; because, since this consists of what is accomplished through acts, [and is, therefore, a product, and not eternal], there is [still left impending over the ritualist,] the liability to repetition of births.

a. 'Scriptural means,' such as sacrifices, [are so called], because they are heard from [the mouth of the instructor in] Scripture. Not thereby, moreover, is 'the accomplishment thereof,' i.e., the accomplishment of Liberation; 'because one is liable to repetition of births, by reason of the fact that it [the supposed Liberation,] was accomplished by means,' i.e., because the [thus far] liberated

For this reason, the chief end of man does not consist in this,² [which is gained through ritual observances].

b. He shows what does constitute the chief end of man :³

तच प्राप्तविवेकस्यानावृत्तित्र्युतिः ॥ ८३ ॥

In regard to the attainment of the chief end of man, the Scripture concurs with the Sánkhya. Aph. 83. There is Scripture for it, that he who has attained to discrimination, in regard to these [i.e., Nature and Soul], has no repetition of births.

a. 'In regard to these,' i.e., in regard to Nature and Soul, of him who has attained to discrimination, there is a text declaring, that, in consequence of his knowledge of the distinction, there will be no repetition of births; the text, viz., 'He does not return again,'⁴ &c.⁵

b. He states an objection to the opposite view :1

दुःखाद्दुःखं जलाभिषेकवच जाडचविमाकः ॥ ৮४ ॥

Pain can lead only to pain, not to liberation from it. Aph. 84. From pain [occasioned, e. g., to victims in sacrifice,] must come pain [to the sacrificer, and not liberation from pain]; as there is not relief from chilliness, by affusion of water.

a. If Liberation were to be effected by acts, [such as sacrifices], then, since the acts involve a variety of pains, Liberation itself [on the principle that every effect includes the qualities of its cause,] would include a variety of pains; and it would be a grief, from the fact that it must eventually end: for, to one who is distressed by chilliness the affusion of water does not bring liberation from his chilliness, but, rather, [additional] chilliness.²

b. But then [some one may say], the fact that the act is productive of pain is not the motive [to the performance of sacrifice]; but the [real] reason is this, that the act is productive of things desirable. And, in accordance with this, there is the text, 'By means of acts [of sacrifice] they may partake of immortality,'&c. To this he replies:³

² यदि कर्मसाध्या मेाछाे भवेकर्मणे दुःखबहु-लवान्माछाेऽपि दुःखबहुक्तः स्यादक्ततः छायिवे-नापि दुःखं स्यान्नहि जाडचार्त्तस्य जाडचविमाकाे जक्ताभिषेकात्प्रत्युत जाडचमेवेति ॥

ैननु दुःखस्य कर्मसाध्यत्वमप्रयोजकं किं तु का-

The character of the end contemplated makes no difference in regard to the transitoriness of what is effected by works. Aph. 85. [Liberation cannot arise from acts]; because, whether the end be something desirable, or undesirable, [and we admit that the motive of the sacrifice is not the giving pain to the victim], this makes no difference in regard to its being the result of acts, [and, therefore, not eternal, but transitory].

a. Grant that pain is not what is [intended] to be accomplished by works done without desire, [on the part of the virtuous sacrificer], still, though there is a difference [as you contend,] between [an act done to secure] something enjoyable and an act done without reference to enjoyment, this makes no difference with respect to the fact of the Liberation's being produced by acts, [which, I repeat, permanent Liberation cannot be]: there must still again be pain; for it [the Liberation supposed to have been attained through works,] must be perishable, because it is a production. The text which declares that works done without desire are instruments of Liberation has reference to knowledge, [which, I grant, may be gained by such means]; and Liberation comes through knowledge; so that these [works] are instruments of Liberation mediately:¹ [but you will recollect that the present inquiry regards the immediate cause].

b. [But then, some one may say], supposing that Liberation may take place [as you Sánkhyas contend,] through the knowledge of the distinction between Nature and Soul, still, since, from the perishableness [of the Liberation effected by this means, as well as any other means], mundane life may return, we are both on an equality, [we, whose Liberation you Sánkhyas look upon as transitory, and you Sánkhyas, whose Liberation we, again, look upon as being, by parity of reasoning, in much the same predicament]. To this he replies:²

The right means effect Liberation once for all. Aph. 86. Of him who is essentially liberated, his bonds having absolutely perished, it [i.e., the fruit of his saving knowledge,] is absolute: there is no parity [between his case and that of him who relies on works, and who may thereby secure a temporary sojourn in Paradise, only to return again to earth].

a. Of him 'who is essentially liberated,' who, in his very essence, is free, there is the destruction of bondage. The bond [see § $56,^1$] is Non-discrimination [between Nature and Soul]. By the removal thereof there is the destruction, the annihilation, of Non-discrimination : and how is it possible that there should again be a return of the mundane state, when the destruction of Non-discrimination is absolute? Thus there is no [such] similarity,² [between the two cases, as is imagined, by the objector, under § 85.b.].

b. It has been asserted [in § 61,] that there is a class of twenty-five [things which are realities]; and, since these cannot be ascertained [or made out to be true], except by which, in conformity with the unadulterated text, might have run somewhat as follows: 'Of him who is, in himself, liberated all extinction of bondage is final,' &c. Such is the interpretation which, on comparison of the various commentaries, seems to be the most eligible. Ed.

or other of them, is 'right notion' (pramá). What is, in the highest degree, productive thereof [i.e., of any given 'right notion'], is that; [i.e., is what we mean by proof, or evidence, (pramána)].

a. 'Not lodged,' i.e., not deposited in 'one rightly cognizing' (pramátri); in short, not previously known. The 'determination,' i.e., the ascertainment [or right apprehension] of such a thing, or reality, is 'right notion'; and, whether this be an affection 'of both,' i.e., of Intellect, and also of Soul [as some hold that it is], or of only one or other of the two, [as others hold,] either way, 'what is, in the highest degree, productive 'of this 'right notion' is [what we term proof, or] evidence, (pramána): such is the definition of evidence in general; [the definition of its several species falling to be considered hereafter]: such is the meaning.⁴

b. It is with a view to the exclusion of Memory, Error, and Doubt, in their order, that we employ [when speaking of the result of evidence,] the expressions 'not previously known' [which excludes things remembered], and 'reality' [which excludes mistakes and fancies], and 'discrimination,'¹ [which excludes doubt].

c. In regard to this [topic of knowledge and the sources of knowledge], if 'right notion,' is spoken of as located in the Soul [see § 87. a.], then the [proof, or] evidence is an affection of the Intellect. If [on the other hand, the 'right notion' is spoken of as] located in the Intellect, in the shape of an affection [of that the affections of which are mirrored by the Soul], then it [the proof, or evidence, or whatever we may choose to call that from which 'right notion' results,] is just the conjunction of an organ [with its appropriate object; such conjunction giving rise to sense-perception], &c. But, if both the Soul's cognition and the affections of the Intellect are spoken of as [cases of] 'right notion,' then both of these aforesaid [the affection of the Intellect, in the first case, and the conjunction of an organ with its appropriate object, &c., in the other

d. How many [kinds of] proofs [then,] are there? To this he replies :²

चिविधं प्रमार्ग्रं तत्सिड्वी सर्वसिडेर्नाधिक्यसि-डिः ॥ ८८ ॥

There are three kinds f of evidence. There are three kinds there is no establishment of more; because, if these be established, then all [that is true] can be established [by one or other of these three proofs].

a. 'Proof is of three kinds;' that is to say, 'perception'

' छच यदि प्रमारूपं फलं पुरुषनिष्ठमुच्यते तदा बुद्धिवृत्तिरेव प्रमाणम् । यदि बुद्धिनिष्ठं वृत्तिरूपं तदा तदेन्द्रियसंनिकर्षादिरेव । यदि तु पैरिषेयवोधो बुद्धिवृत्तिश्वोभयमपि प्रमेत्युच्यते तदेाक्तमुभयमेव प्रमाणं भवति । चक्षुरादिषु प्रमा-ण्रूयवहारः परंपरयैवेति बोध्यम् ॥

* कति प्रमाणानीत्यत आह ॥

(pratyaksha), 'the recognition of signs' (anumána), and 'testimony' (śabda), are the [three kinds of] proofs.¹

b. But then [some one may incline to say], let 'comparison' [which is reckoned, in the Nyáya, a specifically distinct source of knowledge], and the others [such as 'Conjecture,' &c., which are reckoned, in like manner, in the Mímáńsá], also be instruments of right knowledge, [as well as these three], in [the matter of] the discriminating of Nature and Soul: he therefore says, 'because, if these [three] be established,' &c. And, since, if there be the three kinds of proof established,' everything [that is really true] can be established [by means of them], there is no establishment of more;' no addition to the proofs can be fairly made out; because of the cumbrousness [that sins against the philosophical maxim, that we are not to assume more than is necessary to account for the case]: such is the meaning.²

c. For the same reason, Manu, also, has laid down only a triad of proofs, where he says [see the Institutes, Ch. xii., v. 105]: 'By that man who seeks a distinct knowledge of his duty, [these] three [sources of right knowledge] must be well understood, viz., Perception, Inference, and Scriptural authority in its various shapes [of legal institute, junction;' 'portrays the form thereof,' i.e., assumes the form of the thing with which it is in conjunction [as water assumes the form of the vessel into which it is poured]; what 'discernment,' or affection of the Intellect, [does this], that [affection of the Intellect (see Yoga Aphorisms, I., $\S 5$ and $\S 8. \delta$.)] is the evidence [called] Perception: such is the meaning.¹

b. But then, [some one may say,] this [definition of Perception (§ 89)] does not extend [as we conceive it ought, and presume it is intended, to do,] to the perception, by adepts in the Yoga, of things past, future, or concealed [by stone walls, or such intervening things as interrupt ordinary perception]; because there is, here, no 'form of the thing, in conjunction' [with the mind of him who perceives it, while absent]: having pondered this doubt, he corrects it by [stating, as follows,] the fact, that this [supernatural sort of perception] is not what he intends to define :²

The definition not to be blamed, though it should not apply to the perceptions of the mystic. Aph. 90. It is not a fault [in the definition, that it does not apply to the perceptions of adepts in the Yoga]; because that of the adepts in the Yoga is not an external perception.

a. That is to say: it is only sense-perception that is to be here defined; and the adepts of the Yoga do not perceive through the external [organs of sense]. Therefore there is no fault [in our definition]; i.e., there is no failure to include the perceptions of these;¹ [because there is no intention to include them].

b. [But, although this reply is as much as the objector has any right to expect,] he states the real justification² [of the definition in question]:

But the definition does apply to the perceptions of the mystic. Aph. 91. Or, there is no fault [in the definition], because of the conjunction, with causal things, of that [mystical mind] which has attained exaltation.4

b. Here the word rendered 'causal' (lina) denotes the things, not in conjunction [with the senses], alluded to by the objector [in § 89. b.]; for we, who assert that effects exist [from eternity, in their causes, before taking the shape of effects, and, likewise, in these same causes, when again resolved into their causes], hold that even what is past, &c., still essentially exists, and that, hence, its conjunction [with the mind of the mystic, or the clairvoyant,] is possible.²

Objection, that the definition does not apply to the perceptions of the 'Lord.' c. But then, [some one may say,] still this [definition] does not extend to the Lord's perceptions; because, since these are from everlasting, they can-

a. That there is no fault [in the definition of Perception], because there is no proof that there is a Lord, is supplied ² [from \S 90].

b. And this demurring to there being any 'Lord' is merely in accordance with³ the arrogant dictum of [certain] partisans [who hold an opinion not recognized by the majority]. Therefore, it is to be understood, the expression employed is, 'because it is not proved that there is a Lord,' but not the expression, 'because there is no Lord.'⁴

c. But, on the implication ¹ that there is a 'Lord,' what we mean to speak of [in our definition of Perception, (\S 89),] is merely the being of the [same] kind with what is produced by conjunction ² [of a sense-organ with its object; and the perceptions of the 'Lord' may be of the same kind with such perceptions, though they were not to come from the same source].

d. Having pondered the doubt, 'How should the Lord not be proved [to exist] by the Scripture and the Law, [which declare his existence]?' he states a dilemma which excludes [this]:³

bound, he can be neither the one nor the other.

a. The 'Lord' whom you imagine, tell us, is he free from troubles, &c.? Or is he in bondage through these?

b. He explains this very point :2

उभयथाप्यसन्तरत्वम् ॥ ९४ ॥

The force of the Aph. 94. [Because,] either way, he would be inefficient.

a. Since, if he were free, he would have no desires, &c., which [as compulsory motives,] would instigate him to create; and, if he were bound, he would be under delusion; he must be [on either alternative,] unequal to the creation, &c.⁴ [of this world].

b. But then, [it may be asked,] if such be the case, what becomes of the Scripture-texts which declare the 'Lord?'. To this he replies:⁵

Aph. 95. [The Scriptural texts which make mention of the 'Lord' are] either glorifications of the liberated

a. That is to say: accordingly as the case may be, some text [among those in which the term 'Lord' occurs,] is intended, in the shape of a glorification [of Soul], as the 'Lord,' [as Soul is held to be], merely in virtue of junction [with Nature], to incite [to still deeper contemplation], to exhibit, as what is to be known, the liberated Soul, i. e., absolute Soul in general; and some other text, declaratory, for example, of creatorship, &c., preceded by resolution [to create, is intended] to extol [and to purify the mind of the contemplator, by enabling him to take a part in extolling] the eternity, &c., of the familiarly known⁸ Brahmá, Another reading, that of Nágeśa and of Vedánti Mabádeva,

4 Aniruddha's exposition of this Aphorism is as follows : TI-

गाद्यभावान्मुक्तात्मन इव मुक्तात्मनो न तु मु-क्तस्य तस्य संकल्पकर्तृत्वाद्यभावात्। तत्प्रशंसा वि-धिवाक्योत्तम्भनाय। उपासासिडस्य। उपासनया लब्धातिश्यस्य योगिनोऽणिमादिसिडस्य प्रशंसा-

Vishnu, Siva, or other non-eternal 'Lord;' since these, though possessed of the conceit [of individuality], &c., [and, in so far, liable to perish], have immortality, &c., in a secondary sense;' [seeing that the Soul, in every combination, is immortal, though the combination itself is not so].

b. But then, [some one may say], even if it were thus [as alleged under § 95], what is heard in Scripture, [viz.], the fact that it [viz., Soul] is the governor of Nature, &c., would not be the case; for, in the world, we speak of government in reference only to modifications [preceded and determined] by resolutions [that so and so shall take place], &c. To this he replies:²

within the interval of a coording to this, the term iswara, 'mighty one,' 'lord,' is applied, by way of eulogy, either to a soul as it were liberated, or to a person who, through devotion, has acquired transcendent faculties, that is to say, the Yogi. Resolution, agentship, and the like, are impredicable of one absolutely liberated; and such a one, being inert and impassive, cannot be intended by iswara, 'a power.' Hence the expression, 'as it were liberated.' Also see, for atisaya,—translated, above, 'transcendent faculties,'—Book IV., Aph. 24. Ed.

Soul, like the lodestone, acts not by resolve, but through proximity. Aph. 96. The governorship [thereof, i.e., of Soul over Nature] is from [its] proximity thereto, [not from its resolving to act thereon]; as is the case with the gem, [the lodestone, in regard to iron].

a. If it were alleged that [its, Soul's,] creativeness, or [its] governorship, was through a resolve [to create, or to govern], then this objection [brought forward under § 95. b.] would apply. But [it is not so; for,] by us [Sánkhyas,] it is held that the Soul's governorship, in the shape of creatorship, or the like, is merely from [its] proximity [to Nature]; 'as is the case with the [lodestone] gem."

b. As the gem, the lodestone, is attracted by iron merely by proximity, without resolving [either to act or to be acted on], &c., so, by the mere conjunction of the primal Soul, Nature is changed into the principle [called] the 'Great one,' [or Mind, (see § 61. c.)]. And in this alone consists [what we speak of as] its acting as creator towards that which is superadded to it: such is the meaning.⁸

c. And thus it is declared, [in some one of the Puránas ¹]: 'As the iron acts, whilst the gem [the lodestone,] stands void of volition, just so this world is created by a deity who is mere Existence. Thus it is, that there are, in the Soul, both agency [seemingly,] and non-agency, [really]. It is not an agent, inasmuch as it is void of volition; [and it is] an agent, merely through approximation [to Nature].²²

d. In respect of worldly products, also, animal souls overrule, merely through their approximation [to Nature]: so he declares [as follows]:³

In like manner, embodied souls do not energree. Aph. 97. In the case of individual products, also, [the apparent agency] of animal souls [is solely through proximity].

a. 'The agency is solely through proximity:' so much is supplied' [from § 96].

b. The meaning is this, that, in the case, also, of particular productions,—the creation, &c., of things individual [as contradistinguished from that of all things in the lump, (see Vedánta-sára, §67)],—animal souls, i.e., souls in which the intellects [of individuals] reflect themselves [see § 99. a.], overrule, merely through proximity, but not through any effort; seeing that these [animal souls] are none other than the motionless Thought.²

c. But then, [some one may say], if there were no eternal and omniscient 'Lord,' through the doubt of a blind tradition, [in the absence of an intelligently effective guardianship], the Vedas would cease to be an authority; [a possibility which, of course, cannot be entertained for an instant]. To this he replies:⁸

How the Vedas need not the 'Lord' to authenticate them. Aph. 98. The declaration of the texts or sense [of the Veda, by Brahmá, for example], since he knows the truth, [is authorative evidence].

a. To complete [the aphorism, we must say], 'since Hiranyagarbha [i.e., Brahmá,] and others [viz., Vishņu and Šiva], are knowers of what is certain, i.e., of what is true, the declaration of the texts or sense of the Vedas, where these are the speakers, is evidence¹ [altogether indisputable].

b. But then, if Soul, by its simple proximity [to Nature (§ 96)], is an overruler in a secondary sense [only of the term,—as the magnet may be said, in a secondary sense, to draw the iron, while the conviction is entertained, that, actually and literally, the iron draws the magnet],—who is the primary [or actual,] overruler? In reference to this, he says:²

ऺ हिरएयगभादीनां सिड्वरूपस्य यथार्थस्य वा-डृत्वात्तदक्तृकाे वेदवाक्यार्थापदेशः प्रमाग्रमिति शेषः ॥

It is in the shape of the internal organ, that Nature affects Soul. Aph. 99. The internal organ, through its being enlightened thereby [i.e., by Soul], is the overruler; as is the iron, [in respect of the magnet].

a. The internal organ, i.e., the understanding, is the overruler, through its fancying itself to be Soul, [as it does fancy,] by reason of its being enlightened by the Soul, through its happening to reflect itself in [and contemplate itself in,] Soul; 'just as the iron,' that is to say, as the attracting iron, though inactive, draws [the magnet], in consequence of [its] mere proximity,² [and so acquires magnetism by magnetic induction].

b. He [now, having discussed the evidence that consists in direct perception,] states the definition of inference³ (anumána):

Inference defined. of the connexion [e.g., of fire with smoke], is inference.

a. That is to say: inference [or conviction of a general truth,] is [a kind of] evidence consisting in a [mental] modification, [which is none other than] the knowledge of the connected, i.e., of the constant accompanier, through the knowledge of the constant accompaniment: by 'connexion' (pratibandha) here being meant 'constant attendedness' ($vy\acute{a}pti$); and through the perception thereof² [it being that the mind has possession of any general principle].

b. But a conclusion (anumiti) is knowledge of the soul;³ [whilst an Inference, so far forth as it is an instrument in the establishment of knowledge deducible from it, is an affection of the internal organ, or understanding (see $\S 87. c.$)]

c. He [next] defines testimony 4 (śabda):

Valid testimony defined. Aph. 101. Testimony [such as is entitled to the name of evidence,] is a declaration by one worthy [to be believed].

a. Here 'fitness' means 'suitableness;' and so the evidence which is called 'Testimony' is the knowledge arising from a suitable declaration: such is the meaning. And [while this belongs to the understanding, or internal organ (see § 100. b.)] the result is that [knowledge] in the Soul, [which is called] 'knowledge by hearing'¹ (śabdabodha).

b. He [next] volunteers to tell us what is the use of his setting forth [the various divisions of] evidence:²

उभयसिद्धिः प्रमागात्तदुपदेशः ॥ १०२ ॥

Why the kinds of Evidence have been here set forth. Aph. 102. Since the establishment of [the existence of] both [soul and non-soul] is by means of evidence, the declaration thereof [i.e., of the kinds of evidence, has been here made].

a. It is only by means of evidence that both Soul and non-soul are established as being distinct, [the one from the other]: therefore has this, viz., evidence, been here declared: such is the meaning.¹

b. Among these [several kinds of proof], he [now] describes that one by which, especially, viz., by a proof which is one kind of inference, Nature and Soul are here to be established discriminatively:²

सामान्यतेा दृष्टादुभयसिडिःः ॥ १०३ ॥

The existence of Soul and Nature argued from analogy. [Nature and Soul] is by analogy.

a. [Analogy (sámányato drishta) is that kind of evidence which is employed in the case] where, by the force [as an argument,] which the residence of any property in the subject derives from a knowledge of its being constantly accompanied [by something which it may therefore betoken], when we have had recourse to [as the means of determining this constant accompaniment,] what is, for instance, generically of a perceptible kind, [where, under such circumstances, we repeat,] anything of a different kind, i.e., not cognizable by the senses, is established; as when,

for example, having apprehended a constant accompaniment, [e.g., that an act implies an instrument], by taking into consideration such instruments as axes, &c., which are of earthy and other kinds, a quite heterogeneous, imperceptible, instrument of knowledge, viz., [the instrument named] Sense, is established [or inferred to exist]; such is what we mean by Analogy; and it is by this [species of inference], that both, [viz.,] Nature and Soul, are proved [to exist]: such is the meaning.¹

b. Of these [viz., Nature and Soul,] the argument from analogy for [the existence of] Nature is as follows: the Great Principle [viz., Understanding (see § 61. c.)] is formed out of the things [called] Pleasure, Pain, and Delusion, [to the aggregate of which three in equipoise (see § 61) the name of Nature is given]; because, whilst it is [undeniably,] a production, it has the characters of Pleasure, Pain, and Delusion; just as a bracelet, or the like, formed of gold, or the like,² [has the characteristic properties of the gold, or the like, and is thereby known to have been formed out of gold, or the like].

c. But, [as regards the argument from analogy, in proof of the existence] of Soul, [it is, as stated before, under § 66, to the following effect]: Nature is for the sake of another; because it is something that acts as a combination; as a house, for instance, [which is a combination of various parts combined for the benefit of the tenant]. In this instance, having gathered, in regard to houses, &c., the fact established on sense-perception, that they exist for the sake of [organized] bodies, for example, something of a different kind therefrom, [i.e., from Nature, viz.], Soul, is inferred [by analogy,] as something other than Nature, &c., [which, as being a compound thing, is not designed for itself]: such is the meaning.¹

d. But then [some one may say], since Nature is eternal, and exertion is habitual to her, [and the result of her action is the bondage of the Soul], there should constantly be experience [whether of pleasure or of pain], and, hence, no such thing as thorough emancipation. To this he replies:²

Aph. 104. Experience [whether of pain or pleasure,] ends with [the discernment of] Thought, [or Soul, as shed from Nature] contradistinguished from Nature].

a. By 'Thought' [we mean] Soul. Experience [whether of pain or pleasure,] ceases, on the discerning thereof. As 'antecedent non-existence,' though devoid of a beginning, [see Tarka-sangraha, § 92], surceases [when the thing antecedently non-existent begins to be], so, eternal Nature [eternal, as regards the absence of any beginning,] continues [no further than] till the discernment of the difference [between Nature and Soul]; so that experience whether of pain or pleasure,] does not at all times occur: such is the state of the case.¹

b. [But some one say], if Nature be agent, and Soul experiencer, then it must follow [which seems unreasonable,] that another is the experiencer of [the results of] the acts done by one different. To this he replies:²

ञ्चकर्तुरपि फलोपभोगोऽनाद्यवत् ॥ १०५ ॥

The fruit of the action is not always the agent's.

Aph. 105. The experience of the fruit may belong even to another than the agent; as in the case of food, &c.

b. Having stated an exoteric principle [which may serve, in practice, to silence, by the argumentum ad hominem, him on whose principles it may be valid], he [next] declares his own doctrine,² [in regard to the doubt started under \S 104. b.]:

the agent [soul being mistaken for an agent,] has the fruit [of the act is a wrong notion].

a. The soul is neither an agent nor a patient; but, from the fact that the Great Principle [the actual agent (see § 97. b.)] is reflected in it, there arises the conceit of its being an agent. 'Or, since it is from non-discrimination;' that is to say, because it is from the failure to discriminate between Nature and Soul, that this takes place, i.e., that conceit takes place, that it is the agent that experiences the fruit;³ [whereas the actual agent is Nature, which, being unintelligent, can experience neither pain nor pleasure].

What is perceptible, under certain circumstances, may be imperceptible, under others. Aph. 108. [A thing may be] an object [perceptible], and also [at another time,] not an object, through there being, in consequence of great distance, &c., a want of [conjunction of the sense with the thing], or [on the other hand,] an appliance of the sense [to the thing].

a. An object [is a perceived object], through the proximity, or conjunction, of the sense [with the object]. [A thing may be] not an object [perceived], through the want of the sense, i.e., through the want of conjunction [between the sense and what would otherwise be its object]. And [this] want of conjunction [may result] from the junction's being prevented by great distance, &c.¹

What may prevent perception.

b. [To explain the '&c.,' and to exemplify the causes that may prevent the conjunction, required in order to perception, between the thing and the sense, we may remark, that] it is in consequence of great distance, that a bird [flying very high up] in the sky is not perceived; [then again,] in consequence of extreme proximity, the collyrium located in the eye [is not perceived by the eye itself]; a thing placed in [the inside of, or on the opposite side of,] a wall [is not perceived], in consequence of the obstruction; from distraction of mind, the unhappy, or other [agitated person], does not perceive the thing that is at his side [or under his very nose]; through its subtilty,

c. How [or, for which of the possible reasons just enumerated,] comes the imperceptibleness of Nature? In regard to this, he declares :²

a. 'Her,' i.e., Nature's, imperceptibleness is from subtilty. By subtilty is meant the fact of being difficult to investigate; not [as a Naiyáyika might, perhaps, here prefer understanding the term,] the consisting of atoms; for Nature is [not atomic, in the opinion of the Sánkhyas, but] all-pervasive.⁴

Nature inferred from the existence of productions. Aph. 110. [Nature exists;] because her existence is gathered from the beholding of productions.

As the knowledge of [there being such things as] atoms comes from the beholding of jars, &c., [which are agglomerations], so the knowledge of Nature comes from the beholding of products which have the three Qualities;² [(see § 62. a.) and the existence of which implies a cause, to which the name of Nature is given, in which these constituents exist from eternity].

b. Some [the Vedántís,] say that the world has Brahma as its cause; others [the Naiyáyikas], that it has atoms as its cause; but our seniors [the transmitters of the Sánkhya doctrine], that it has Nature as its cause. So he sets forth a doubt [which might naturally found itself] thereon:³

A doubt thrown on the existence of Nature, by the contradiction of dissentients. Aph. 111. If [you throw out the doubt that] it [viz., the existence of Nature,] is not established, because of the contradiction of asserters [of other views, then you will find an answer in the next aphorism].

a. 'Because of the contradiction of asserters [of the Vedánta or Nyáya], it is not established,' i. e., Nature [as asserted by the Sánkhyas,] is not established.'

b. But then, [to set forth the objection of these counterasserters], if a product existed antecedently to its production [as that product], then an eternal Nature [such as you Sánkhyas contend for,] would be proved to exist as the [necessary] substratum thereof; since you will declare that a cause is inferred only as the [invariable] accompanier of an effect; but it is denied, by us asserters [of the Vedánta, &c.], that the effect does exist [antecedently to its production; well,] if [this doubt be thrown out] : such is the meaning² [of the aphorism].

c. He states [his] doctrine [on this point]:³

a. If one side were disproved merely by the dissent of the opponent, then [look you,] there is dissent against the other side, too: so how could it be established? If the one side is established by there being inevitably attendant the recognition of the constant accompanier, on the recognition of that which is constantly accompanied [by it], it is the same with my [side], also: therefore [my] inference from effect [to cause] is not to be denied² [in this peremptory fashion].

b. Well, then, [the opponent may say], let [the inference of] cause from effect be granted; how is it that this [cause] is Nature, and nothing else, [such as Atoms, for instance]? To this he replies:³

a. Quality is threefold [see § 61. a.], viz., Goodness, Passion, and Darkness: there would be a contradiction to these: such is the meaning.²

b. The drift here is as follows: If the character of cause [of all things around us] belonged to Atoms, or the like, then there would be a contradiction to the fact of being an aggregate of pleasure, pain, and delusion, which is recognizable in the world;³ [because nothing, we hold, can exist in the effect, which did not exist in the cause and pleasure, pain, &c., are no properties of Atoms].

c. He now repels the doubt as to whether the production of an effect is that of what existed [antecedently], or of what did not exist:⁴

a. And only when both are extant is there, from the presence of the cause, the presence of the effect. Otherwise, everywhere and always, every [effect] might be produced; [the presence of the cause being, on the supposition, superfluous]. This he insists upon [as follows]:³

Because the being the material [of any future product] is nothing else than the fact of [being it, potentially, i. e., of] having the competency to be the product; and [this] competency is nothing else than the product's condition as that of what has not yet come to pass: therefore, since 'that which is competent,' viz., the cause, makes the product which is 'possible' [to be made out of it], it is not of any nonentity that the production takes place, [but of an entity, whose esse, antecedently, was possibility]: such is the meaning.¹

b. He states another argument:²

कारणभावाच ॥ ११४ ॥

The product is nothing else than the cause.

Aph. 118. And because it [the product,] is [nothing else than] the cause, [in the shape of the product].

a. It is declared, in Scripture, that, previously to production, moreover, there is no difference between the cause and its effect; and, since it is thereby settled that a product is an entity, production is not of what [previously] existed not: such is the meaning.³

b. He ponders a doubt:4

न भावे भावयोग श्वेत् ॥ ११९ ॥

A doubt whether that which is can be said to become. A doubt whether that there is no possibility of that's becoming which already is, [then the answer will be found in the next aphorism].

' शङ्कते ॥

a. That is to say: but then, if it be thus [that every effect exists antecedently to its production], since the effect [every effect,] must be eternal [without beginning], there is no possibility of [or room for] the adjunction of becoming, the adjunction of arising, in the case of a product which is [already, by hypothesis,] in the shape of an entity; because the employment of [the term] 'arising' [or the fact of being produced] has reference solely to what did not exist [previously]; if this be urged: such is the meaning.¹

b. He declares the doctrine [in regard to this point]:²

नाभिव्यक्तिनिबन्धना व्यवहाराव्यवहारा ॥ १२० ॥

Production is only manifestation; and so of the opposite. Aph. 120. No; [do not argue that what is cannot become; for] the employment and the non-employment [of the term 'production'] are occasioned by the manifestation [and the non-manifestation of what is spoken of as produced, or not].

a. 'No;' the view stated [in § 119] is not the right one: such is the meaning.³

b. As the whiteness of white cloth [which has become] dirty is brought manifestly out by means of washing, &c., so, by the operation of the potter, is the pot brought into manifestness; [whereas], on the blow of a mallet, it becomes hidden,¹ [and no longer appears as a pot].

c. And manifestation [is no fiction of ours; for it] is seen; for example, that of oil, from sesamum-seeds, by pressure; of milk, from the cow, by milking; of the statue, which resided in the midst of the stone, by the operation of the sculptor; of husked rice, from rice in the husk, by threshing; &c.²

d. Therefore, the employment and the non-employment of the [term] 'the production of an effect ' are dependent on manifestation, dependent on the manifestation of the effect: that is to say, the employment of [the term] 'production' is in consequence of the manifestation [of what is spoken of as produced]; and the non-employment of [the term] 'production' is in consequence of there being no manifestation [of that which is, therefore, not spoken of as produced]; but [the employment of the term 'production' is] not in consequence of that's becoming an entity which was not an entity.³

For example, when thread is destroyed, it is changed into the shape of earth [as when burned to ashes]; and the earth is changed into the shape of a cotton-tree; and this [successively] changes into the shape of flower, fruit, and thread [spun again from the fruit of the cotton-plant]. So is it with all entities.¹

c. Pray [some one may ask], is [this] manifestation [that you speak of under § 120] something real, or something not real? If it be something real [and which, therefore, never anywhere ceases to be], then [all] effects [during this constant manifestation] ought constantly to be perceived; and, if it be not real, then there would be the absence of [all] products, [in the absence of all manifestation. Manifestation, therefore, must be something real; and] there must be [in order to give rise to it,] another manifestation of it, and of this another; [seeing that a manifestation can be the result of nothing else than a manifes-

Aph. 123. Or, [at all events, our theory of 'manifestation' is as] blameless as [your theory of] 'production.'

a. Pray [let us ask], is production produced, or is it not? If it is produced, then of this [production of production] there must be production ; so that there is a regressus in infinitum, [such as you allege against our theory, under § 121. c.]. If it be not produced, then, pray, is this because it is unreal, or because it is eternal? If because it is unreal, then production never is at all; so that it would never be perceived, [as you allege that it is]. Again, if [production is not something produced,] because it is eternal. then there would be at, all times, the production of [all possible] effects, [which you will scarcely pretend is the case]. Again, if you say, since ' production ' itself consists of production, what need of supposing an ulterior production [of production]? then, in like manner, [I ask,] since 'manifestation' itself consists of manifestation, what need of supposing an ulterior manifestation [of manifestation]? 'Mutable,' i.e., distinguished by the acts of leaving [one form], and assuming [another form], &c. It [the soul,] leaves the body it has assumed, [and, probably, takes another]; and bodies, &c., move [and are mutable, as is notorious]. 'Multitudinous,' i.e., in consequence of the distinction of souls; [every man, e.g., having a separate body]. 'Dependent,' [i.e.,] on its cause. 'Mergent,' that is to say, it [i.e., every product, in due time,] is resolved into that from which it originated.³

b. [But, some one may say], if realities be the twentyfive [which the Sánkhyas enumerate (see § 61), and no more], pray, are such common operations as knowing, enjoying, &c., absolutely nothing; you accordingly giving up what you see, [in order to save an hypothesis with which what you see is irreconcilable]? b. The word 'or' shows that there is another alternative [reply, in the aphorism, to the objection in question]. 'Or because they are hinted by [the term] Nature;' that is to say, the qualities, &c. It is by these habits that the Qualities, viz., Goodness, Passion, and Darkness, differ: such is the remainder,¹ [required to complete the aphorism].

b. At the time of telling their differences, he tells in what respects they agree :²

a. It is by the power of its cause, that a product energizes, [as a chain restrains an elephant, only by the force of the iron which it is made of]; so that Mind and the rest, being [except through the strength of Nature,] powerless, produce their products in subservience to Nature. Otherwise, since it is their habit to energize, they would at all times produce their products,² [which it will not be alleged that they do].

b. And the word iti, in this place, is intended to notify the completion of the set of [positive] reasons³ [why Mind and the others should be regarded as products].

c. He [next] states [in support of the same assertion,] the argument from negatives,⁴ [i.e., the argument drawn from the consideration as to what becomes of Mind and the others, when they are not products]:

Converse proof of the [quitting the condition of product], there is Nature, or Soul, [into one or other of which the product must needs have resolved itself].

a. Product and non-product; such is the pair of alternatives. 'On the quitting thereof;' i. e., when Mind and the rest quit the condition of product, Mind and the rest [of necessity] enter into Nature, or Soul; ¹ [these two alone being non-products].

b. [But perhaps some one may say, that] Mind and the rest may exist quite independently of the pair of alternatives [just mentioned]. In regard to this, he declares [as follows]:²

तयोरन्यते तुद्धत्वम् ॥ १३४ ॥

' कार्यमकार्यं चेति कोटिदयम् । तडाने मह-दादेः कार्यताहाने प्रकृतैा पुरुषे वा महदादीनां प्रवेश इति ॥

a. If Mind and the rest were 'other than these two,' i. e., than product or non-product [§ 133], they would be in the shape of what is 'void,' i. e., in the shape of nonentity.¹

b. Well now, [some one may say,] why should it be under the character of a product, that Mind and the rest are a sign of [there being such a principle as] Nature ? They may be [more properly said to be] a sign, merely in virtue of their not occurring apart from it. To this he replies:²

कार्यात्कारणानुमानं तत्साहित्यात् ॥ १३५ ॥

What kind of causes can be inferred from their effects. Aph. 135. The cause is inferred from the effect, [in the case of Nature and her products]; because it accompanies it.

a. That [other relation, other than that of material and product, which you would make out to exist between Nature and Mind,] exists, indeed, where the nature [or

Though the swelling of the tide does not occur apart from the rising of the moon, yet here the cause, moon-rise, is not seen in the effect, tide; and, consequently, though we infer the effect from the cause, the cause could not have been inferred from the effect]. But, in the present case, since we see, in Mind and the rest, the characters of Nature, the cause is inferred from the effect. 'Because it accompanies it,' i. e., because, in Mind and the rest, we see the properties of Nature,¹ [i. e., Nature herself actually present; as we see the clay which is the cause of a jar, actually present in the jar].

b. [But it may still be objected,] if it be thus, then let that principle itself, the 'Great one' [or Mind], be the cause of the world: what need of Nature? To this he replies:²

How Mind must have an antecedent.

Aph. 136. The indiscrete, [Nature. must be inferred] from its [discrete and resolvable] effect, [Mind], in which are the three Qualities, [which constitute Nature].

a. 'It is resolved;' such is the import of [the term] linga, [here rendered] 'effect.' From that [resolvable effect], viz., the 'Great principle ' [or Mind], in which are the three Qualities, Nature must be inferred. And that the 'Great principle,' in the shape of ascertainment [or distinct intellection], is discrete [or limited] and perishable, is established by direct observation. Therefore [i. e., since Mind, being perishable, must be resolvable into something else,] we infer that into which it is resolvable,¹ [in other words, its 'cause,' here analogously termed lingin, since 'effect' has been termed linga].

b. But then, [some one may say], still something quite different may be the cause [of all things]: what need of [this] Nature [of yours]? In regard to this, he remarks [as follows]:2

Why Nature, and nothing else, must be the root of all. Aph. 137. There is no denying that it [Nature,] is; because of its effects, [which will be in vain attributed to any other source].

a. Is the cause of this [world] a product, or not a product? If it were a product, then, the same being [with equal propriety to be assumed to be] the case with its cause, there would be a regressus in infinitum. If effects be from any root [to which there is nothing antecedent], then this is that [to which we give the name of Nature]. 'Because of its effects,' that is to say, because of the effects of Nature. There is no denying 'that it is,' i. e., that Nature is.'

b. Be it so, [let us grant,] that Nature is; yet [the opponent may contend,] Soul positively cannot be; for [if the existence of causes is to be inferred from their products, Soul cannot be thus demonstrated to exist, seeing that] it has no products. In regard to this, he remarks [as follows]:²

सामान्येन विवादाभावाडमेवन साधनम्॥ १३४॥

'तन्कारणं कार्यमकार्यं वा। कार्यत्वे तत्का-रणस्यापि तथाले सत्यनवस्था। मूलकार्यत्वे तदेव सेति। तत्कार्यत इति प्रकृतिकार्यत इत्यर्थः। त-क्तििडेः प्रकृतिसिडेर्नापलापः॥

' भवतु प्रकृतिसिडिः पुरुषस्य सिडिस्तु न स्या-देव नहि तस्य कार्यमस्तीत्यवाह ॥ It is not from any effect that Soul is inferred.

Aph. 138. [The relation of cause and effect is] not [alleged as] the means of establishing [the existence of Soul]; because, as is the case with [the disputed term] 'merit,' there is no dispute about there being such a kind of thing; [though what kind of thing is matter of dispute].

a. There is no dispute about 'there being such a kind of thing,' i.e., as to there being Soul, simply; [since everybody who does not talk stark nonsense must admit a Soul, or self, of some kind]; for the dispute is [not as to its being, but] as to its peculiarity [of being], as [whether it be] multitudinous, or sole, all-pervading, or not all-pervading, and so forth; just as, in every [philosophical system, or] theory, there is no dispute as to [there being something to which may be applied the term] 'merit' (dharma); for the difference of opinion has regard to the particular kind of [thing,—such as sacrifices, according to the Mímánsá creed, or good works, according to the Nyáya,—which shall be held to involve] 'merit.'¹

b. 'Not the means of establishing' that [viz., the existence of soul]; i.e., the relation of cause and effect is not the means of establishing it. This intends, 'I will mention another means of establishing it.'²

a. That which is discerptible is intended for something else that is indiscerptible. If it were intended for something else that is discerptible, there would be a regressus in infinitum.⁴

b. And combinedness [involving (see § 67) discerptible-

And this exists occultly in Nature, as well as the rest; because, otherwise, discerptibleness would not prove discoverable in the products thereof, viz., the 'Great one,' &c.¹

The nature of the Soul. Aph. 145. Since light does not pertain to the unintelligent, light, [which must pertain to something or other, is the essence of the Soul, which, self-manifesting, manifests whatever else is manifest].

a. It is a settled point, that the unintelligent is not light; [it is not self-manifesting]. If Soul, also, were unintelligent [as the Naiyáyikas hold it to be, in substance; knowledge being, by them, regarded not as its essence or substratum, but as one of its qualities], then there would need to be another light for it; and, as the simple theory, let Soul itself consist, essentially, of light.¹

b. And there is Scripture [in support of this view; for example, the two following texts from the *Brihadáranyaka Upanishad*²]: 'Wherewith shall one distinguish that wherewith one distinguishes all this [world]?' 'Wherewith shall one take cognizance of the cognizer?'³

Scripture is higher evidence than supposed intuition. evidence of intuition for this [i. e., for the existence of qualities in the Soul,] is confuted [by the Scriptural declaration of the contrary].

a. The text, 'For this Soul is uncompanioned,' &c., would be confuted, if there were any annexation of qualities² [to Soul: and the notion of confuting Scripture is not to be entertained for a moment].

b. But the literal meaning [of the aphorism] is this, that the fact, established by Scripture, of its [i. e., soul's,] being devoid of qualities, &c., cannot be denied; because the Scripture itself confutes the [supposed] intuitive perception thereof, i. e., the [supposed] intuitive perception of qualities, &c.,³ [in the soul].

a. 'Thus,' i. e., [if you regard the matter rightly,] according to the manner here set forth, there is no 'imputation,' or attribution, 'of incompatible conditions,' Bondage, Liberation, &c., to a soul 'existing everywhere,' throughout all, as one,¹ [i. e., as a monad].

b. [But, the Vedántí may contend,] we see the condition of another attributed even to one quite different; as, e.g., Nature's character as an agent [is attributed] to Soul, which is another [than Nature]. To this he replies:³

a. [The notion] that Soul is an agent is a mistake; because, that Soul is not an agent is true, and the imputation [of agency to Soul] is not true, and the combination of the true and the untrue is not real. Neither birth nor

b. [But the Vedántí may say :] and thus there will be an opposition to the Scripture. For, according to that, 'Brahma is one without a second :'² 'There is nothing here diverse ; death after death does he [deluded man,] obtain, who here sees, as it were, a multiplicity.'³ To this he replies : ⁴

The compatibility of Bondage and Freedom. Aph. 155. Of him [i. e., of that soul,] by whom the cause of Bondage is known, there is that condition [of isolation, or entire liberation], by the perception [of the fact, that Nature and soul are distinct, and that he, really, was not bound, even when he seemed to be so].

a. By whom is known 'the cause of bondage,' viz., the non-perception that Nature and soul are distinct, of him, 'by the perception' [of it], i.e., by cognizing the distinction, there is 'that condition,' viz., the condition of isolation, [the condition (see § 144) after which the soul aspires. The soul in Bondage which is no real bondage may be typified by Don Quixote, hanging, in the dark, from the ledge of a supposed enormous precipice, and holding on for life, as he thought, from not knowing that his toes were within six inches of the ground].¹

पट्ट्यिव पुरुषेष्वतदूपनं नानारूपनं तनार्थका-रीति भाव: I The substance of this is, that, only in the eyes of the mistaken man who is influenced by the notorious cause of bondage, or in other words, who is unable to discriminate, is the essential condition of souls multeity, a condition the reverse of the one before referred to, unity; and that is inconclusive. The Aphorism, thus understood, must be assumed to proceed from a Vedántic disputant against the Sánkhya. Whether as read by Aniruddha, or as read by others, it is susceptible, with reference to the previous context, of a variety of renderings. Ed.

' विदितं बन्धकारणं प्रकृतिपुरुषविवेकादर्शनं यस्य तस्य दृष्ट्या विवेकज्ञानेन तद्रूपं कैवल्य-रूपम् ॥ b. [Well, rejoins the Vedántí,] Bondage [as you justly observe,] is dependent on non-perception [of the truth], and is not real. It is a maxim, that non-perception is removed by perception; and, on this showing, we recognize as correct the theory that Soul is one, but not that of Soul's being multitudinous. To this he replies:¹

नान्यादृष्ट्या चक्षुष्मतामनुपलम्भः ॥ १५६ ॥

He jeers the Vedánti.

Aph. 156. No: because the blind do not see, can those who have their eyesight not perceive?

a. What! because a blind man does not see, does also one who has his eyesight not perceive? There are many arguments [in support of the view] of those who assert that souls are many, [though you do not see them]: such is the meaning.²

b. He declares, for the following reason, also, that Souls are many:³

ै इतोऽपि नानात्मान इत्याह ॥

वामदेवादिर्मुक्तो नाद्वेतम्' ॥ १५९ ॥

Scripture proof that Souls are many. Aph. 157. Vámadeva, as well as others, has been liberated, [if we are to believe the Scriptures; therefore] non-duality is not [asserted, in the same Scriptures, in the Vedántic sense].

a. In the Puránas, &c., we hear, 'Vámadeva has been liberated,' 'Šuka has been liberated,' and so on. If Soul were one, since the liberation of all would take place, on the liberation of one, the Scriptural mention of a diversity [of separate and successive liberations] would be selfcontradictory.²

b. [But the Vedántí may rejoin :] on the theory that Souls are many, since the world has been from eternity, and from time to time some one or other is liberated, so, by degrees, all having been liberated, there would be a universal void. But, on the theory that Soul is one, Liberation is merely the departure of an adjunct, [which, the Vedántí flatters himself, does not involve the inconsistency which he objects to the Sánkhya]. To this he replies:³

ञ्जनादावद्य यावदभावाद्वविष्यदप्येवम् ॥ १५४ ॥

As it has been, so will it be. Aph. 158. Though it [the world,] has been from eternity, since, up to this day, there has not been \lceil an entire emptying of the world], the future, also, [may be inferentially expected to be] thus [as it has been heretofore].

a. Though the world has been from eternity, since, up to this day, we have not seen it become a void, there is no proof [in support] of the view that there will be Liberation ¹ [of all Souls, so as to leave a void].

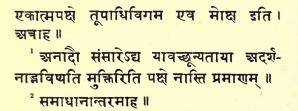

b. He states another solution [of the difficulty]:²

इदानीमिव सर्वेच नात्यन्तेाच्छेदः ॥ १५९ ॥

The stream of mundane things will flow on for ever. Aph. 159. As now [things are, so], everywhere [will they continue to go on: hence there will be] no absolute cutting short [of the course of mundane things].

a. Since souls are [in number,] without end, though Liberation successively take place, there will not be [as a necessary consequence,] a cutting short of the world. As now, so everywhere,—i.e., in time to come, also,—there will be Liberation, but not, therefore, an absolute cutting short [of the world]; since of this the on-flowing is eternal.¹

b. On the theory, also, that Liberation is the departure of an adjunct [§ 157. b.], we should find a universal void; so that the doubt² is alike, [in its application to either view]. Just as there might be an end of all things, on the successive liberation of many souls, so, since all adjuncts would cease, when [the fruit of] works [this fruit being in the shape of Soul's association with body, as its adjunct,] came to an end, the world would become void,³ [on the Vedánta theory, as well as on the Sánkhya].

c. Now, [if the Vedántí says,] there will not be a void, because adjuncts are [in number,] endless, then it is the same, on the theory that Souls are many. And thus [it has been declared]:⁴ 'For this very reason, indeed, though those who are knowing [in regard to the fact that Nature and Soul are different], are continually being liberated, there will not be a void, inasmuch as there is no end of multitudes of souls in the universe.'¹

d. Pray, [some one may ask,] is Soul [essentially] bound? Or free? If [essentially] bound, then, since its essence cannot depart, there is no Liberation; for, if it [the essence,] departed, then it [Soul,] would [cease, with the cessation of its essence, and] not be eternal. If [on the other hand, you reply that it is essentially] free, then meditation and the like [which you prescribe for the attainment of liberation,] are unmeaning. To this he replies:²

Messrs. Böhtlingk and Roth call Dr. Ballantyne's भूयरूप: 'Fehlerhaft für भूयोरूप:.' Their substitute is, so far as I know, conjectural.

According to most interpreters, however, the preceding Aphorism has reference to the question whether it be only after Soul is

BOOK I., APH. 160.

Soul is ever free, though it may seem bound in all sorts of ways. Aph. 160. It [Soul,] is altogether free, [but seemingly] multiform, [or different, in appearance, from a free thing, through a delusive semblance of being bound].

a. It is not bound; nor is it liberated; but it is ever free, [see § 19]. But the destruction of ignorance [as to its actual freedom,] is effected by meditation, &c.,¹ [which are, therefore, not unmeaning, as alleged in § 159. d.].

b. It has been declared that Soul is a witness.² Since it is a witness [some one may object], even when it has attained to discriminating [between Nature and Soul], there

 [Well, some one may ask], at all times of what nature is Soul? To this he replies:⁴

⁵ Vijnána says that this Aphorism and that next following specify notes of Soul which establish that its essential condition is neither

BOOK I., APH. 163.

The real condition of Soul.

Aph. 162. [The nature of Soul is] constant freedom.

a. 'Constant freedom :' that is to say; Soul is, positively, always devoid of the Bondage called Pain [see §§ 1 and 19]; because Pain and the rest are modifications of Understanding,¹ [which (see § 61) is a modification of Nature, from which Soul is really distinct].

ज्जीदासीन्यं चेति ॥ १६३ ॥

Soul's indifference.

Aph. 163. And, finally, [the nature of Soul is] indifference [to Pain and Pleasure, alike].

a. By 'indifference' is meant non-agency. The word iti [rendered 'finally,'] implies that the exposition of the Nature of Soul is completed.²

b. [Some one may say, the fact of] Soul's being an agent is declared in Scripture. How is this, [if, as you say, it be not an agent]? To this he replies:³

b. The repetition of the expression 'from the proximity of Intellect' is meant to show that we have reached the conclusion: for thus do we see [practised] in the Scriptures,³ [e. g., where it is said, in the Veda: 'Soul is to be known; it is to be discriminated from Nature: thus it does not come again, it does not come again '⁴].

END OF BOOK I.

a. The subject-matter [of the Institute] has been set forth [in Book I.]. Now, in order to prove that it is not the Soul that undergoes the alterations [observable in the course of things], he will tell, very diffusely, in the Second Book, how the creation is formed out of the Primal Principle. There, too, the nature of the products of Nature is to be declared fully, with a view to the very clear discrimination of Soul from these. Therefore, according to [the verses],¹

b. 'Whoso rightly knows its changes, and the Primal Agent [Nature], and Soul, the eternal, he, thirsting no more, is emancipated,'

c. we remark, that, with reference to the character, &c., of Emancipation, all the three [things mentioned in these verses] require to be known. And here, in the first place, with advertence to the consideration, that, if Nature, which is unintelligent, were to create without a motive, we should find even the emancipated one bound, he states the motive for the creation of the world:²

The verses quoted are from the Mahábhárata, xii., 7879, and occur in Chap. ccxvi., in the Section entitled Moksha-dharma. Ed.

The motive for creation. Aph. 1. Of Nature [the agency, or the being a maker, is] for the emancipation of what is [really, though not apparently,] emancipated, or else for [the removal of] itself.

a. The expression 'the being a maker' is borrowed from the last aphorism of the preceding Book. Nature makes the world for the sake of removing the pain, which is [really] a shadow [Book I., 58], belonging to the Soul, which is, in its very nature, free from the bonds of pain; or [to explain it otherwise,] for the sake of removing pain [connected] by means of but a shadowy link; or [on the other hand,] it is 'for the sake of itself,' that is to say, for the sake of removing the actually real pain [which consists] of itself.¹

c. But then, if creation were for the sake of Emancipation, then, since Emancipation might take place through creation once for all, there would not be creation again and again; to which he replies:²³

विरक्तस्य तन्सिडेः ॥ २ ॥

Successive creation why. Aph. 2. Because this [Emancipation] is [only] of him that is void of passion.

a. Emancipation does not take place through creation once for all; but it is [the lot only] of him that has been extremely tormented many times by the various pain of birth, death, sickness, &c.; and, therefore, [successive creation goes on] because Emancipation actually occurs in the case only of him in whom complete dispassion has

b. He tells the reason why dispassion does not take place through creation once for all:²

Force of the foregoing reason.

Aph. 3. It is not effected by the mere hearing; because of the forcibleness of the impressions⁴ from eternity.

a. Even the hearing [of Scripture, in which the distinctness of Nature from Soul is enounced,] comes [not to all alike, but only] through the merit of acts done in many births, [or successive lives]. Even then dispassion is not established through the mere hearing, but through direct cognition; and direct cognition does not take place suddenly, because of the forcibleness of false impressions that have existed from eternity, but [the required direct cognition takes place] through the completion of Concentration; and there is an abundance of obstacles to Concentration [see Yoga Aphorisms, Book II]: therefore, only after many births do dispassion and Emancipation take place at any time of any one at all: such is the meaning.¹

b. He states another reason for the continuous flow of creation $:^2$

बहुभृत्यवद्वा प्रत्येकम् ॥ ४ ॥

Another reason for continuous creation. Aph. 4. Or as people have, severally, many dependants.

a. As householders have, severally, many who are dependent upon them, according to the distinctions of wife, children, &c., so, also, the Qualities, viz., Goodness, &c., [Book I., § 61. b.] have to emancipate innumerable Souls, severally. Therefore, however many Souls may have been emancipated, the onflow of creation takes place for the emancipation of other Souls; for Souls are [in number,] without end: such is the meaning. And so the Yoga aphorism [Book II., § 22] says: 'Though it have ceased

b. But then why is it asserted that Nature alone creates, when, by the text, 'From that or this Soul proceeded the Ether,'² &c., it is proved that Soul, also, creates? To this he replies :³

b. But then, if it be thus, how is it laid down that Nature's creativeness, moreover, is real; since we are told [in Scripture,] that creation, moreover, is on a level with a dream? To this he replies:²

कार्यतस्तत्मिच्चेः ॥ ६ ॥

The reality of Nalure's creativeness. Aph. 6. Since it is proved from the products.

a. That is to say: because the real creative character of Nature is established just 'from the products,' viz., by that evidence [see Book I., \S 110,] which acquaints us with the subject [in which the creative character inheres]; for products are real, inasmuch as they produce impressions and exhibit acts.⁴ [The reality of eternal things is established here, just as it is by Locke, who says: 'I think

These existing products being admitted, the Sánkhya argues that they must have a cause; and, as this cause means neither more nor less than something creative, whatever proves the existence of the cause proves, at the same time, its creative character.]

b. But then [it may be said], on the alternative [see § 1] that Nature works for herself, she must energize with reference to the emancipated Soul, also. To this he replies:¹

चेतनाद्देशान्नियमः कारतकमाक्षवत् ॥ ७॥

Aph. 7. The rule is with reference to one knowing; just as escape from a thorn.

a. The word chetana here means 'one knowing;' because the derivation is from chit, 'to be conscious'. As one and the same thorn is not a cause of pain to him who, being 'one knowing,' i.e., aware of it, escapes from that same, but actually is so in respect of others; so Nature, also, is escaped by 'one knowing,' one aware, one who has accomplished the matter: to him it does not consist of pain; but to others, who are not knowing, it actually is a cause of pain : such is the 'rule,' meaning, the distribution. Hence, also, of Nature, which is, by its own nature, bound [inasmuch as it consists of bonds], the self-emancipation is possible; so that it does not energize with reference to the emancipated Soul ¹ [§ 6. b.].

b. But then [suggests some one], what was said [at § 5], that, in respect of Soul, the creative character is only fictitiously attributed, this is not proper; because it is fitting, that, by the conjunction of Nature, Soul, also, should be modified into Mind, &c.; for a modification of wood, &c., resembling earth, &c., through the conjunction of earth, &c., is seen: to which he replies:²

Soul not creative, though associated with what is so. Aph. 8. Even though there be conjunction [of Soul] with the other [viz., Nature], this [power of giving rise to

a. Even though there be conjunction with Nature, there belongs to Soul no creativeness, 'immediately,' i.e., directly. An illustration of this is, 'like the burning action of iron:' as iron does not possess, directly, a burning power; but this is only fictitiously attributed to it, being through the fire conjoined with it: such is the meaning. But, in the example just mentioned, it is admitted that there is an alteration of both; for this is proved by sense-evidence: but, in the instance under doubt, since the case is accounted for by the modification of one only, there is cumbrousness in postulating the modification of both; because, otherwise, by the conjunction of the China-rose, it might be held that the colour of the crystal was changed.¹

Creation when. Aph. 9. When there is passion, or dispassion, there is concentration, [in the latter case, and] creation, [in the former].

a. When there is passion, there is creation; and, when there is dispassion, there is 'concentration,' i. e., the abiding [of Soul] in its own nature [see Yoga Aphorisms, Book I., § 3^2]; in short, emancipation, or the hindering of the modifications of the thinking principle [Yoga Aphorisms, Book I., § 2^2]: such is the meaning. And so the import is, that Passion is the cause of creation; because of their being³ simultaneously present or absent.⁴

Relative time and Aph. 12. [Relative] Space and Time [arise] from the Ether, &c.

a. The Space and Time which are eternal [and absolute], being the source of the Ether, are, really, sorts of qualities of Nature: therefore it is consistent that Space and Time should be all-pervading. But the Space and Time which are limited arise from the Ether, through the conjunction of this or that limiting object: such is the meaning. By the expression '&c.,' [in the aphorism,] is meant 'from the apprehending of this or that limiting object.'¹ Products of intellect. Aph. 14. Merit, &c., are products of it.

a. The meaning is, that Merit, Knowledge, Dispassion, and Supernatural Power, moreover, are formed out of intellect, not formed of self-consciousness (ahankára), &c.; because intellect alone [and not self-consciousness,] is a product of superlative Purity,⁶ [without admixture of Passion and Darkness].

Self-consciousness.

Aph. 16. Self-consciousness is a conceit.

a. 'Self-consciousness' is what makes the Ego, as a potter [makes a pot]; the thing [called] the internal instrument (antah-karana): and this, inasmuch as a property and that of which it is the property are indivisible, is spoken of as 'a conceit," [viz., of personality], in order to acquaint us that this is its peculiar modification. Only when a thing has been determined by intellect [i.e., by an act of judgment (see § 13. a.)], do the making of an Ego and the making of a Meum take place.²

b. He mentions the product of Self-consciousness, which has arrived in order :³

The Mind whence. Aph. 18. The eleventh, consisting of [the principle of] Purity, proceeds from modified Self-consciousness.

a. The 'eleventh,' i.e., the completer of the eleven, viz., Mind, [or the 'internal organ,'—which is not to be confounded with 'the Great one,' called also Intellect and Mind,—alone,] among the set consisting of sixteen [§ 17], consists of Purity; therefore it is produced from Selfconsciousness 'modified,' i.e., pure: such is the meaning. And hence, too, it is to be reckoned that the ten organs are from the Passionate Self-consciousness; and the Subtile Elements, from the Dark Self-consciousness.³

of the Organs. Aph. 19. Along with the organs of action and the organs of understanding another is the eleventh.

a. The organs of action are five, viz., the vocal organ, the hands, the feet, the anus, and the generative organ; and, the organs of understanding are five, those called the organs of sight, hearing, touch, taste, and smell. Along with these ten, 'another,' viz., Mind, is 'the eleventh,' i.e., is the eleventh organ: such is the meaning.¹

a. That Scripture which there is about absorption into deities is not 'of an originator,' that is to say, it does not refer to an originator; because [although a thing, e.g., a jar, when it ceases to be a jar, is usually spoken of as being resolved into its originator, viz., into earth, yet] we see the absorption of a drop of water into what, nevertheless, is not its originator, viz., the ground; [and such is the absorption into a deity from whom the Mind absorbed did not originally emanate].²

b. Some say that the Mind, included among the organs, is eternal. He repels this:³

THE SÁNKHYA APHORISMS.

The Sense not to be confounded with its site. Aph. 23. The Sense is supersensuous; [it being the notion] of mistaken persons [that the Sense exists] in [identity with] its site.

a. Every Sense is supersensuous, and not perceptible; but only in the opinion of mistaken persons does the Sense exist 'in its site,' e.g., [Sight,] in the eye-ball, in the condition of identity [with the eye-ball]: such is the meaning. The correct reading is: ['The sense is something supersensuous; to confound it with] the site,¹ [is a mistake].'²

b. He rebuts the opinion that one single Sense, through diversity of powers, performs various offices:³

शक्तिभेदेऽपि भेदसिडी नैकल्पम् ॥ २४ ॥

All the organs are not one organ. All the organs are not being established if a difference of powers be [conceded], there is not a oneness [of the organs].

े इन्द्रियं सर्वमतीन्द्रियं नतु प्रत्यक्षं भान्ता-नामेव लधिष्ठानं गालकं तादात्म्येनेन्द्रियमित्यर्थः। छधिष्ठानमित्येव पाठः ॥

' एकमेवेन्द्रियं शक्तिभेदादिलक्ष्रणकार्यकारीति मतमपाकरोति ॥

a. Even by the admission that a diversity of powers belongs to one single organ, the diversity of organs is established; because the powers are, assuredly, organs; therefore, there is not a singleness of organ: such is the meaning.¹

b. But then [it may be said], there is something unphilosophical in supposing various kinds of organs to arise from one single Self-consciousness. To this he replies :⁸

How this happens. Aph. 27. By reason of the varieties of transformation of [which] the Qualities [are susceptible], there is a diversity [of their product, the Mind,] according to circumstances.

a. As one single man supports a variety of characters, through the force of association,—being, through association with his beloved, a lover; through association with one indifferent, indifferent; and, through association with some other, something other,—so the Mind, also, through association with the organ of vision, or any other, becomes various, from its becoming one with the organ of vision, or any other; by its being [thereby] distinguished by the modification of seeing, or the like. The argument in support of this is, 'of the Qualities,' &c.; the meaning being, because of the adaptability of the Qualities, Goodness, &c., to varieties of transformation.⁴

An illustration. Aph. 37. As the cow for the calf.

a. As the cow, for the sake of the calf, quite spontaneously secretes milk, and awaits no other effort, just so, for the sake of the master, Soul, the Organs energize quite spontaneously: such is the meaning. And it is seen, that, out of profound sleep, the understanding of its own accord wakes up.¹

b. With reference to the question, how many Organs there are, external and internal combined, he says : ²

करणं 'चयोदशविधमवान्तरभेदात् ॥ ३৮ ॥

The number of the Aph. 38. Organ is of thirteen sorts, Organs. through division of the subordinates.

a. The triad of internal organs, and the ten external organs, combined, are thirteen. He says 'sorts,' in order to declare that, of these, moreover, there is an infinity, through [their] distinction into individuals. He says 'through division of the subordinates,' with a reference to the fact, that it is understanding which is the principal organ; the meaning being, because the organs [or functions,] of the single organ, called understanding, are more than one.⁴

b. But then, since understanding [it seems,] alone is the principal instrument in furnishing its object [of emancipation] to Soul, and the instrumentality of the others is secondary, in this case what is [meant by] secondariness?¹ [Why are they said to be instrumental at all?] In regard to this he says:²

Efficiency of the Organs whence. Aph. 39. Because the quality of being most efficient is conjoined with the organs; as in the case of an axe.

a. The quality of the [principal] organ, the understanding, in the shape of being most efficient on behalf of soul, exists, derivatively, in the [other derivative] organs. Therefore it is made out that an organ is of thirteen kinds: such is the connexion with the preceding aphorism.³

b. 'As in the case of an axe.' As, although the blow itself, since it is this that puts an end to our non-possession of the result, is the principal efficient in the cutting, yet the axe, also, is an efficient, because of its close proximity to the quality of being the principal efficient, so [here, also]: such is the meaning. He does not here say that Self-consciousness is secondarily efficient, meaning to imply that it is one with the internal organ.¹

c. Specifying the precise state of the case in regard to the condition of secondary and principal, he says:²

दयोः प्रधानं मना लाेकवज्ञृत्यवर्गेषु ॥ ४० ॥

Preeminent efficiency of Mind illustrated. Aph. 40. Among the two [the external and the internal organs], the principal is Mind; just as, in the world, among troops of dependants.

a. 'Among the two,' viz., the external and the internal, 'Mind,' i. e., understanding, simply, is 'the principal,' i. e., chief; in short, is the immediate cause; because it is that which furnishes Soul with its end; just as, among troops of dependants, some one single person is the prime minister of the king; and the others, governors of towns, &c., are his subordinates: such is the meaning.¹

b. Here the word 'Mind' does not mean the third internal organ,² [(§ 30. a.) but Intellect, or 'the Great One.']

c. He tells, in three aphorisms, the reasons why Intellect [or understanding] is the principal:³

ञ्चव्यभिचारात् ॥ ४१ ॥

A reason why Understanding is the principal. in Soul's emancipation;] because there is no wandering away.

a. That is to say: because it [understanding,] per-

तथाशेषसंस्काराधारत्वात् ॥ ४२ ॥

Another reason. Aph. 42. So, too, because it [the understanding,] is the depository of all self-continuant impressions.

a. Understanding alone is the depository of all selfcontinuant impressions, and not the Sight, &c., or Selfconsciousness, or the Mind; else it could not happen that things formerly seen, and heard, &c., would be remembered by the blind, and deaf, &c.^{*}

स्मृत्यानुमानाच ॥ ४३ ॥

Another reason.

Aph. 43. And because we infer this [its preeminence] by reason of its meditating.

a. That is to say: and because we infer its preeminence, 'by reason of its meditating,' i.e., its modification in the shape of meditation. For the modification of thought called 'meditation' is the noblest of all the modifications [incident to Soul, or pure Thought, whose blessedness, or state of emancipation, it is to have no modification at all]; and the Understanding itself, which, as being the depository thereof, is, further, named Thought [chitta, from the

b. But then, suppose that the modification 'meditation' belongs only to the Soul, [suggests some one]. To this he replies:³

संभवेच स्वतः ॥ ४४ ॥

Meditation not essential to Soul. Aph. 44. It cannot be of its own nature.

a. That is to say : meditation cannot belong to Soul essentially; because of the immobility^{*} [of Soul; whereas 'meditation' is an effort].

b. But then, if thus the preeminence belongs to understanding alone, how was it said before [at $\S 26$,] that it is the Mind that takes the nature of both [sets of organs, in a. In respect to the difference of function, the condition, as secondary, or principal, of the instruments [of Soul] is relative. In the operations of the Sight, &c., the Mind is principal; and, in the operation of the Mind, Self-consciousness, and, in the operation of Self-consciousness, Intellect, is principal^{*} [or precedent].

An organ may be, relatively, principal, or secondary. Aph. 45. The condition [as regards Soul's instruments,] of secondary and principal is relative; because of the difference of function.

b. But then, what is the cause of this arrangement; viz., that, of this [or that] Soul, this [or that] Intellect, alone, and not another Intellect, is the instrument? With reference to this, he says:³

Aph. 46. The energizing [of this or that Intellect] is for the sake of this [or that Soul]; because of [its] having been purchased by the works [or deserts] of this [or that Soul]; just as in the world.

a. The meaning is, that, 'the energizing,' i.e., all operation, of the instrument is for the sake of this [or that] Soul; because of [its] having been purchased by this [or that] Soul's works [or deserts]; just as in the world. As, in the world [or in ordinary affairs], whatever axe, or the like, has been purchased by the act, e.g., of buying, by whatever man, the operation of that [axe, or the like], such as cleaving, is only for the sake of that man [who purchased it]: such is the meaning. The import is, that therefrom is the distributive allotment of instruments^a [inquired about under § 45. δ .]

movable, still, since it is the means of Soul's experience, it is called the act of Soul; just like the victories, &c., of a king [which are, really, the acts of his servants]; because of Soul's being the owner¹ [of the results of acts; as the king is of the results of the actions of his troops].

c. In order to make clear the chiefship of Intellect, he sums up,² [as follows]:

समानकर्मयोगे बुद्देः प्राधान्यं लोकवस्तो-कवत् ॥ ४७ ॥

Summing up. Aph. 47. Admitting that they [the various instruments of Soul, all] equally act, the preeminence belongs to Intellect; just as in the world, just as in the world.

a. Although the action of all the instruments is the same, in being for the sake of Soul, still the preeminence belongs to Intellect alone: just as in the world. The meaning is, because it is just as the preeminence, in the world, belongs to the prime minister, among the rulers of towns, and the rest, even although there be no difference so far as regards their being [all alike workers] for the sake of the king. Therefore, in all the Institutes, Intellect alone is celebrated as 'the Great One.' The repetition

a. In the next place, the gross product of Nature, viz., the great elements and the dyad of bodies, is to be described; and, after that, the going into various wombs, and the like; [this description being given] with a view to that less perfect degree of dispassionateness which is the cause of one's engaging upon the means of knowledge; and, after that, with a view to perfect freedom from passion, all the means of knowledge are to be told : so the Third [Book] commences:¹

अविशेषाद्विशेषारम्भः ॥ १ ॥

The elements whence. Aph. 1. The origination of the diversified [world of sense] is from that which has no difference.

a. '[Which] has no difference,' i.e., that in which there exists not a distinction, in the shape of calmness, fierceness, dulness, &c., viz., the Subtile Elements, called 'the five somethings, simply;' from this [set of five] is the origina-

' इतः परं प्रधानस्य स्यूलकार्यं महाभूतानि शरीरदयं च वक्तव्यं ततश्व विविधयोनिगत्यादयो ज्ञानसाधनानुष्ठानहेलपरवैराग्यार्थं ततश्व परवै-राग्याय ज्ञानसाधनान्यखिलानि वक्तव्यानीति ततीयारम्भः ॥ tion of 'the diversified,' [so called] from their possessing a difference, in the shape of the calm, &c., viz., the gross, the great Elements: such is the meaning. For, the fact of consisting of pleasure, or the like, in the shape of the calm, and the rest, is manifested, in the degrees of greater, and less, &c., in the gross Elements only, not in the Subtile; because these, since they have but the one form of the calm, are manifest to the concentrated,¹ [practitioners of meditation, but to no others].

b. So then, having stated, by composing the preceding Book, the origin of the twenty-three Principles, he states the origination, therefrom, of the dyad of bodies:²

तस्माच्छरीरस्य ॥ २ ॥

The Body whence. Aph. 2. Therefrom, of the Body.

a. 'Therefrom,' i.e., from the twenty-three Principles,

' नास्ति विशेषः शान्तघेारमूढत्यादिरूपेा यचे-त्यविशेषेा भूतसूरसं पच्चतन्माचाख्यं तस्माच्छा-न्तादिरूपविशेषवच्चेन विशेषाणां स्थूलानां महा-भूतानामारम्भ इत्यर्थः । सुखाद्यात्मकता हि शा-न्तादिरूपा स्थूलभूतेष्वेव तारतम्यादिभिरभिव्य-ज्यते न सूरस्मेषु तेषां शान्तैकरूपतयैव योगिष्वभि-व्यक्तेरिति ॥

b. Now he proves that mundane existence could not be accounted for otherwise than on the ground of the twentythree Principles:²

तबीजात्संसृतिः ॥ ३ ॥

Aph. 3. From the seed thereof is mundane existence.

a. 'Thereof,' i.e., of the Body; 'from the seed,' i.e., from the Subtile one, as its cause, in the shape of the twenty-three Principles, is 'mundane existence,' i.e., do the going and coming of Soul take place; for it is impossible that, of itself, there should be a going, &c., of that which, in virtue of [its] all-pervadingness, is immovable: such is the meaning. For Soul, being conditioned by the twenty-three Principles, only by means of that investment migrates from Body to Body, with a view to experiencing the fruits of previous works.^{*}

b. He states, also, the limit of mundane existence:1

ञाविवेकाच प्रवर्तनमविशेषाणाम् ॥ ४ ॥

Mundane existence till when.

Aph. 4. And, till there is discrimination, there is the energizing of these, which have no differences.

a. The meaning is, that, of all Souls whatever, void of the differences of being Lord, or not Lord, &c., [though, seemingly, possessed of such differences,] 'energizing,' i.e., mundane existence, is inevitable, even till there is discrimination [of Soul from its seeming investments]; and it does not continue after that.²

b. He states the reason of this :³

उपभागादितरस्य ॥ ५ ॥

The reason of this. Aph. 5. Because of [the necessity of] the other's experiencing.

a. The meaning is: because of the necessity that the other, i.e., that that very [Soul], which does not discriminate, should experience the fruit of its own [reputed] acts.¹

b. He states, that, even while there is a Body, during the time of mundane existence, fruition [really] is not:²

संप्रति परिमुक्तों दाभ्याम् ॥ ६ ॥

Soul's bondage only Aph. 6. It [Soul,] is now quite free from both.

a. 'Now,' i.e., during the time of mundane existence, Soul is quite free ' from both,' i.e., from the pairs, viz., cold and heat, pleasure and pain, &c.: such is the meaning.⁴

b. He next proceeds to describe, separately, the dyad of Bodies :⁵

The Gross and the Subtile Bodies distinguished. Aph. 7. The Gross [Body] usually arises from father and mother; the other one is not so.

a. The Gross one arises from father and mother, 'usually,' i.e., for the most part; for there is mention also of a Gross Body not born of a womb: and 'the other,' i.e., the Subtile Body, is 'not so,' i.e., does not arise from a father and mother; because it arises from creation, &c.: such is the meaning.¹

b. He decides [the question], through disguise by which one of the Bodies, Gross and Subtile, the conjunction of the pairs [pleasure and pain, &c.,] with Soul takes place.²

पूर्वेात्मत्तेस्तन्कार्यनं भागादेकस्य नेतरस्य ॥ ८ ॥

Which of the bodies is the cause of Soul's bondage. Aph. 8. To that which arose antecedently it belongs to be that whose result is this; because it is to the one that there belongs fruition, not to the other.

a. 'To be that whose result is this,' i.e., to have pleasure and pain as its effect [reflected in Soul], belongs to that Subtile Body alone whose origin was 'antecedent,' i.e., at the commencement of the creation [or annus magnus]. Why? Because the fruition of what is called pleasure and pain belongs only to 'the one,' i. e., the Subtile Body, but not to 'the other,' i.e., the Gross Body; because all are

' स्थूलं मातापितृजं प्रायशे बाह्रल्येनायेानि-जस्यापि स्थूलशरीरस्य स्मरणादितरच सूक्ष्मश-रीरं न तथा न मातापितृजं सर्गाद्युत्पन्नला-दित्यर्थः ॥

b. He tells the nature of the Subtile Body just mentioned:²

सप्तद्शेनं लिङ्गम् ॥ ९ ॥

The Sublile Body how Constituted. Aph. 9. The seventeen, as one, are the Subtile Body.

a. The Subtile Body, further, through its being container and contained, is twofold. Here the seventeen, [presently mentioned,] mingled, are the Subtile Body; and that, at the beginning of a creation, is but one, in the shape of an aggregate; [as the forest, the aggregate of many trees, is but one]: such is the meaning. The seventeen are the eleven organs, the five Subtile Elements, and Understanding. Self-consciousness is included under Understanding.³

But [one may ask,] if the Subtile Body be one, how can there be diverse experiences accordingly as Souls are [numerically] distinct, [one from another]? To this he replies:¹

व्यक्तिभेदः कर्मविशेषात् ॥ १० ॥

How there come to be individuals. Aph. 10. There is distinction of individuals, through diversity of desert.

a. Although, at the beginning of the creation [or annus magnus], there was but one Subtile Body, in the shape of that investment [of Soul (see Vedánta-sára, § 62.) named] Hiranyagarbha, still, subsequently, moreover, there becomes a division of it into individuals,—a plurality, partitively, in the shape of individuals;—as, at present, there is, of the one Subtile Body of a father, a plurality, partitively, in the shape of the Subtile Body of son, daughter, &c. He tells the cause of this, saying, 'through diversity of desert;' meaning, through actions, &c., which are causes of the experiences of other animal souls.^{2 3}

b. But then, on this showing, since the Subtile one alone, from its being the site of fruition, is [what ought to be denoted by the term] Body, how is the term Body applied to the Gross one? To this he replies :¹

तदधिष्ठानाष्ट्रये देहे तद्वादात्तद्वादः ॥ ११ ॥

Why the Gross Body is called a Body. a called a bidy. Aph. 11. From its being applied to it, [viz., to the Subtile one], it is applied to the Body, which is the tabernacle of the abiding thereof.

a. But then, what proof is there of another body,—other than the one consisting of the six sheaths,—serving as a tabernacle for the Subtile Body? With reference to this, he says :²

न स्वातन्त्यात्तदृते छायावचित्रवच्च ॥ १२ ॥

The Subtile Body dependent on the Gross Body. Aph. 12. Not independently [can the Subtile Body exist], without that [Gross Body]; just like a shadow and a picture.

a. That is to say: the Subtile Body does not stand independently, 'without that,' i. e., without a support; as a shadow, or as a picture, does not stand without a support. And so, having abandoned a Gross Body, in order to go

b. But then [it may be said], of the Subtile Body, since it is limited substance, as the Air, or the like, let the Ether [or Space], without [its] being attached [to anything], be the site: it is purposeless to suppose [its] attachment to anything else. To this he replies:²

For it must have a material support.

Aph. 13. No, even though it be limited; because of [its] association with masses; just like the sun.

a. Though it be limited, it does not abide independently, without association; for, since, just like the sun, it consists of light, it is inferred to be associated with a mass: such is the meaning. All lights, the sun and the rest, are seen only under the circumstances of association [of the luminiferous imponderable] with earthy substances; and the Subtile Body

Size of the Subtile Aph. 14. It is of atomic magnitude; Body. for there is a Scripture for its acting.

a. 'It,' the Subtile Body, is 'of atomic magnitude,' i. e., limited, but not absolutely an atom; because it is declared to have parts. Wherefore? 'For there is Scripture for its acting;' i. e., because there is Scripture about its acting. When a thing is all-prevading, it cannot act; [action being motion]. But the proper reading is, 'because there is Scripture for its moving.'⁴

Another proof of this. Aph. 15. And because there is Scripture for its being formed of food.

a. That is to say: it, viz., the Subtile Body, cannot be all-pervading; because there is a Scripture for its being partially formed of food; for, if it were all-prevading, it would be eternal. Although Mind, &c., are not formed of the Elements, still it is to be understood that they are spoken of as formed of food, &c.; because they are filled with homogeneous particles, through contact with food;⁴ [as the light of a lamp is supplied by contact with the oil].

Why the Subtile Body migrates.

Aph. 16. The mundane existence of Subtile Bodies is for the sake of Soul; just like a king's cooks.

a. That is to say: as the cooks of a king frequent the kitchens for the sake of the king, so the Subtile Bodies transmigrate for the sake of Soul.²

b. The Subtile Body has been discussed in respect of all its peculiarities. He now likewise discusses the Gross Body, also:³

Aph. 19. Others say that it consists of one element.

b. He tells us what is proved by the fact that the Body consists of the Elements $:^1$

Intellect not the result of organization.

Aph. 20. Intellect is not natural [a natural result of organization]; because it is not found in them severally.

a. That is to say: since we do not find intellect in the separated Elements, intellect is not natural to the Body,— which consists of the Elements,—but is adventitious.²

b. He states another refutation^s [of the notion that Intellect is a property of the Body]:

प्रपञ्चमरणाद्यभावश्व ॥ २१ ॥

A further argument. Aph. 21. And [if the Body had intellect natural to it,] there would not be the death, &c., of anything.

a. That is to say: and, if the Body had intellect natural to it, there would not be the death, the profound sleep, &c., 'of anything,' of all things. For death, profound sleep, &c., imply the body's being non-intelligent; and this, if it were, by its own nature, intelligent, would not take

मदशक्तिवचेत्प्रत्येकपरिदृष्टे सांहत्ये तदुझवः ॥ २२॥

An illustrative objection disposed of. Aph. 22. If [you say that Intellect results from organization, and that] it is like the power of something intoxicating, [the ingredients of which, separately, have no intoxicating power, we reply, that] this might arise, on conjunction, if we had seen, in each [element, something conducive to the result].

a. But then, as an intoxicating power, though not residing in the substances severally, resides in the mixed substance, so may Intellect, also, be; if any one say this, it is not so. If it had been seen in each [constituent], its appearance in the compound might have had place; but, in the case in question, it is not the case that it is seen in each.

Therefore, in the illustration [of something intoxicating resulting from mixture], it being established, by the Institutes, &c., that there is, in each ingredient, a subtile tendency to intoxicate, it is settled only that, at the time when these combine, there will be a manifestation of the [latent] power of intoxicating; but, in the thing illustrated, it is not established, by any proof whatsoever, that there is intelligence, in a subtile [or undeveloped] state, in the elements separately: such is the meaning.¹

b. It was stated [§ 16,] that the Subtile Bodies transmigrate for the sake of Soul. In regard to this, he tells, in two aphorisms, by what operation, dependent on the birth of the Subtile Bodies, which means their transmigrations into Gross Bodies, what aims of Soul are accomplished :²

Bondage whence.

Aph. 23. From knowledge [acquired during mundane existence, comes] salvation, [Soul's chief end].

a. That is to say: by the transmigration of the Subtile Body, through birth, there takes place the direct operation of discrimination [between Soul and Non-Soul]; [and] thence, in the shape of emancipation, Soul's [chief] End.¹

बन्धो विपर्ययात् ॥ २४ ॥

Aph. 24. Bondage [which may be viewed as one of the ends which Soul could arrive at only through the Subtile Body,] is from Misconception.

a. Through the transmigration of the subtile body, from misconception, there is that [less worthy] end of soul, in the shape of bondage, consisting of pleasure and pain: such is the meaning.²

b. Liberation and Bondage, [resulting] from knowledge and misconception [respectively], have been mentioned. Of these, in the first place, he explains Liberation [arising] from knowledge:³

Knowledge has neither cooperator nor substitute, in liberating Soul. Aph. 25. Since this [viz., knowledge,] is the precise cause [of liberation], there is neither association [of anything else with it, e.g., good works,] nor alternativeness, [e.g., of good works, in its stead].

a. In respect of there being neither association nor alternativeness, he states an illustration :¹

स्वन्नजागराभ्यामिव मायिकामायिकाभ्यां नेाभ-योर्मुक्तिः पुरुषस्य ॥ २६ ॥

This illustrated. Aph. 26. The emancipation of Soul does not depend on both [knowledge and works, or the like]; as [any end that one aims at is not obtained] from dreams and from the waking state, [together, or alternatively, which are, severally,] illusory and not illusory.

a. But, even if it be so, [some one may say,] there may be association, or alternativeness, of knowledge of the truth with that knowledge which is termed Worship of [the One, all-constitutive, divine] Soul; since there is no illusoriness in this object of Worship. To this he replies:²

Man's conception of complete. the All is faulty.

a. Even of 'that other,' i. e., of the [just-mentioned] object of worship, the non-illusoriness is not complete; because imaginary things, also, enter into [our conception of, and overlie, and disguise,] the object of worship, the [One, all-constitutive] Soul: such is the meaning.¹

b. He states in what part [of it] is the illusoriness of the [object of] Worship,² [just referred to]:

संकल्पितेऽप्येवम् ॥ २५ ॥

Where the fault applies. Aph. 28. Moreover, it is in what is fancied that it is thus [illusory].

a. That is to say: 'moreover, it is thus,' i. e., moreover, there is illusoriness, in that portion of the thing meditated which [portion of it] is fancied by the Mind, [while it does not exist in reality]; for, the object of worship having been declared in such texts as, 'All this, indeed, is Brahma,'³ the illusoriness belongs entirely to that portion [of the impure conception of 'the All' which presents itself, to the undiscriminating, under the aspect] of the world.⁴

b. Then what profit is there in Worship? With reference to this, he declares [as follows]:¹

भावनोपचयाच्छुइस्य सर्वे प्रकृतिवत् ॥ २९ ॥

The fruit of Worship. Aph. 29. From the achievement of [the worship termed] meditation there is, to the pure [Soul], all [power]; like Nature.

a. Through the effecting of the worship which is termed meditation, there becomes, to the 'pure,' i. e., the sinless, Soul, all power; as belongs to Nature : such is the meaning. That is to say: as Nature creates, sustains, and destroys, so also the Purity of the understanding of the worshipper, by instigating Nature, creates, &c.² [But this is not Liberation, or Soul's chief end.]

b. It has been settled that Knowledge alone is the means of Liberation. Now he mentions the means of Knowledge:³

Restraint of the breath. Aph. 33. Restraint [of the breath] is by means of expulsion and retention.

a. That it is 'of the breath' is gathered from the notoriousness⁴ [of its being so].

b. He characterizes Postures, which come next in order:5

a. Simply through mere Practice, in the shape of Meditation, accompanied by Dispassion, Knowledge, with its instrument, Concentration, takes place in the case of those who are most competent [to engage in the matter]: such is the meaning. Thus has liberation through knowledge been expounded.³

b. After this, the cause of Bondage, viz., Misconception, declared in [the assertion,] 'Bondage is from Misconception,' [§ 24], is to be expounded. Here he first states the nature of Misconception :⁴

a. That is to say: the subdivisions of Misconception, which is the cause of Bondage, are Ignorance, Egoism, Desire, Aversion, and Fear of Dissolution; the five mentioned in the $Yoga,^1$ [see Yoga Aphorisms, Book II., § 3³].

b. Having stated the nature of Misconception, he states also the nature of its cause, viz., Disability:³

Aph. 39. Acquiescence is of nine sorts.

a. He will, himself, explain how it is of nine sorts.²

Perfections.

Aph. 40. Perfection is of eight sorts.

a. This, also, he will, himself, explain.³

b. Of the aforesaid, viz., Misconception, Disability, Acquiescence, and Perfection, since there may be a desire to know the particulars, there is, in order, a quaternion of aphorisms:⁴

a. The subdivisions of Misconception, which, in a general way, have been stated as five, are to be understood to be particularized 'as aforetime,' i. e., just as they have been declared by preceding teachers: they are not explained here, for fear of prolixity: such is the meaning.¹

Why Nature operates diversely.

Aph. 51. By reason of diversity of desert is Nature's [diverse] behaviour; like a born-slave.

a. Just by reason of diverse desert is the behaviour of Nature, as asserted, in the shape of diversity of operation. An illustration of the diversity is [offered in the example], 'like a born-slave.' That is to say: as, of him who is a slave from the embryo-state upwards, there are, through the aptitude arising from the habit³ of being a dependant, various sorts of behaviour, i. e., of service, for the sake of his master, so⁴ [does Nature serve Soul in various ways].

Absorption into Nature ineffectual. Aph. 54. Not by absorption into the cause is there accomplishment of the end; because, as in the case of one who has dived, there is a rising again.

a. In the absence of knowledge of the distinction [between Soul and Nature], when indifference towards Mind, &c., has resulted from worship of Nature, then absorption into Nature takes place; for it is declared: 'Through Dispassion there is absorption into Nature'. Even through this, i.e., the absorption into the cause, the end is not gained; 'because there is a rising again; as in the case of one who has dived.' As a man who has dived under water rises again, exactly so do Souls which have been absorbed into Nature reappear, [at the commencement of a new annusmagnus], in the condition of Lords; because it is impossible that one's Faults should be consumed, without a familiarity with the distinction [between Soul and Nature], in consequence of the reappearance of Passion, by reason of the non-destruction of habits,¹ &c.: such is the meaning.²

b. But then, the cause is not by any one caused to act. Being independent, then, why does she [Nature,] make that grief-occasioning resurrection of her own worshipper? To this he replies:³

a. Though Nature is 'not constrained to act,' not instigated, not subject to the will of another, yet 'this is fitting;' it is proper that he who is absorbed in her should rise again. Why? 'Because of her being devoted to another;' i. e., because she seeks Soul's end. The meaning is, that he who is absorbed in her is again raised up, by Nature, for the sake of Soul's end, which consists in knowledge of the distinction [between Nature and Soul]. And Soul's end, and the like, are not constrainers of Nature, but occasions for the energizing of her whose very being is to energize; so that there is nothing detracted from her independence.¹

b. He mentions, further, a proof that Soul rises from absorption into Nature:²

a. It is quite agreed, by all, that there is an emergent Lord, he who had been absorbed into Nature; for the ground of dispute [between Sánkhyas and the rest,] is altogether about an eternal Lord: such is the meaning.⁴

b. He expounds diffusely the motive for Nature's creating, which was mentioned only indicatorily in the first aphorism of the Second Book: ⁵

The action of Time, for example, takes place quite spontaneously, in the shape of one season's now departing and another's coming on : let the behaviour of Nature, also, be thus; for the supposition conforms to observed facts : such is the meaning.⁴

⁵ Of this Aphorism, and of the comment on it, MSS. of Vijnána's treatise afford a much better text than that here reprinted. In one of its more approved forms, that which Vijnána seems to elect, the original enunciation runs thus : उप्रन्यसृष्टयुपरागेऽपि न वि-रतोऽप्रवृद्धरज्जतस्वस्येवोर्गः । 'Furthermore, she [Nature,] does not give over effecting creation, with reference to another, [i. e., another soul than that of the spiritual sage, though she creates for such a sage no longer; and she acts, in so doing,] analogously to a snake, with reference to him who is unenlightened as to the real

THE SANKHYA APHORISMS.

How Nature affects one, and not another. Aph. 66. Moreover, [when Nature has left off distressing the emancipated,] she does not desist, in regard to her creative influence on another; as is the case with the snake, [which ceases to be a terror,] in respect of him who is aware of the truth in regard to the rope [which another mistakes for a snake].

a. Nature, though, in respect of one Soul, she have desisted, in consequence of discriminative knowledge, does not desist as regards her creative influence on another Soul, but does create in respect of that one; as the snake [so to speak,] does not produce fear, &c., in the case of him who is aware of the truth in regard to the rope, but does produce it, in respect of him who is ignorant [that what character of the rope' [which is mistaken for it; this illusory snake keeping him constantly in a state of alarm, though it ceases to affect him who has discovered that it is nothing more formidable than a yard or two of twisted hemp]. More closely, so far as regards the construction of the original : 'Furthermore, in like manner as a snake goes on influencing him who [Nature persists] in effecting creation,' &c.

That uparága, as embodied in the expression srishtyuparága, signifies 'causing,' 'effecting,' is the view of both Aniruddha and Vedánti Mahádera, who define it by karana.

The Aphorism in question, mainly as just exhibited, together with preferable deviations from the comment as given by Dr. Ballantyne, will be found at p. 13 of the variants appended to my edition of the Sánkhya-pravachana-bháshya. Nágeša, following Vijnána very closely, explains the Aphorism as follows : यथा प्रबुद्धरज्जतत्व प्रति निवृत्तोऽपहिरप्रबुद्धरज्जुतत्त्वस्य भयादिसृष्ट्यु-परागाच निवर्तते तथा ज्ञानिनं प्रति निवृत्तापि प्रकृतिरन्यं प्रति सृष्टौ प्रवर्तत इत्यर्थः । Ed. he looks upon is a rope, and not a snake]: such is the meaning. And Nature is likened to a snake, because of her disguising Soul, which is likened to a rope. Certain unintelligent persons, calling themselves Vedántis, having quite failed to understand that such is the drift of such examples as those of the rope, the snake, &c., suppose that Nature is an absolute nothing, or something merely imaginary. The matters of Scripture and of the legal institutes are to be elucidated by means of this [or that] example offered by the Sánkhyas, who assert the reality of Nature: it is not the case that the matter is simply esta-blished to be as is the example;¹ [the analogy of which is not to be overstrained, as if the cases were parallel throughout].

Aph. 67. And from connexion with Desert, which is the cause.

a. 'Desert,' which is the cause of creation, in consequence of the conjunction of this, also, she creates, for the sake of another Soul [than the emancipated one]: such is the meaning.¹

b. But then, since all Souls are alike indifferent, inasmuch as they do not desire [Nature's interference], what is it that here determines Nature to act only in regard to this one, and to desist in regard to that one? And Desert is not the determiner; because here, too, there is nothing to determine of which Soul what is the Desert; [Desert being inferrible only from, and, therefore, not cognizable antecendently to, its fruits]. BOOK IV.

Now, by means of a collection of narratives, recognized in the Institutes, the means of discriminative knowledge are to be displayed : so, for this purpose the Fourth Book is commenced.¹

राजपुचवत्तस्त्रीपदेशात् ॥ १ ॥

Soul set right by hearing the truth. [comes discrimination between Soul and Nature].

a. 'Discrimination' is supplied from the concluding aphorism of the preceding section. The meaning is : as, in the case of the king's son, discrimination is produced by instruction as to the truth. The story, here, is as follows: A certain king's son, in consequence of his being born under the [unlucky] star of the tenth portion² [of the twenty-seven portions into which the ecliptic is divided], having been expelled from his city, and reared by a certain forester, remains under the idea, that 'I am a forester.' Having learned that he is alive, a certain minister informs him: 'Thou art not a forester; thou art a king's son.'

े शास्त्रसिज्वाख्यायिकाजातमुखेनेदानीं विवे-कज्जानसाधनानि प्रदर्शनीयानीत्येतदर्धं चतुर्था-घ्याय ञ्चारभ्यते ॥

² The Sanskrit yields 'under the star [named] Ganda.' Ed.

As he, immediately, having abandoned the idea of his being an outcast, betakes himself to his true royal state, saying, 'I am a king,' so, too, it [the Soul], in consequence of the instruction of some kind person, to the effect that 'Thou, who didst originate from the First Soul, which manifests itself merely as pure Thought, art [thyself,] a portion thereof,' having abandoned the idea of its being Nature [or of being something material or phenomenal], rests simply upon its own nature, saying, 'Since I am the son of Brahmá, I am, myself, Brahmá, and not something mundane, different therefrom :' such is the meaning.¹

6. He exhibits another story, to prove that even women,

Śúdras, &c., may gain the [one desirable] end, through a Bráhman, by hearing the instructions of a Bráhman : ¹

पिशाचवदन्यार्थोपदेशेऽपि ॥ २ ॥

Even when the instruction is not addressed to the hearer. Aph. 2. As in the case of the goblin, even when the instruction was for the sake of another, [the chance hearer may be benefited].

a. That is to say: though the instruction in regard to the truth was being delivered, by the venerable Krishna, for Arjuna's benefit, knowledge of the distinction [between Soul and Nature] was produced in the case of a goblin standing near [and overhearing the discourse]: and so it may happen in the case of others, too.²

b. And, if knowledge is not produced from once instructing, then a repetition of the instruction is to be made; to which effect he adduces another story:⁸

a. That is to say: a repetition of instruction, also, is to be made; because, in the Chhándogya [Upanishad],¹ and the like, there is mention of Áruni, and others, as having more than once instructed Śwetaketu and others.²

b. With a view to the removal of desire, he sets forth, with an illustration, the fragility, &c., of Soul's accompaniments: ³

Transitoriness of mundane things. Aph. 4. As in the case of father and son; since both are seen; [the one, to die, and the other, to be born].

5. But then, granting that Pain may cease, on the cessation of hope, yet how can there be happiness, in the absence of causes thereof? It is replied: That natural happiness, resulting from the predominance of Purity in the mind, which remains obscured by hope, itself resumes its influence, on the departure of hope; as is the case with the coolness of water which [supposed natural coolness] had been hindered [from manifesting itself,] by heat: there is not, in this case, any need of means. And it is laid down that precisely this is happiness of Soul.¹

c. Since it is an obstructer of Concentration, exertion with a view to experience is not to be made, since this will be effected quite otherwise; as he states:²

Reflexion necessary, as well as hearing. Aph. 17. Not even though instruction be heard is the end gained, without reflexion; as in the case of Virochana.⁴

a. By 'reflexion' is meant such consideration as determines the import of the teacher's words. Without this, though the instruction be heard, knowledge of the truth does not necessarily follow; for it is written, that, though hearing the instruction of Prajápati, Virochana, as

The time for the process may embrace successive states of being. Aph. 20. There is no determination of the time; as in the case of Váma-deva.³

a. That is to say: moreover, if it be agreed that there is conjunction [of the Lord] with Passion, he cannot be eternally free; and, therefore, thy tenet [of his eternal freedom] is invalidated.²

b. Pray [let us ask], does lordship arise from the immediate union, with Soul, of the wishes, &c., which we hold to be properties of Nature, [not properties of Soul]? Or from an influence by reason of the mere existence of proximity, as in the case of the magnet? Of these he condemns the former alternative:³

Objection, on one Aph. 8. If it were from the conbranch of an alternative. Junction of the properties of Nature, it would turn out that there is association, [which Scripture denies of Soul].

a. From the conjunction, with Soul, of 'the properties of Nature,' i.e., Desire, &c., Soul, also, would turn out [contrary to Scripture,] to be associated with properties.²

And, therefore, your tenet of there being only one Lord is invalidated.¹

b. Be it as you allege; yet these are false reasonings; because they contradict the evidence which establishes [the existence of] a Lord. Otherwise, Nature, also, could be disproved by thousands of false reasonings of the like sort. He therefore says :²

Denial that it can be established by inference. there is [here] no [case of invariable] association [between a sign and that which it might betoken].

a. 'Association,' i.e., invariable concomitancy. 'There is none;' i.e., none exists, [in this case]. And so there is no inferential proof of there being a Lord; because, in such arguments as, 'Mind, or the like, has a maker, because it is a product,' [the fact of] invariable concomitancy³ is not established; since there is no compulsion [that every product should have had an intelligent maker]. Such is the meaning.⁴

Conjunction, in the case of the solitary, would be a contradiction. Aph. 13. With that which is solitary there cannot be conjunction of the property of Ignorance.

a. Since Soul has no association [with anything whatever], it is plainly impossible for it to be united with the property of Ignorance.¹

b. But then, [it may be replied,] what is to be asserted is, that the conjunction of Ignorance is simply through force of Ignorance [which is a negation, or nonentity]; and so, since this is no reality, there is no association occasioned thereby. To this he replies:²

a. There cannot belong to it such a regressus in infinitum as that of seed and sprout; because there is Scripture for the fact that the mundane state of souls, consisting of all undesirable things, viz., Ignorance, &c., had a beginning. For we hear, in Scripture, that these cease to exist at the dissolution of all things, in profound sleep, &c. Such is the meaning.⁸

b. But then, [you Vedántís will say], according to us, Ignorance is technically so termed, and is not, e.g., in

a. But, if the existence of ignorance were really not excluded by knowledge, then there would be resultlessness of knowledge, because of its not debarring Ignorance, [which is the only result competent to knowledge]: such is the meaning.¹

b. He censures the other alternative,² [viz., that know-ledge might exclude Soul]:

On the Vedánta theory, the world ought to vanish. Aph. 18. If it [Ignorance,] meant the being excludible by Knowledge, it would be [predicable], in like manner, of the world, also.

a. Or suppose it to be the case, that to be Ignorance means simply the being excludible by Knowledge, still such a thing could not have had an eternal existence in souls [as held by Vedántís (see § 15, b.)], but must have had a commencement. For it is proved, by such re-

a. Merit is not to be denied on the ground of its being no object of sense; because it is inferred; since, otherwise, 'the diversity in the operations of Nature' [accommodating one person, and inconveniencing another,] would be unaccounted for: such is the meaning.¹

If any one says this, it is not so; since there is proof, in the shape of natural consequence, 'it is alike, in respect of both,' i. e., of both merit and demerit; because, otherwise, a prohibitory injunction, such as, 'He should not approach another's wife,' would be unaccounted for. Such is the meaning.¹

b. He repels the doubt, that, if Merit, &c., be acknowledged [to exist], then, in consequence of souls' having properties, &c., they must be liable to modification, &c.:²

But the better reading is, 'we discern [that] Happiness, &c., [exist].' The five members of an argumentative statement are the Proposition, Reason, Example, Synthesis [of the two premises], and Conclusion; and, by the 'conjunction,' i. e., the combination, of these, all things, viz., Happiness, &c., are proved to exist. THE SANKHYA APHORISMS.

a. That is to say: from once apprehending concomitance [of a supposed token and the thing betokened], a 'connexion,' i.e., a pervadedness [or invariable attendedness of the token by the betokened,] is not established; and frequency [of the same apprehension] follows¹ [the rule of the single apprehension; just as a thousand times nothing amount to nothing]. Therefore [argues the sceptic,] since the apprehending of an invariable attendedness is impossible, nothing can be established by Inference. [This] he clears up:²

Aph. 29. Pervadedness is a constant consociation of characters, in the case of both, or of one of them.

ence], which is invariably non-errant, whether in the case of 'both,' the predicate and the reason, or in the case of 'one of them,' the reason only. 'Of both' is mentioned with reference to the case of 'equal pervadedness': [e. g., every equilateral triangle is equilateral]. And the invariableness may be apprehended through an appropriate confutation [or reductio ad absurdum of the denial of it]; so that there is no impossibility in apprehending 'pervadedness,' [and of inferring on the strength of it]. Such is the import.¹

b. He declares that Pervadedness is not an additional principle, consisting, e. g., of some such power as is to be mentioned ² [in § 31]:

न तत्त्वान्तरं वस्तुकल्पनाप्रसक्तेः ॥ ३० ॥

Aph. 30. It [Pervadedness,] is not [as some think (see § 31),] an additional principle [over and above the twenty-five (Book I., § 61)]; for it is unsuitable to postulate entities [praeter rationem].

'धर्मसाहित्यं धर्मतायां साहित्यं सहचार इति यावत् । तथा चोभयोः साध्यसाधनयोरेकतरस्य साधनमाचस्य वा नियतोऽव्यभिचरितो यः सह-चारः स व्यान्निरित्यर्थः । उभयोरिति समव्या-न्निपन्ने प्रोक्तम् । नियमश्चानुकूलतर्केण याद्य इति न व्यान्नियहासंभव इति भावः ॥

a. 'Pervadedness' is not an entity other than a fixed consociation of characters; because it is unsuitable to suppose, further, some entity as the residence of what constitutes 'pervadedness.' But we consider that what constitutes 'pervadedness' belongs to extant things simply. Such is the meaning.1

6. He states the opinion of others: 2

A heterodox opinion regarding 'Pervadedness.

Aph. 31. [But certain] teachers say that it [Pervadedness,] is [another principle, in addition to the twenty-five,] resulting from the power of the thing itself.

a. But other teachers assert that 'Pervadedness' is. positively, a separate principle, in the shape of a species of power, generated by the native power of the 'pervaded.' But [they continue,] ' Pervadedness ' is not simply a power of the [pervaded] thing itself; else it would exist wherever the thing is, [which 'pervadedness' does not do]. For smoke, when it has gone to another place [than the point of its origination], is not attended by fire; and, by going into another place, that power is put an end to. Therefore [contend these teachers,] there is no over-extension in the

a. That is to say: Panchaśikha holds that pervadingness is the power which consists in being the sustainer, and that 'Pervadedness'^s is the having the power which consists in being the sustained; for Intellect, and the rest, are treated as being pervaded [or invariably attended,] by Nature, &c.;⁴

b. But then, why is a 'power of the sustained' postulated? Let 'Pervadedness' be simply an essential power of the thing pervaded. To this he [Panchaśikha,] replies:¹

न 'स्वरूपशक्तिर्नियमः पुनर्वाट्प्रसक्तेः ॥ ३३ ॥

Panchasikha's reply to an objection. Aph. 33. The relation is not an essential power; for we should have [in that case,] a tautology.

a. But 'the relation,' viz., 'Pervadedness,' is not an essential power; for we should [thus] have a tautology; because, just as there is no difference between 'water-jar' and 'jar for water,' so, also, there is none in the case of 'Intellect' and 'what is Pervaded' [by Nature, of which Intellect consists]. Such is the meaning.³

BOOK V., APH. 35.

6. He himself explains the 'Tautology :'1

विशेषगानर्थकाप्रसक्तेः ॥ ३४ ॥

The reason why. Aph. 34. Because we should find the distinction unmeaning; [as Intellect does not differ from Nature at all, except as does the sustained from the sustainer].

a. This is almost explained by the preceding aphorism.²

b. He [Panchaśikha,] mentions another objection :3

पल्लवादिष्वनुपपत्तेश्व' ॥ ३५ ॥

Aph. 35. And because it [Pervadedness,] would not be reconcilable in shoots, &c.

a. Because shoots, &c., are invariably attended [at their origination,] by trees, &c. But this cannot be called simply an essential power [in the shoot]; because, since the essential power [that which belongs to the shoot as being a shoot,] does not depart, even in the case of an amputated shoot, we should, even then, find it attended [by the tree, which, however, no longer accompanies it]. Such is the sense. But the power [(see § 32), which consists in having the character] of the 'sustained' is destroyed at the time of amputation; so that there is no 'Pervadedness' then. Such is the import.¹

b. But then what? Panchaśikha says that 'Pervadedness' is not a result of any essential power. Then, since smoke is not sustained by fire [see § 32, where he contends that 'sustainedness' is what really expresses pervasion], it would turn out that it [viz., smoke,] is not [as token of something that is betokened,] accompanied by fire. To this he says: ²

a. That is to say: 'were it settled' that 'a power of the sustained' constitutes the fact of 'Pervadedness,' it would be really settled 'by the like argument,' i.e., by parity of reasoning, that the fact of 'Pervadedness' results from essential power, also, [§ 31, a.].¹

b. It was with a view to substantiate what was stated [in § 27], viz., that the Qualities, and the rest, are established [as realities,] by the employment of the fivemembered [form of argumentative exposition], that he has repelled, by an exposition of 'Pervadedness,' the objection to Inference as evidence, [or as a means of attaining right notions].²

Sound and sense. Aph. 37. The connexion between word and meaning is the relation of expressed and expresser.

a. To the 'meaning' belongs the power termed expressibleness; to the 'word,' the power termed expression : simply this is their 'connexion;' their interrelation, as it were.³

³ Instead of 'simply,' &c., read, 'this itself is their connexion, such [a connexion] as [is seen] in anatheticity.'

The 'connexion' in question is the swarúpa-sambandha, for which see Professor Cowell's translation of the Kusumánjali, p. 13, note +.

A better reading than the one which Dr. Ballantyne accepted from me is, certainly, that which omits the clause rendered, 'to the word, the power termed expression.' According to Nágesa, 'the expressibleness inherent in the meaning is the connexion [intended]':

अर्थगतं वाच्यलमनुयोगितावलांबन्धः ।

Anuyogin and anuyogitá, as Professor Cowell informs me, are the opposites of pratiyogin and pratiyogitá, which latter I would represent, provisionally, by 'antithetic' and 'antitheticity.'

Pratiyogin, a very much commoner technicality than anuyogin, occurs in the comment on Aph. 95 of this Book. It must suffice, here, to add, that, as I learn from Professor Cowell, the anuyogin, From one's knowing this [connexion between a given word and meaning], the meaning is suggested [or raised in the mind,] by the word. Such is the import.¹

Aph. 38. The connexion [between a word and its sense] is determined by three [means].

That is to say: the connexion [just] mentioned [in § 37,] is apprehended by means of these three, viz., information from one competent [to tell us the meaning], the usage of the old man [whose orders to his sons we hear, and then observe what actions ensue, in consequence (see the Sáhitya-darpana, § 11)], and application to the same thing which has a familiar name,⁴ [whence we gather the sense of the less familiar synonym].

a. What is asserted [in § 41,] is not the case; since sacrificings, gifts, &c., in the shape, e.g., of the relinquishment of some thing for the sake of the gods, are really, in themselves, 'what constitutes merit,' i.e., what is enjoined by the Veda, 'preeminently,' i.e., because of their having preeminent fruit. And sacrificings, &c., since they are in the shape of wishings, &c., [of which we are perfectly conscious,] are not something transcending intuition. But 'what constitutes merit' [which the objector supposes to transcend intuition,] does not belong to something mysterious that resides in sacri-

3 Instead of Vijnána's expression, 'the idea of [its] being preceded by consciousness,' Nágeśa has: नुचिपूर्वककृतनवृद्धि:, 'the idea that [its] being made was preceded by consciousness,' i,e., the notion that it was produced aforethought.

Vedánti Mahádeva impliedly contrasts with a jar, as being a production of an intelligent and self-conscious maker, a sprout, which originates as a factor of a series of causes and effects alternating from the time when vegetation was first evolved. marked that a thing is not Man's work merely through its having been uttered by Man; for no one speaks of the respiration during profound sleep as being Man's work, [or voluntary act]. But what need to speak of antecedence of Understanding? The Vedas, just like an expiration, proceed, of themselves, from the Self-existent, through the force of fate, wholly unpreceded by thought. Therefore, they are not [a Supreme] Man's work.¹²

The Vedas, however, just like an expiration, and by virtue of desert [of souls], issue, spontaneously, from Brahmá, without ever being consciously produced [by him]. Hence they are not productions of a person.'

Dr. Ballantyne was misled by the full stop mistakenly put, in my edition of the Sánkhya-pravachana-bháshya, before किंतू. Ed. b. thing,] and of non-cognizance, [which would, in like manner, disprove it].

a. It is held, by the followers of the Yoga, that there exists, in distinction from the several letters, an indivisible [unit, the] word, such as 'jar,' &c., [which they call] the 'expression ;'1 just as there is a jar, or the like, possessing parts, which is something else than the parts, viz., the shellshaped neck, &c.; and that particular sound, termed a word, is called the 'expresser,' because of its making apparent the meaning: such a word [we Sánkhyas assert, in opposition to the Yogas,] is without evidence [of its existence]. Why? 'By reason both of cognizance and of non-cognizance,' [as thus] : Pray, is that word [which you choose to call the 'expression,' cognized, or not? On the former alternative, what need of that idle thing, [the supposed 'expression'? For,] by what collection of letters. distinguished by a particular succession, this ['expression'] is manifested, let that be what acquaints us with the meaning. But, on the latter alternative, [viz., that it is not cognized], the power of acquainting us with a meaning does not belong to an 'expression' which is not cognized. Therefore, the hypothesis of an 'expresser' is useless. Such is the meaning.²

But then [some one may say], of Sound, whose existence was 'previously settled,' the manifestation, through noise, &c., that alone is the object in the cognition of its production, [which you speak of in § 58]. An example of manifestation [of a thing previously existing] is, 'as of a jar by a lamp.⁷³

The doubt disposed of. Aph. 60. If the dogma of products' being real [is accepted by you], then this is a proving of the already proved.

a. If you say that 'manifestation' means the taking of a present condition by means of rejecting an unarrived [or future,] condition, then this is our dogma of the reality of products [Book I., § 115]; and such an eternity belongs to all products, [not specially to Sound]; so that you are proving the already proved [or conceded]: such is the meaning. And, if 'manifestation' is asserted to be just in the shape of the cognition of what is presently real, then we should find [on your theory,] that jars, &c., also, are eternal; because it would be proper [on that theory,] that the object in the perception of production, by the operation of the causes [the potter, &c.], should be that of knowledge only, as in the case of words, &c., and also in the case of jars, &c.; [for the jar is shown by the lamp, not made by it]. Such is the import.² 3

b. An objection to the non-duality of Soul, not previously mentioned, is to be adduced; therefore the refutation of the non-duality of Soul is recommenced,¹ [having been already handled under Book I., § 149]:

²नाद्वैतमात्मनो लिङ्गान्नड्वेदप्रतीतेः ॥ ६१ ॥

* Non-duality of Soul denied on grounds of Inference. Aph. 61. Non-duality of Soul is not; for its distinctions are cognized through signs.

a. That is to say : because it is proved to be really different [in different persons], by the sign that one quits Nature [or escapes from the mundane condition], while another not does quit it, &c.³

b. But, he tells us, there is even sense-evidence destructive of the non-distinction of Soul from things [that are] non-Soul, asserted in the Scriptural texts, 'All this is Soul only,' ' All this is Brahma only :'⁵⁶

Non-duality denied Aph. 62. Moreover, there is not on grounds of Sense. [non-distinction of Soul] from non-Soul; because this is disproved by sense-evidence.

a. That is to say: moreover, there is not a non-distinction between the non-Soul, i.e., the aggregate of the experienceable, and Soul; because this is excluded also by sense-evidence, [as well as by signs, (§ 61)]; because, if Soul were not other than the whole perceptible, it would also not be different from a jar and a web; since the jar, e.g., would not be other than the web, which [by hypothesis,] is not other than the Soul: and this is excluded by sense-evidence, which constrains us to apprehend a distinction ¹ [between a jar and a web].

b. In order to clear the minds of learners, he illustrates this point, though already established :²

नोभाभ्यां तेनैव ॥ ६३ ॥

The reasons combined. Aph. 63. Not between the two [Soul and non-Soul, is there non-difference]; for that same [couple of reasons].

a. 'Between the two,' i.e., between Soul and non-Soul, the two together, also, there is not an absolute non-difference;

' छनात्मनापि भोग्यप्रपच्चेनात्मनो नाद्वैतं प्रत्यक्षेणापि बाधात् । छात्मनः सर्वभोग्याभेदे घटपटयोरप्यभेदः स्यात् । घटादेः पटाद्यभिचा-त्माभेदात् । स च भेदयाहकप्रत्यक्षबाधित इत्यर्थः॥ १ शिष्यबृद्धिवैश्रारद्याय प्राप्तमपर्थं विश्दयति॥ for the couple of reasons [given in § 61 and § 62]: such is the meaning.¹

b. But then, in that case, what is the drift of such Scriptural texts as, '[All] this is Soul only?' To this he replies:²

अन्यपरत्वमविवेकानां तत्र ॥ ६४ ॥

Scripture accommodates itself to human frailty of understanding. Aph. 64. There it is for the sake of something else, in respect of the undiscriminating.

a. That is to say: 'in respect of the undiscriminating,' with reference to undiscriminating persons, in the case of non-difference [between Soul and non-Soul, apparently asserted in Scripture], it is 'there for the sake of something else;' i.e., the observation³ is [designed to be] provocative of worship. For, in the secular world, through want of discrimination, body and the embodied, the experienced and the experiencer, are regarded as indifferent;⁴

नात्माविद्या ैनोभयं जगदुपादानकार एं निःसङ्ग-त्वात् ॥ ६५ ॥

The Vedánta system supplies no material for the world. Supplies of the world; because of the solitariness of [Soul].

a. The soul alone, or Ignorance lodged in the soul, or both together, like a pair of jar-halves [conjoined in the formation of a jar], cannot be the material of the world; 'because of the solitariness' of Soul. For things undergo alteration only through that particular conjunction which is called 'association;' hence the [ever] solitary Soul, without a second, since it is not associated, cannot serve as a material cause. Nor can it do so by means of [association with] Ignorance, either; because the conjunction of Ignorance has been already excluded by the fact of solitariness. Moreover, that the two together should be the material is impossible, even as it is that either, severally, should be the material; simply 'because of the solitariness.' Such is the meaning. And, if you choose that Ignorance should subsist as a substance located in the soul, as the air in the heavens, then there is an abandonment of the non-duality of Soul,¹ [for which you Vedántís contend].

b. He himself [in Book I., § 145,] decided that the soul consists of light, [or knowledge]. In regard to this, he repels the primâ facie view, founded on the text, 'Brahma

a. A single subject has not the nature both of joy and of intelligence; because, since pleasure is not experienced at the time of knowing pain, pleasure and knowledge are different: such is the meaning.³

b. But then, in that case, what becomes of the Scripture, that it [Soul,] consists of joy? To this he replies:⁴

A Vedánta term explained away. Aph. 67. Metaphorical [is the word joy, in the sense] of the cessation of pain.

a. That is to say: the word 'joy,' in the Scriptural expression which means, really, the cessation of pain, is metaphorical. This is stated in [the maxim], 'Pleasure is the departure of both pain and pleasure.' ¹

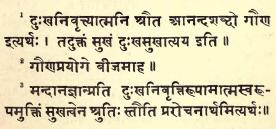

b. He states the cause of this metaphorical employment :²

विमुक्तिप्रशंसा मन्दानाम् ॥ ६८ ॥

Why the term was used Aph. 68. It is [as] a laudation of emancipation, for the sake of the dull.

a. That is to say: the Scripture, as an incitement to 'the dull,' i.e., the ignorant, lauds, as if it were joy, the emancipation, consisting in the cessation of pain, which [cessation] is the essence of the soul;³⁴ [for the soul is such joy as consists of the absence of pain].

declared,¹ of the internal organ, he repels the primâ facie view, that the Mind is all-pervading :²

न व्यापकलं मनसः करणलादिन्द्रियत्वाद्वां ॥ ६९ ॥

The Mind not all-pervading. Aph. 69. The Mind is not all-pervading; because it is an instrument, and because it is, moreover, an organ.

a. The Mind, meaning the totality of the internal instruments,⁴ is not all-pervading; for it is an instrument, as an axe, or the like, is. The word 'and' [literally, 'or,' in the Aphorism,] implies a distributive alternative, [not an optional one]. The meaning is this, that, [while the whole of the internal instruments are instruments,] the particular internal instrument, the third⁵ [the Mind, manas⁶],

⁵ See Book II., Aph. 30, at p. 208, supra. Ed.

b. Here, there being a doubt whether this be convincing, he propounds an appropriate confutation :³

सक्रियत्वाइतिश्रुतेः ॥ ७० ॥

Proof of this. Aph. 70. [The Mind is not all-pervading]; for it is movable; since there is Scripture regarding the motion.

a. That is to say; since, inasmuch as there is Scripture regarding the going of the Soul [which, being all-pervading, cannot go] into another world, it being settled that it is its adjunct, the internal organ, that is movable, [see Book I., § 51], it cannot be all-pervading.⁴

b. In order to prove that it is a product, he repels also the opinion that the Mind is without parts:¹

न निर्भागत्वं तद्योगात्वटवत् ॥ ७१ ॥

The Mind has parts. Aph. 71. Like a jar, it [the Mind,] is not without parts; because it comes in contact therewith, [i. e., with several Senses, simultaneously].

a. The word 'therewith' refers to 'organ,' which occurs in a preceding aphorism, [§ 69]. The Mind is not without parts; 'because it comes in contact,' simultaneously, with several sense-organs. But, 'like a jar,' it is of medium size, [neither infinite nor atomic], and consists of parts. Such is the meaning. And it is to be understood that the internal organ, when in the state of a cause, [and not modified and expanded, e.g., into knowledge, which is its product,] is, indeed, atomic.³

² This reading is peculiar; many MSS. of Vijnána, with which agree Aniruddha, Nágcéa, and Vedánti Mahádeva, having भागिनः. Their elucidations of the aphorism here follow. Aniruddha: न कारएएलाभो भागिनो जगत्कारएएस्य प्रधानस्य । निर्भागत्वप्र्युते: । मूल्काकारएएत्वाज्ञास्य कारएएग्त-रमिति प्र्युते: । मूल्काकारएएत्वाज्ञास्य कारएएग्त-रमिति प्र्युते: । Nágeśa: पूंप्रकृतिविषये भागिनो भागत्काभो Sवयवावयविभावो न युज्यते । Then follows the quotation as in Vijnána. Vedánti Mahádeva: भागाः कारएएानि यस्य कार्यने न सन्ति तस्य प्रधानस्य न कारएएलाभो निर्भागत्वप्र्युते: । Some MSS. of Vijnána have precisely the words of Nágeśa, transcribed above, barring the quite immaterial substitution of प्रकृतिपुरुषविषये at the beginning.

HIMT: is, without doubt, the correct reading. Vijnána and Nágeša take it to denote 'Soul and Nature;' Aniruddha and Vedánti Mahádeva, 'Nature' only. Bhágin means, literally, 'that which is made up of parts,' or 'the Whole.' Hence, 'Whole' is to take the place of Dr. Ballantyne's 'Experiencer.' It occurs again in Aph. 81 of this Book, at p. 379, infra. Ed. Soul and Nature not made up of parts. Aph. 73. No parts [from the presence of which in the discerptible, one might infer destructibility,] are found

a. Parts are not appropriate to 'the Experiencer,' i. e., to Soul, or to Nature; for there is Scripture for their being without parts; that is to say, because of such [texts] as, 'Without parts, motionless, quiescent, unobjectionable, passionless.' ¹

b. It has been stated [in Book I., \S 1,] that Emancipation is the cessation of pain. In order to corroborate this, he then repels the doctrines of others, in regard to Emancipation:³

Aph. 86. So, too, is it in the case And those of the of the sixteen [categories of the Nyáya, &c. Nyáya], &c.

The eternity of Atoms unscriptural.

Aph. 87. [The five Elements being products, as declared in Book I., § 61], Atoms are not eternal, [as alleged in the Nyáya]; for there is Scripture for their being products.

a. Although that text of Scripture is not seen by us, because it has disappeared, in the lapse of time, &c., yet it is to be inferred from the words of teachers, and from the tradition of Manu,² [Ch. I., v. 27].

a. It is no rule, that to be directly cognizable should result from colour only, [or other object of sense], as the cause; because direct cognition may result from Merit, &c., [viz., mystical practices, and so forth], also: such is the meaning.³

b. Well, if that be the case, pray is the dimension of an Atom a reality, or not? With reference to this, he decides the question of dimension,⁴ [as follows]:

a. There are not four kinds of dimension, viz., small, great, long, and short; but there are only two sorts. ⁶ Because those can be accounted for by two:' that is to say, the four varieties can be accounted for by merely two, the atomic [or positively small,] and the great. Such is the meaning. For the short and the long are merely subordinate kinds of the dimension called great; else we should have, e. g., no end of dimensions, in the shape of the crooked, &c.¹

THE SANKHYA APHORISMS.

Nor a peculiar power. Aph. 95. Nor is it [likeness,] a manifestation of [something's] own power; because the apprehension of it is different.

a. Moreover, likeness is not the manifestation of a particular natural power of a thing; because the apprehension of likeness is different from the apprehension of power. For the cognition of a power is not dependent on the cognition of another thing; the cognition of likeness, on the other hand, is dependent on the cognition of a correlative,¹ as is the case with the cognition of a non-existence; so that the two conceptions are heterogeneous. Such is the meaning.²

b. But still, let the likeness among individual jars, &c., be merely that they have [all alike,] the name, e. g., of jar. To this he replies:³

which acquaints us with the thing; [i.e., the supposition is inconsistent with the definition of the term].

a. Connexion is proved only where disjunction incidentally subsists; because, otherwise, there is no room for the supposition of connexion; the case being accounted for, as will be explained,—simply by the natural state of the matter. And this incidental disjunction is impossible, if connexion be eternal. Therefore, connexion is not eternal; for this is debarred by the very evidence that acquaints us with Connexion. Since, 'as regards both alike,' i. e., the perception of qualifiedness, and the inferring of it, 'the case is otherwise disposed of;' viz., simply by the natural state [of the thing and its qualities], neither of the two is evidence for [the imaginary category called] Coinherence : such is the meaning.⁵

a. The senses do not reveal things unconnected with them. 'Because of their not reaching.' For we do not see that lamps, or the like, reveal what they do not reach to; and because, if they were to reveal what they do not reach to, we should find them revealing all things, viz., those intercepted, and the like. Such is the meaning. Therefore there is an organ, other than the eye-ball, for the sake of connexion with the distant sun, &c. Such is the import. And the instruments reveal the objects simply by delivering the object to the soul,—for they are, themselves, unintelligent;—as a mirror reveals the face. Or [in other words], their revealing an object is simply their taking up an image of the object.¹

b. He repels the conjecture : But then, in that case, the opinion [of the Naiyáyikas,] that the sight is luminous

The Sight not formed of Light. [and the Sight does so, too,] is the Sight luminous [or formed of Light]; because the thing is accounted for by [the theory of] modifications, [to be now explained].

a. The Sight is not to be asserted to be luminous, on the ground that light is seen to glide. Why? Because, just as in the case of the vital air, where there is no luminosity, the gliding forth can be accounted for through a kind of modification. Such is the meaning. For, as the vital air, without having at all parted from the body, glides out ever so far from the end of the nose, under the modification called breathing, [and thus smells a distant flower], just so the Sight, though a non-luminous substance, without, indeed, quitting [connexion with] the body, all in a moment will dart off [like the protruded feeler of a polyp,] to a distant object, such as the sun, by means of the species of change called modification.³

a quality, [of the Sight, or other sense]; because it is for the sake of connexion that it glides forth.

a. The modification is not a fragment of the Sight, or other sense, [serving as] the cause of the revealing of objects,—a part disjoined like a spark,—or a quality, like, e.g., Colour; but the modification, whilst a portion thereof, is something else than a fragment, or a quality. For, if there were disruption, connexion of the sun, &c., with the Sight would not, through it, take place; and, if it were a quality, the motion called 'gliding forth' would be unaccountable; [for a quality cannot move by itself]. Such is the meaning.¹

b. But, if, thus, the 'modifications' are substances, how is [the term] 'modification' applied to the qualities of intellect, in the shape of Desire, &c.? To this he replies :²

'Modifications' may be qualities, as well as substances. Aph. 108. It [the term 'modification,'] is not confined to substances; because it is etymological, [not technical, and applies, etymologically, to a quality, as well].

a. Since it is also stated, in Scripture, that the senseorgans are formed of the Elements, the doubt may occur, whether the Scriptural texts are, perhaps, to be applied distributively, according to the difference of particular worlds. In regard to this, he says:¹

न देशभेदेऽप्यन्योपादानतास्मदादिवन्नि-यमः²॥ १०९॥

a. Not through 'difference of locality,' as the world of Brahmá, and the like, is it, again, the fact, that the organs have any other material than self-consciousness; but the rule is, that those of all alike are formed of self-consciousness; as is the case, e. g., with us who live in this terrestrial world. For we hear, in Scripture, of only one Subtile Body

Hence are they [the organs,] spoken of as being formed of the Elements. Such is the meaning. For, only in reliance on the support of Light, or other Element, do the Organs, viz., the Sight, &c., [formed] from the accompanying Selfconsciousness, come to exist; as fire, in reliance on the support of earthly fuel, results from the attendant Light,¹ [or Heat, which cannot manifest itself alone].

The material of Bodies. Aph. 112. In all [Bodies] Earth is the material: in consideration [however,] of some speciality, there is designation as this [or that other element than earth, as entering into the constitution of some given body], as in the preceding case [treated under § 110].

a. In all Bodies the material is Earth only. 'In consideration of some speciality;' i.e., in consequence of intensity through excess, &c., in the case of Body, as before [in the case of the Organs], there is, however, designation as consisting of Elements, five, or four, &c., on the ground only of there being a support, as in the case of the materiality of the Organs. Such is the meaning.²

b. But then, since the vital air is the principal thing in the Body, let the vital air itself be the originant of the Body. To this he replies :¹

न देहारम्भकस्य प्राणलमिन्द्रियशक्तितस्त-क्तििद्वेः ॥ ११३ ॥

The vital air not the source of the Body.

Aph. 113. The vital air is not [on the allegation that it is the principal thing in the Body, to be considered] the originant of the Body; because it [the vital air, or spirit,] subsists through the power of the organs.

a. The vital air, consisting in the function of the organs, does not subsist in the absence of the organs. Therefore, since, in a dead Body, in consequence of the absence of the organs, there is the absence of the vital air, the vital air is not the originant of the Body.³

b. But then, in that case, since the vital air is not the cause of the Body, the Body might come into existence even without the vital air. To this he replies:⁴

Soul essential to a living Body. Soul essential to a [viz., the Body,] is constructed [only] through the superintendence of the experiencer [Soul]: otherwise, we should find putrefaction.

a. 'Through the superintendence,' i. e., only through the operation, 'of the experiencer,' i. e., Soul [literally, that which has the vital airs], is 'the construction of the site of experience,' i. e., the Body; because, 'otherwise,' i. e., if the operation of the vital airs were absent, we should find putrefaction in the semen and blood, just as in a dead body. Such is the meaning. And thus, by the several operations of circulating the juices, &c., the vital air is a concomitant cause² of the Body, through the sustaining of it: such is the import.³

b. But then [it may be said], it is only the vital air, itself, that can be the superintender; because it is this which Perfect and imperfect emancipation. Aph. 117. In the case of the two, it is with a seed; in the case of the other, this is wanting.

a. 'In the case of the two,' viz., concentration and profound sleep, the identity with Brahma⁵ is 'with a seed,' i. e., associated with some cause of Bondage, [or reappearance in the mundane state]; 'in the case of the other,'i. e., in emancipation, this cause is absent : this is the distinction. Such is the meaning.¹

b. But then, Concentration and profound sleep are evident; but what evidence is there of Emancipation? This objection of the atheist he repels: ²

The reality of Emancipation. Aph. 118. But there are not the two [only]; because the triad, also [Emancipation inclusive], is evident; as are the two.

a. The meaning is, that, since Emancipation, also, is 'evident,' i.e., is inferrible, through the example of Concentration and profound sleep, there are not the two, viz., profound sleep and Concentration, only; but Emancipation, also, really is. And the argument is thus. The quitting of that identity with Brahma⁴ which [identity] exists during profound sleep, &c., takes place only through a fault, viz., Desire, or the like, lodged in the mind; and, if this fault be annihilated by knowledge, then there results

a permanent condition, quite similar to profound sleep, &c.; and it is precisely this that is Emancipation.¹²

b. But then [suggests some one, with reference to § 117], granting, that, even notwithstanding the existence of the 'seed' [or source of return to the mundane state,] called Memory,⁸ a mental modification after the form of any object does not arise during concentration, inasmuch as Memory is [then] dulled [or deadened] by apathy, &c., yet, in the case of a person in profound sleep, since Memory prevails, there will really be cognition of objects; consequently, it is not proper to say that there is identity with Brahma during profound sleep. To this he replies:⁴

' समाधिसुषुप्रिटृष्टान्तेन मोस्रस्यापि दृष्टता-दनुमितलाचतु दो सुषुप्रिसमाधी एव किंतु मो-स्रोऽप्यस्तीत्यर्थः । छनुमानं चेत्यम् । सुषुप्त्यादौ यो ब्रह्मभावस्तत्त्यागश्वित्तगताद्रागादिदोषादेव भ-वति स चेद्दोषो ज्ञानेन नाश्तित्त्तर्हि सुषुप्त्यादिस-दृश्येवावस्था स्थिरा भवति सैव मोस्र इति ॥

Memory inactive during profound sleep. Aph. 119. There is not the revelation, by memory, of an object likewise during the conjunction of a [more potent] fault

a. As in the case of apathy, so, also when there is the conjunction of the fault of sleep, Memory does not reveal its own objects, does not remind us of its objects; for the 'secondary,' the subordinate, Memory,⁸ cannot defeat the

² The rendering given above is susceptible of improvement; and so, very probably, is that which follows: 'Where, moreover, there is influence from an obstruction [like that offered by sleep], mental impression does not inform one of objects [and, hence, one is then exempt from desires, &c., and in a state identical with that of emanoipation]: a cause [of desires, &c.; and such is mental impression,] does not countervail what is predominant, [e.g., sleep, which is, as it were, temporary Brahmahood or emancipation].'

Aniruddha's interpretation of this obscure aphorism, possibly by reason of his elliptical mode of expression, is far from clear. His view of its sense is, certainly, peculiar. Ed.

more potent fault of Sleep: such is the meaning. For the really more potent fault makes the memory powerless, incompetent to produce its effects; [and so there is nothing, in this, to prevent identification of Soul with Brahma, during profound sleep, any more than during apathetic Concentration]: such is the import.¹

b. It was stated, in the Third Book [§ 83], that the retention of a Body by him who is emancipated while still living, is 'in consequence of a mere vestige of impression.'² To this it is objected as follows. Experience is observed, in the case of the [alleged person] emancipated during life, just as in the case of the like of us, [and this experience continuous,] even though it may be constantly in respect of a single object: now, this is unaccountable [on the hypothesis of his really being emancipated]; because the antecedent impression is annihilated, exactly on its having produced the first [instant of] experience, and because no subsequent impression arises, inasmuch as *know*ledge debars it; just as is the case with Merit. To this he replies:³

' यथा वैराग्ये तथा निद्रादोषयोगेऽपि सति वासनया न खार्थख्यापनं खविषयस्मारणं भव-ति यतो न निमिन्नस्य गुणीभूतस्य संस्कारस्य बलवन्नरनिद्रादोषवाधकलं संभवतीत्यर्थः। बल-वत्तर एव हि दोषो वासनां दुर्वलां स्वकार्यकुण्ढां करोतीति भावः॥

a. In like manner, in the case of the whirling of the potter's wheel, the self-continuant principle,³ called motal inertia, is to be regarded as only one, continuing till the completion of the whirling.⁴

b. It has been stated [§ 111,] that there are vegetable Bodies. He repels the objection of the atheist, that, in the case in question, there is not a Body, inasmuch as there is no knowledge of the external: 5

Aph. 121. Knowledge of the external is not indispensable [to constitute a Body]: trees, shrubs, climbers, annuals, trees with invisible flowers, grasses, creepers, &c., [which have internal consciousness], are, also, sites of experiencer and experience; as in the former case.

a. There is no necessity that that only should be a Body, in which there is knowledge of the external; but it is to be held that the being a Body, in the form of being the site of experiencer and experience, belongs also to trees, &c., which have internal consciousness; because, 'as in the former case,' meaning the putrescence already mentioned [see § 114], of the Bodies of men, &c., [which takes place] in the absence of the superintendence of an experiencer [the living soul], even in the same way do withering, &c., take place in the Bodies of trees, &c., also: such is the meaning. And to this effect there is Scripture.³

Law, as well as Scripture, is authority for this. Aph. 122. And from the Legal Institutes [the same fact may be inferred, viz., that vegetables have bodies and are conscious].

a. But then, from the fact that trees, &c., also, are thus conscious, we should find merit and demerit accruing to them. To this he replies :²

न देहमाचतः कर्माधिकारितं वैशिष्ट्यप्रुतेः॥१२३॥

Vegetables not moral Aph. 123. Not merely through a agents. Body is there susceptibility of Merit and Demerit; for Scripture tells us the distinction.

a. The vital spirit is not liable to the production of Merit and Demerit through a Body merely. Why? 'For Scripture tells us the distinction:' because we are told, in Scripture, that the liability results just from the being

b. Showing that the liability to Merit and Demerit is solely through the kind of Body, he mentions how Body is of three kinds:²

चिधां चयाणां व्यवस्था कर्मदेहेापभोगदेहोभय-देहाः ॥ १२४ ॥

Body of three principal kinds. a threefold distribution; the Body of merit, the Body of experience, and the Body of both.

a. There is a threefold distribution of Body 'among the three,' i. e., among those highest, lowest, and intermediate,—all living beings,—viz., the Body of merit, the Body of experience, and the Body of both: such is the meaning. Of these, a Body of merit belongs to the preeminent sages; a Body of experience, to Indra and others, and to things immovable, &c.; and a Body of both, to the royal sages. Here the division is [not exhaustive, but] into three, because of the preeminence [of these]; for,

b. He mentions also a fourth Body :2

न किं चिद्पनुशयिनः ॥ १२५ ॥

A fourth kind of Aph. 125. Not any one [of these], Body. moreover, is that of the apathetic.

a. That is to say: the Body which belongs to the ascetics is different from all these three; such as was that of Dattátreya, Jadabharata, and others; for they possessed bodies consisting of mere knowledge.³

THE SÁNKHYA APHORISMS.

The existence of Soul. Aph. 1. Soul is; for there is no proof that it is not.

a. Soul really is existent, generically; since we are aware of this, that 'I think;' because there is no evidence to defeat this. Therefore, all that is to be done is to discriminate it [from things in general]. Such is the meaning.¹

b. The discrimination of it he establishes by means of two proofs:²

Aph. 2. This [Soul,] is different from the Body, &c.; because of heterogeneousness, [or complete difference between the two].

The usage of language is evidence for this.

Aph. 3. Also because it [Soul,] is expressed by means of the sixth [or possessive,] case.

a. That is to say: Soul is different from Body, &c., also because the learned express it by the possessive case, in such examples as, 'This [is] my body,' 'This [is] my understanding;' for the possessive case would be unaccountable, if there were absolute non-difference' [between the Body, or the like, and the Soul, to which it is thus attributed as a possession].

b. But then, suppose that this, also, is like the expressions, 'The Soul's Thought' [Soul and Thought being identical], 'Ráhu's head' [the trunkless Ráhu being all head], 'The statue's body,' &c. To this he replies:²

न 'शिलापुचवडर्मियाहकमानवाधात् ॥ ४ ॥

Aph. 4. It is not as in the case of the statue; 4 because there is [there] a contradiction to the evidence which acquaints us with the thing.

a. Among innumerable grasses, trees, brutes, birds, men, &c., very few,—a man, a god, or the like,—are happy: such is the meaning.²

a. He rejects the opinion that Soul's aim is not the simple cessation of Pain, but this [cessation] tinctured with Pleasure:⁸

Pleasure, then it is not as you say; for there are two kinds [of things desired].

a. For we see, amongst men, quite a distinct aspiration : [the first,] 'May I be happy;' [the second,] 'May I not be miserable;' [and the latter is our conception of beatitude].¹

b. He ponders a doubt :2

निर्गु खत्मात्मनो ऽसङ्गलादिष्युतेः' ॥ १० ॥

A doubt. Aph. 10. The Soul [some one may suggest,] has no quality; for there is Scripture for its being unaccompanied, &c.

a. Therefore the cessation of Pain, indeed, [a property which does not belong to it,] cannot be Soul's aim : such is the meaning.⁴

b. He clears up this⁵ [doubt] :

³ शङ्कते॥

³ Anirnddha has असङ्गादिश्रतेः; Nágeisa, असङ्गल-श्रुतेः Ed.

^{*} • ऋतो न दुःखनिवृत्तिरपि पुरुषार्था घटत इत्यर्थः ॥

परधर्मत्वेऽपि तत्सिडिरविवेकात् ॥ ११ ॥

This cleared up. Aph. 11. Though it [the Pain,] be the property of something else, yet it exists in it [the Soul,] through non-discrimination.

a. Though qualities, viz., pleasure, pain, &c., belong [only] to the Mind, they exist, i.e., they abide, in the shape of a reflexion, in it, viz., in Soul, 'through nondiscrimination,' as the cause, owing to the conjunction of Nature with Soul: such is the meaning. And this has been set forth in the First Book.¹

b. The binding of Soul by the qualities [or fetters,] arises from non-discrimination: but from what does nondiscrimination arise? With reference to this, he says?

छनादिरविवेकोऽन्यथा दोषदयप्रसक्तेः ॥ १२ ॥

Two reasons why nondiscrimination must have been from eternity. Would present themselves.

a. For, had it a beginning, then, if [first,] it arose quite spontaneously, bondage might befall even the liberated;

े सुखदुःखादिगुुखानां चिन्नधर्मलेऽपि तचात्मनि सिडिः प्रतिबिम्बरूपेखावस्थितिरविवेकाचिमिन्ना-त्प्रकृतिपुरुषसंयोगद्वारेत्यर्थः । एतच प्रथमाध्याये प्रतिपादितम् ॥

ै ञ्चविवेकमूलः पुरुषे गुणवन्धोऽविवेकस्तु किं-मूलक इत्याकाङ्घायामाह ॥ and, if [secondly,] it were produced by Desert, &c., there would be a regressus in infinitum, inasmuch as we should have to search for another [previous instance of] nondiscrimination, to stand as the cause of [that] Desert, &c., also: such is the meaning.¹

b. And then, if it be without beginning, it must be everlasting. To this he replies:²

न नित्यः स्यादात्मवदन्यथानुच्छित्तिः ॥ १३ ॥

Non-discrimination, though from eternity, may be cut short. Aph. 13. It [non-discrimination,] cannot be everlasting [in the same manner] as the soul is; else, it could not be cut short, [as we affirm that it can be].

a. It is not everlasting, indivisible, and beginningless, in the same way as the soul is; but it is beginningless, in the shape of an on-flow [which may be stopped]. For, otherwise, the cutting short of a beginningless entity would, as is established by Scripture, be unfeasible, [though the beginningless antecedent non-entity of a given jar may be readily understood to terminate, on the production of the jar]. Such is the meaning.⁴

b. Having stated the cause of [Soul's] Bondage, he states the cause of Liberation :¹

प्रतिनियतकार एना श्यलमस्य ध्वान्तवत् ॥ १४ ॥

Bondage how destructible. Bondage how destructible. Aph. 14. It [Bondage,] is annihilable by the allotted cause, [viz., discrimination of Soul from Nature];

as darkness is [annihilable by the allotted cause, viz., Light].

This enforced. Aph. 15. Here, also, [viz., in the case of Bondage and Discrimination, as in the case of Darkness and Light,] there is allotment, [as is proved] both by positive and negative consociation;². [Liberation taking place where Discrimination is, and not where it is not].

a. He reminds [us] of what was mentioned in the first Book,³ viz., that Bondage cannot be innate, &c :⁴

' बन्धकारणमुक्ता मोश्रकारणमाह ॥

² Vide supra, p. 43, note 2, and p. 194, note 3. Prof. Cowell defines anwaya-vyatireka as 'affirmative and negative induction,' in his edition of Colebrooke's Essays, vol. i., p. 315, note 3. See also his translation of the Kusumánjali, pp. 7 and 23. Ed.

a. 'Bondage' here means the cause of Bondage, named the conjunction of pain. The rest is plain.²

b. But then, since liberation, also, from its being a product, is liable to destruction, Bondage should take place over again. To this he replies:³

न मुक्तस्य पुनर्वन्धयोगोऽप्यनावृत्तिष्ठुतेः ॥ १९ ॥

Bondage does not recur. Aph. 17. Further, Bondage does not again attach to the liberated; because there is Scripture⁴ for its non-recurrence.

Evidence of this. Aph. 18. Else, it [liberation,] would not be Soul's aim, [which it is].

a. He states the reason why this is not Soul's aim : ²

ञ्जविशेषापत्तिरुभयोः ॥ १९ ॥

Force of the evidence.

Aph. 19. What happened to both would be alike, [if liberation were perishable].

a. That is to say: there would be no difference between the two, the liberated and the bound; because of their being alike liable to future bondage; and, therefore, such [perishable emancipation] is not Soul's aim,³ [but emancipation final and complete].

b. But then, in that case, if you acknowledge that there is a distinction between the bond and the free, how is it ranyaka Upanishad, ii., 4, 5, and Šatapatha-bráhmana, xiv., 5, 4, 5. Aniruddha, in his comment on an Aphorism which soon follows, the twenty-third, quotes them correctly, with their ensuing context; a fact which suggests that my criticism on Váchaspati Miśra's quotation, ventured in the note above referred to, may be hasty. Ed.

मुक्तिरन्तरायध्वस्तेर्न परः ॥ २० ॥

The nature of liberation. Aph. 20. Liberation is nothing other than the removal³ of the obstacle [to the Soul's recognition of itself as free].

a. But then, in that case, since Bondage and Liberation are unreal, Liberation must be contradictory to the texts, &c., which set forth what is Soul's aim, [as some positive and real acquisition, not merely the removal of a screen]; to which he replies:⁴

तचाप्यविरोधः ॥ २१ ॥

An objection repelled.

Aph. 21. Even in that case, there is no contradiction.

a. That is to say: 'even in that case,' i.e., even if Liberation consists [only] in the removal of an obstacle, there is no contradiction in its being Soul's aim.'

b. But then, if Liberation be merely the removal of an obstacle, then it should be accomplished through mere hearing [of the error which stands in the way]; just as a piece of gold on one's neck, [which one has sought for in vain, while it was] withheld from one by ignorance [of the fact that it has been tied round one's neck with a string], is attained, [on one's hearing where it is]. Aph. 22. This attainment of Libera-Another objection retion, on the mere hearing of the truth,] is no necessity; for there are three sorts of those competent [to apprehend the truth; but not all are qualified to appropriate it, on merely hearing it].

Utility of other means besides hearing.

Aph. 23. Of others [viz., other means besides hearing], for the sake of confirmation, [there is need].

a. He speaks of these same other means :1

स्थिरमुखमासनमिति न नियमः ॥ २४ ॥

Formality in postures not imperative. Aph. 24. There is no [absolute] necessity that what is steady and promoting ease should be a [particular] posture, [such as any of those referred to in Book III., $\S34$].

a. That is to say: there is no necessity that a 'posture' should be the 'lotus-posture,' or the like; because whatever is steady and promotes ease is a [suitable] 'posture.'²

b. He states the principal means 3 [of Concentration] :

ध्यानं निर्विषयं मनः ॥ २५ ॥

The efficient means of Aph. 25. Mind without an object is Meditation.

a. That is to say: what Internal Organ is void of any modification, that is 'Meditation,' i.e., Concentration, in the shape of exclusion of the modifications of Intellect: by reason of the identity [here,] of effect and cause, the word 'cause' is employed for 'effect.' For it will be declared how Meditation effects this¹ [exclusion of the modifications of Intellect].

 δ . But then, since Soul is alike, whether there be Concentration or Non-concentration, what have we to do with Concentration? Having pondered this doubt, he clears it up:²

sion [in the one case,] of the tinge [of reflected pain which exists in the other case].

a. But how can there exist a tinge in that which is unassociated [with anything whatever, as Soul is alleged to be]? To this he replies:³

a. That is to say: though there is not a real tinge in that which is unassociated [with tincture, or anything else], still there is, as it were, a tinge; hence the tinge is treated as simply a reflexion, by those who discriminate the tinge¹ [from the Soul, which it delusively seems to belong to].

The ancient dogma on this point.

Aph. 30. It is by the exclusion of dissolution² and distraction, say the teachers.

a. That is to say: through the removal, by means of Meditation, &c., of the Mind's condition of [being dissolved in] Sleep, and condition of [waking] Certainty, &c., there takes place also the exclusion of the tingeing of Soul by the condition; because, on the exclusion of any [real] object, there is the exclusion also of its reflexion: so say the ancient teachers.³

b. He states that there is no compulsion that Meditation, &c., should take place in caves and such places:

a. That is to say: Meditation, or the like, results simply 'from tranquillity of Mind.' Therefore, such a place as a cave is not indispensable for it.'

b. The discussion of Liberation is completed. Now, with an eye to the unchangeableness of Soul, he handles compendiously the cause of the world:²

Nature the material of the world. Nature the material defined for the control of the world. Material for the is Scripture [to the effect] that the others are products.

a. That is to say: suitableness to act as material implies the possession of qualities, and the being associable : [and,] by reason of the absence of both of these, Soul, though eternal, [and, therefore, no product,] cannot serve as material¹

b. But then, since, from such Scriptural texts as, ' Many creatures have been produced from Soul,"2 we may gather the fact that Soul is a cause, the assertions of an illusory creation, &c., ought to be accepted. Having pondered this adverse suggestion, he replies:⁸

a. That is to say: the various views, in regard to Soul's being a cause, which are conceivable are, all, opposed to Scripture; therefore, the lowest of the bad reasoners, and others, who are accepters thereof,¹ have no knowledge of the nature of Soul. Hence it is to be understood that those, also, [e.g., the Naiyáyikas,] who assert that Soul is the substance of the qualities Pleasure, Pain, &c., are quite illogical; these, also, have no correct knowledge of Soul. And, if it be asserted that Soul is a cause [of the world], just as the sky is the recipient cause of the clouds, &c., [and stands, towards it, in the relation of a cause, in so far as, without the room afforded by it, these could not exist], then we do not object to that; for, what we deny is only that there is transformation² [of Soul, as material, into the world, as product].

पूरुषबहुत्वं व्यवस्थातः ॥ ४५ ॥

Multeity of Soul proved from the Veda. Aph. 45. The multeity of Soul [is proved] by the distribution [announced by the Veda itself].

a. That is to say: the multeity of Soul is proved, absolutely, by the distribution of Bondage and Emancipation mentioned in such Scriptural texts as, 'Whoso understand this, these are immortal, while others experience only sorrow.'^{2 3}

b. But then, the distribution of Bondage and Liberation may be through the difference of adjunct. To this he replies:⁴

' नन्वियं व्यवस्था तदा घटेत यदि पुरुषबहुत्वं स्यात् । तदेव त्वात्माद्वैतश्रुतिबाधितमित्याश-ङ्याह ॥

Unity excluded by the supposition of Souls.

Aph. 46. If [you acknowledge] an adjunct [of Soul], then, on its being established, there is duality, [upsetting don in $\delta 44$]

a. But then, the adjuncts, moreover, consist of 'Ignorance,' [which, according to the Vedánta, is no reality]; so that by these there is no detriment to [the Vedántic dogma of] non-duality. With reference to this doubt, he says:²

दाभ्यामपि प्रमागविरोधः ॥ ४९ ॥

The Vedánta cannot evade non-duality.

Aph. 47. Even by the two the authority is contradicted.

a. That is to say: even by acknowledging the two, viz., Soul and Ignorance, a contradiction is constituted to the text, [which is alleged as] the authority for non-duality.³

b. He states another couple of objections, also:4

* अपरमपि दूषणदयमाह ॥

The establishment of the Vedánta tenet implies a contradiction.

Aph. 48. The primâ facie view [of the Vedánta] is not [to be allowed any force, as an objection]; because, by [admitting] two, [viz., Soul and Ignorance], there is no opposition [to our own dualistic theory of Soul and Nature]: and the subsequent [dogma, viz., that one single Soul is the only reality, is not to be allowed]; because of the non-existence of a proof, [which, if it did exist, would, along with Soul, constitute a duality].

a. But then, Soul will be demonstrated by its self-manifestation. To this he replies:¹

प्रकाशतस्तत्तिज्ञौ कर्मकर्तृविरोधः ॥ ४९ ॥

Self-manifestation contradictory. Aph. 49. [And.] in its [Soul's,] being demonstrated by the light [of itself, as you Vedántís say it is], there is the [unreconciled] opposition of patient and agent [in one, which is a contradiction].

a. That is to say: if Soul be demonstrated by the light which Soul consists of, there is the 'opposition of patient and agent'^s [in one].

6. But then, there is no contradiction [here,] between patient and agent; because it [the Soul], through the property of light which is lodged in it, can, itself, furnish Illuminating function of Soul.

Aph. 50. This [Soul], in the shape of Thought, discrepant from the non-intelligent, reveals the non-intelligent.

a. But then, in that case, if duality be established in accordance with proofs, &c., what becomes of the Scriptural text declaring non-duality? To this he replies:⁴

a. He tells us that the assertors of non-duality are to be shunned, not only for the reason above mentioned, but, also, because of the non-existence of evidence to convince us that the world is unreal:¹

जगत्तत्यत्वमदुष्टकारणजन्यत्वाह्यधकाभावात् ॥ ५२॥

The world's reality irrefragable.

Aph. 52. The world is real; because it results from an unobjectionable cause, and because there is [in Scripture,] no

a. We see, in the world, that no reality belongs to dreamobjects, or to the [fancied] yellowness of [invariably white] conch-shells, and the like; inasmuch as these are results of the internal organ, &c., when [not normal, but] injured by [i.e., under the injurious influence of] Sleep,² &c.: and this is not [the state of things] in the [waking] Universe, in which Mind is the first,³ ⁴ [according to Book I., § 71].

a. That is to say: since, through the aforesaid reasons, it is impossible that the unreal should come into existence, what does come into existence, or is manifested, is what really existed [previously,] in a subtile form.²

b. Though [it is declared that] the being the agent and the being the experiencer belong to diverse subjects, he asserts the distribution [of agency to Self-consciousness, and of experience to Soul,] by two aphorisms:⁸

छहंकारः कर्ता न पुरुषः ॥ ५४ ॥

The real agent who.

Aph. 54. Self-consciousness, not Soul, is the agent.

चिदवसाना भुक्तिस्तन्कर्मार्जितत्वात् ॥ ५५ ॥

Experience is got rid of when.

Aph. 55. Experience ceases at [discrimination of Soul, [as being quite distinct from Nature]; since it arises from its [Soul's,] Desert, [which is not, really, Soul's, but which, while Non-discrimination lasts, is made over to Soul; just as the fruits of the acts of a king's ministers are made over to the king].

a. He shows the reason for what was stated before, viz., that cessation of action does not result from enterings into the world of Brahmá:1

चन्द्रादिलोकेऽप्यावृत्तिर्निमिन्नसङ्गावात् ॥ ५६ ॥

Paradise no security against transmigration.

Aph. 56. Even in the world of the moon, &c., there is return [to mundane existence]; because of there really being a cause [of such return].

a. 'A cause,' viz., Non-discrimination, Desert, &c."

b. But then, through the counsels of the persons dwelling in these various [supermundane] worlds, there ought to be no return [to mundane existence]. To this he replies:4

a. But, in that case, what becomes of the text that there is no return from the world of Brahmá? To this he replies:²

पारम्पर्येण तत्सिद्वौ विमुक्तिप्रुतिः ॥ ५৮ ॥

A salvo for a Scriptural text. Aph. 58. There is Scripture [declaratory] of Emancipation, [on going to the world of Brahmá]; this [Emancipation] being effected [more readily in that world than in this, but only] by intermediacy [of the appropriate means].

a. He alleges the Scriptural text of Soul's going [to the locality where it is to experience], even though it be all-filling,³ [and can, therefore, have no place into which to move]:

a. For, as Space, though it is all-pervading, is spoken of as moving to some particular place, in consequence of its conjunction with an adjunct, such as a jar, [when we say 'the space occupied by the jar is moved to the place to which the jar is carried '], just so is it¹ [here].

δ. He expounds the statement, that the site of experience [the body,] is formed through the superintendence of the experiencer,² [Soul]:

ञ्चनधिष्ठितस्य पूतिभावप्रसङ्गान्नं तत्सिडिः ॥ ६० ॥

The Body's existence dependent on Soul. Aph. 60. This [constitution of a body] is not accomplished in the case of what is [organic matter] not superintended [by Soul]; because we find putrefaction [in organic matter where Soul is absent].

a. But then, let the construction of a site of experience [or a body,] for Experiencers [i.e., Souls,] take place without any superintendence at all, through Desert. To this he replies :¹

Desert not the maker of the Body. Aph. 61. If you say that [independently of any superintendence,] it is through Desert [that a Body is formed, it is not so]; since what is unconnected [with the matter to be operated upon] is incompetent thereto; as is the case with [unapplied] water, &c., in respect of a plant.

a. That is to say: because it is impossible that Desert, which is not directly conjoined with the semen and other [elements of the Body], should operate through Soul, in the construction of the Body, &c.; just as it is for water, &c., unconnected with the seed, to operate through tillage, &c., in the production of a plant.⁸

b. According to the system of the Vaiseshikas and others, it is settled that Soul is the superintendent, [in the construction of the Body], in virtue of its being conjoined with Desert. But he tells us, that, in his own doctrine, since Desert, &c., are not properties of Soul, the Soul cannot, through these, be the cause' [of the Body]:

निर्गू खत्वात्त दसंभवादहं कारधर्मा होते ॥ ६२ ॥

Recessor for this. Recessor for this. Aph. 62. For this is impossible [viz., that the Soul should, through its Desert, &c., be the cause of Body]; because it has no qualities for these [viz., Desert, &c.,] are properties of Self-consciousness, [not of Soul].

a. And so, in our opinion, it is settled that Soul superintends [in the causing of the Body,] quite directly, by conjunction simply, without reference to anything intermediate: such is the import.²

b. But, if Soul be all-pervading, then the limitedness of the living soul, which is set forth in Scripture, is unfounded. To repel this doubt, he says:³

' वैशेषिकादिनयेनादृष्टस्य संबन्धघटकतयात्म-नोऽधिष्ठातृत्वं स्थापितम् । स्वसिद्धान्ते लदृष्टादी-नामात्मधर्मत्वाभावात्तद्द्वारा भोक्रुईतुत्वमेव न सं-भवतीत्याह ॥

Soul how limited and milimited.

Aph. 63. The nature of a living soul belongs to that which is qualified, [not to Soul devoid of qualities, as is proved]

a. To be a living soul is the being possessed of the vital airs; and this is the character of the soul distinguished by personality, not of pure Soul,² [which is unlimited].

b. Desiring, now, to set forth the difference between the products of Mind [or the Great Principle,] and of Self-consciousness, he first states the products of Self-consciousness:³

छहंकारकर्चधीना कार्यसिडिर्नेघराधीना प्रमा-र्णामावात् ॥ ६४ ॥

by Scripture and the Legal Institutes, the creative and the destructive agencies of Brahmá and Rudra¹ [respectively], owing to their adjunct, Self-consciousness,⁸ [or personality].

b. But then, grant that Self-consciousness is the maker of the others, still who is the maker of Self-consciousness? To this he replies :³

अदृष्टोङ्गतिवत्समानत्वम् ॥ ६५ ॥

The real agent whence.

Aph. 65. It is the same as in the arising of Desert.

a. Just as, at the creations, &c., the manifestation of Desert, which sets Nature energizing, results solely from the particular time,—since, if we were to suppose other Desert as the instigator of this, we should have an infinite regress,—just so Self-consciousness arises from time alone, as the cause; but there is not another maker thereof, also: thus, the two [cases] are alike: such is the meaning.*

Orthodox recognition of Brahmá, Śwa, and Vishnu, put forward. Aph. 66. The rest is from Mind, [the Great Principle].

a. What is other than the products of Self-consciousness [or personality], viz., Creation, &c., that, viz., Preservation, &c., results from the Great Principle alone; because, inasmuch as it consists of pure Goodness, having no Conceit, Passion, &c., it is moved solely by benevolence towards others: such is the meaning. And by this aphorism is established the character, as Preserver, of Vishnu, owing to the Great Principle, as adjunct¹² [of the soul, which, without adjunct, would neither create, preserve, nor destroy (see § 64)].

b. It has been stated, before, that the relation of Nature and Soul, as experienced and experiencer, is caused by Non-discrimination [of the one from the other]. Here, what is Non-discrimination, itself, caused by?

With reference to this doubt, he states that all philosophers reject, in common, the doubt whether we should have an infinite regress, on the supposition of a stream of Non-discrimination; because this [regress] is calid;¹ [since an infinite regress which is in conformity with the truth is no sound cause of objection]:

In the foregoing pages, reference has been made, again and again, to the Serampore edition of the Sánkhya-pravachana-bháshya published in 1821. Of the imperfections of that edition some notion may be formed from the facts, that it gives, as if they were commentary, no fewer than twenty-six of the Aphorisms, that it wholly omits six others, repeats two, curtails or mangles several, and, more than once, represents, as Aphorisms, fragments of Vijnána's exposition. Still, if great liberties have not been taken with his materials by the pandit who prepared it for the press, it may be considered as possessing the value of an inferior manuscript. Hence it has been thought worth while to extract from it, as below, its principal peculiar readings of the Aphorisms, over and above those already remarked on.
